Mr. REED. And that is precisely what the gentleman is now doing. He has abandoned his idea of passing the Senate bill, technically as a Senate bill and offers the same words in an amendment in the second degree. That does not change the status of the House bill. The House bill then, if we adopt the identical language of the Senate bill, will go to the Senate as a House bill and must receive anew the action of the Senate.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of keeping the record clear, I would suggest that the proposition before the House, now proposed to be amended by the Committee of the Whole, is in itself an amendment. Therefore we have an amendment now pending to the original bill, which was sent to the committee and reported back to the House. Then the Committee of the Whole proposed an amendment thereto, and now, if the gentleman's proposition prevails, we will have an amendment in the third degree.

Mr. CRAIN. And a substitute for a substitute proposed by the committee.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I think as it stands now there are as many amendments existing as are admissible under the rules. Two amendments have been already proposed.

The SPEAKER. As the Chair understands there is but one pending.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Then I was misinformed. I understood that the recommendation of the committee was to strike out all after the enacting clause; and another amendment was a recommendation by the Committee of the Whole to insert something else. So we would have an amendment pending which is to strike out all after the enacting clause, and an amendment to that, and now it has been further proposed to amend that amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman that what took place in committee as to the amendment to the amendment is not a matter for consideration in the House. That committee reported back to the House and they recommend that the bill pass with this amendment.

Mr. REED. And that disposes of the committee amendment.

Mr. MCMILLIN. If the proposition of the gentleman from Maryland can be accomplished—I mean if the substitution can be made which the gentleman suggests—that provision of the rules which requires a bill requiring an appropriation, or making one, to have its first consideration in Committee of the Whole, is abrogated. You obviate that by going on and considering a bill in committee which does not so require, report it back to the House, and substitute for it in the House one that makes an appropriation and which, under the rules, must have its first consideration in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, that recalls a very famous scene in this House in which an entire tariff bill was modified after consideration in Committee of the Whole. Mr. DAWES, then chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, upon bringing the bill into the House, proposed a substitute be adopted for the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole; and that substitute passed and finally became law.

Mr. CRAIN. In the House?

Mr. REED. Passed in the House.

Mr. CRAIN. Was it not in the Senate?

Mr. REED. Mr. DAWES was then chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. They have no Committee on Ways and Means in the Senate.

The SPEAKER. It seems to the Chair that where the Committee of the Whole, as the Chair understands it has in this case, has reported back a bill with the recommendation that it do pass, with an amendment, that it is competent to amend that amendment. Of course, if the amendment offered were of such a character that it must have its consideration in Committee of the Whole——

Mr. MCMILLIN. That is the point.

The SPEAKER. That point might be made upon its consideration——

Mr. MCMILLIN. That is the point I made.

The SPEAKER. But not on the right to offer it.

Mr. RAYNER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that I intend to move to strike out the provision making an appropriation.

Mr. MCMILLIN. If I understand the gentleman from Maryland now, he proposes to embrace in his motion a motion to strike out and insert a bill which carries an appropriation. Now, the point which I made, and which the Chair has suggested, would probably stand in the way of the gentleman; so that he could not do indirectly that which could not be done directly, which is to pass a bill carrying an appropriation without consideration in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. RAYNER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCKRAN. I desire the attention of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. RAYNER] for a moment.

Mr. RAYNER. If I can hear the gentleman I will give it to him.

Mr. COCKRAN. I am not at my best yet, but I will take care that the gentleman hears me. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCKRAN. What would be the status of the bill if this motion be adopted? If the motion of the gentleman from Maryland be adopted, does that exhaust his power of amendment, or would he then have the power, after its adoption, to move the substitution of the bill considered in the Committee of the Whole?

Mr. CRAIN. No.

Mr. COCKRAN. I want to facilitate the passage of the bill as it comes from the Committee of the Whole, and I do not want to do anything that may close the door.

Mr. RAYNER. I ask the Speaker to rule on the motion, and if he says that I can not do that I will withdraw my motion.

The SPEAKER. What was the point of the gentleman?

Mr. COCKRAN. The point is this, Mr. Speaker: Assuming that this motion that is now pending should be declared in order, will that exhaust the power of the gentleman from Maryland to move an amendment, or would he have power, in the event of its adoption, to move to substitute the bill considered in the Committee of the Whole?

The SPEAKER. Until the previous question is ordered the matter is open to amendment. Only a certain number of amendments could be pending at the same time, but as disposed of from time to time by voting them up or down, further amendments could be in order.

Mr. COCKRAN. Then I understand if this substitute be adopted now it will still be competent for the gentleman from Maryland to move to substitute for the bill so substituted the bill considered in the Committee of the Whole?

Mr. REED. No; because that is an amendment for which the Senate bill is to be substituted by this identical motion.

Mr. COCKRAN. Now, that is where the learned doctors differ and neophites like myself are confounded.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would prefer to pass on questions as they arise. What is the motion of the gentleman from Maryland?

Mr. RAYNER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RAYNER. I desire to know from the Chair if the motion should prevail to substitute the text of the bill, with section 8 stricken from it, whether I could afterwards offer a motion to substitute for that the bill which has passed the Committee of the Whole, because if I can not, I will withdraw the motion to substitute the Senate bill. But if I can do that, I will insist upon the motion; and I respectfully ask the Chair to rule if I would have the right to do that?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not exactly catch the point.

Mr. RAYNER. If the motion should prevail to substitute the text of the bill that I sent to the Speaker's desk, which is virtually the Senate bill, and afterwards I should move to substitute in its place the bill which has passed the Committee of the Whole with its amendment, would that be in order?

Mr. CRAIN. That is a substitute for a substitute.

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. Before the Speaker rules on that point I desire to make a single suggestion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. If the proposition made by the gentleman from Maryland be adopted——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi will suspend for a moment. The Chair can not understand the points gentlemen make on the floor on account of the confusion.

Mr. RAYNER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the motion, and I now call the previous question on the amendments and the bill to its engrossment and third reading.

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Speaker, I understood from the gentleman from Maryland that I was to have an opportunity to at least have my amendment read.

Mr. RAYNER. I do not object to that if the House does not.

The SPEAKER. If the demand for the previous question is withdrawn, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. RAYNER. I withdraw the demand for that purpose.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Add the following as an additional section:

"SEC. —. That whenever at the beginning of an epidemic of yellow fever in any city or town in any State or Territory of the United States the mayor or other constituted authority of such city or town applies to the Secretary of the Treasury for transportation for persons who have not been exposed to infection, but who by reason of poverty are unable to leave the neighborhood of infection, it shall be the duty of said Secretary, under such regulations and restrictions as he deems necessary to prevent the spread of yellow fever, to provide such transportation for such persons to such point as in his judgment they will be free from danger of infection or contagion."

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Speaker, can I have an opportunity to say a word about this amendment?

Mr. RAYNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman two minutes for an explanation.

Mr. DINGLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Has this been offered as an amendment to the bill or simply read for information?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is trying to ascertain that. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. RAYNER] yields to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. DINGLEY. But does he yield for any other purpose than debate?

Mr. RAYNER. I have yielded the gentleman from Alabama two minutes.

Mr. DINGLEY. For debate only?

Mr. RAYNER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOUTELLE. But the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. TURPIN] has offered an amendment. Does the gentleman from Maryland yield to him for that purpose?

Mr. RAYNER. No; I yield to him for the purpose of explaining his amendment.

Mr. BOUTELLE. But you have got either to let this amendment in or keep it out.

Mr. RAYNER. Well, we will keep it out.

Mr. DINGLEY. Will the gentleman from Maryland let us know whether he yields to the gentleman from Alabama for the purpose of offering this amendment?

Mr. RAYNER. I do not.

Mr. TURPIN. But the gentleman has already yielded.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I understood the gentleman from Maryland to yield only for the purpose of having the amendment read; not for the purpose of having it offered and pending.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from Maryland now yields again.

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Maryland can not take me off the floor. He has yielded me two minutes, and I have the floor.

The SPEAKER. The demand for the previous question being withdrawn, the gentleman from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. TURPIN. I simply want to state, Mr. Speaker, that there ought not to be any objection to this amendment, which is offered as an additional section to the bill. It provides for the prevention of the spread of yellow fever after it has once reached our shores. There is only one known way at this time to prevent the spread of yellow fever; that is, by depopulating the cities and towns and carrying the inhabitants to a certain altitude, I forget the exact height at this moment, but there are many places throughout the United States of such altitude that there is no danger of the spread of the disease. The amendment does not affect the bill in any particular; it simply authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury, upon the demand or the request of any mayor or other properly constituted officer of any town or city, to provide transportation for such persons as are unable, on account of poverty, to leave the city or town to avoid the disease.

Mr. DINGLEY. At the expense of the Government?

Mr. TURPIN. I hope, Mr. Speaker, there will be no objection to this amendment. I would have introduced the proposition as a separate bill long ago, only that I was assured by gentlemen on both sides, gentlemen in favor of this quarantine bill and gentlemen who were opposed to it, that there would be no objection to this amendment. This is the first and only amendment that I have offered to the bill and I trust that nobody will object.

Mr. DAVIS. But will not that very transportation spread the disease?

Mr. TURPIN. Not at all; I will inform the gentleman that persons who are financially able to leave a city or town always do so on the first news of a case of yellow fever being in their midst. The governors of North Carolina and West Virginia some years ago sent word to the States of Florida and Alabama that they would welcome with open arms not only the refugees, but even those who had the fever.

Mr. DAVIS. This bill comprehends yellow fever, cholera, and other infectious diseases.

Mr. TURPIN. But it makes no provision to prevent the spread of this disease. The bill makes provision, I admit, so far as the wisdom of this House has been able to do so, to prevent the introduction of yellow fever; but there is no provision in the bill to prevent the spread of the fever after it has been once landed in the United States. This disease is not indigenous to the United States. It always comes from abroad; and if we can prevent the spread of it by depopulating the cities, which is the only way known——

Mr. DAVIS. Would not your amendment carry the smallpox to Leadville, Colo.?

Mr. TURPIN. It applies only to the yellow fever; and if the gentleman had listened to the reading of the amendment he would not have asked such a question. I call the previous question on the amendment.

Mr. RAYNER. I did not yield for the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. RAYNER] can not withdraw the demand for the previous question and then parcel out the floor at his pleasure.

Mr. RAYNER. I yielded in order that the amendment might be read and that the gentleman might have two minutes to explain it. I did not yield any further than that.

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Speaker, I am entitled to an hour, am I not?

Mr. RAYNER. No, sir; you are entitled to two minutes, which you have occupied.

Mr. TURPIN. I was addressing the Chair—not the gentleman from Maryland.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland states that he yielded to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. TURPIN] only for the purpose of having the amendment read——

Mr. TURPIN. Then I will make another explanation——

Mr. RAYNER. I object.

Mr. TURPIN. The gentleman from Maryland said that he would not object to my amendment. I want no crawfish support—push one way and look the other. [Laughter.]

Mr. RAYNER. I demand the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. RAYNER] demands the previous question on the amendment and on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. TURPIN. Am I not entitled to an hour, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is not. The gentleman from Maryland, being entitled to the floor, yielded two minutes to the gentleman from Alabama. The Chair has indulged the gentleman from Alabama beyond the two minutes.

Mr. TURPIN. I hope the House will indulge me so that I may state exactly what the gentleman from Maryland said to me.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, there has been considerable confusion here since the last motion was made. What amendment is pending?

The SPEAKER. The amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Has the gentleman from Maryland withdrawn his proposed amendment to the amendment?

The SPEAKER. The Chair so understands.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Then I desire to have a separate vote on the amendment of which I have already given notice.

The SPEAKER. The question now is simply on the demand for the previous question.

Mr. BOUTELLE. If the previous question be ordered, will it interfere with my ability to obtain a recorded vote on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York?

The SPEAKER. There is only one amendment pending, that reported from Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Does the Chair hold that all the amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole must be voted upon in a block; that the question can not be divided?

The SPEAKER. There is only one amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole, an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert another proposition.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Then the only possible way for me to obtain a vote on the amendment of which I gave notice will be to move at the proper time to recommit with an amendment. I give notice of that motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland demands the previous question on the pending amendment and on the bill to its engrossment and third reading.

Mr. TURPIN. I hope that the previous question may be voted down, so that I may get in my amendment.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Will the ordering of the previous question cut off the right to move to recommit after the third reading of the bill?

The SPEAKER. It will not.

Mr. TURPIN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. If the previous question should be voted down, will I not then have an opportunity to have a vote upon my amendment?

The SPEAKER. If the previous question should be voted down amendments would be in order.

The question being taken on ordering the previous question, there were—ayes 114, noes 26.

Mr. ANTONY. No quorum.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. ANTONY and Mr. RAYNER were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 138, noes 29.

So the previous question was ordered.

Mr. REILLY. I desire to make a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. That is not in order at this stage. The previous question has simply been ordered on the amendment and on the bill to its engrossment and third reading.

Mr. BARWIG. Is it in order now to have the bill read as amended?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. BARWIG. I think that had better be done, so as to give members an opportunity to vote intelligently.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BARWIG. I withdraw the demand.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time.

The question recurred on the passage of the bill.

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Speaker, I move to recommit the bill with the instructions I send to the desk; and on that motion demand the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the bill (H. R. 9757) be recommitted to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, with instructions to report to the House forthwith the following substitute therefor, namely:

"That it shall be unlawful for any merchant ship or other vessel from any foreign port or place to enter any port of the United States except in accordance with the provisions of this act and with such rules and regulations of State and municipal health authorities as may be made in pursuance of, or consistent with, this act; and any such vessel which shall enter, or attempt to enter, a port of the United States in violation thereof shall forfeit to the United States a sum, to be awarded in the discretion of the court, not exceeding $5,000, which shall be a lien upon said vessel, to be recovered by proceedings in the proper district court of the United States. In all such proceedings the United States district attorney for such district shall appear on behalf of the United States; and all such proceedings shall be conducted in accordance with the rules and laws governing cases of seizure of vessels for violation of the revenue laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. That any vessel at any foreign port clearing for any port or place in the United States shall be required to obtain from the consul, vice-consul, or other consular officer of the United States at the port of departure, or from the medical officer where such officer has been detailed or appointed by the President for that purpose, a bill of health, in duplicate, in the form prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, setting forth the sanitary history and condition of said vessel, and that it has in all respects complied with the rules and regulations in such cases prescribed for securing the best sanitary condition of the said vessel, its cargo, passengers, and crew; and said consular or medical officer is required, before granting such duplicate bill of health, to be satisfied that the matters and things therein stated are true; and for his services in that behalf he shall be entitled to demand and receive such fees as shall by lawful regulation be allowed, to be accounted for as is required in other cases.

"The President, in his discretion, is authorized to detail any medical officer of the Government or appoint any other medical man to serve in the office of the consul at any foreign port or ports during the prevalence of any dangerous, contagious, or infectious epidemic in such port or ports for the purpose of furnishing information and making the inspection and giving the bills of health hereinbefore mentioned. Any vessel clearing and sailing from any such port without such bill of health, and entering any port of the United States, shall forfeit to the United States not more than $5,000, the amount to be determined by the court, which shall be a lien on the same, to be recovered by proceedings in the proper district court of the United States. In all such proceedings the United States district attorney for such district shall appear on behalf of the United States; and all such proceedings shall be conducted in accordance with the rules and laws governing cases of seizure of vessels for violation of the revenue laws of the United States.

"SEC. 3. That the Supervising Surgeon-General of the Marine Hospital Service shall, immediately after this aat takes effect, examine the quarantine regulations of all State and municipal boards of health, and shall under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, coöperate with and aid State and municipal boards of health in the execution and enforcement of the rules and regulations of such boards and in the execution and enforcement of the rules and regulations made by the Secretary of the Treasury to prevent the introduction of contagious or infectious diseases into the United States from foreign countries, and into one State or Territory or the District of Columbia from another State or Territory or the District of Columbia; and all rules and regulations made by the Secretary of the Treasury shall operate uniformly and in no manner discriminate against any port or place; and at such ports and places within the United States as have no quarantine regulations under State or municipal authority, where such regulations are, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury, necessary to prevent the introduction of contagious or infectious diseases into the United States from foreign countries, or into one State or Territory or the District of Columbia, from another State or Territory or the District of Columbia, and at such ports and places within the United States where quarantine regulations exist under the authority of the State or municipality which, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury, are not sufficient to prevent the introduction of such diseases into the United States, or into one State or Territory or the District of Columbia from another State or Territory or the District of Columbia, the Secretary of the Treasury shall, if in his judgment it is necessary and proper, make such additional rules and regulations as are necessary to prevent the introduction of such diseases into the United States from foreign countries, or into one State or Territory or the District of Columbia or from another State or Territory or the District of Columbia, and when said rules and regulations have been made they shall be promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury and enforced by the sanitary authorities of the States and municipalities, where the State or municipal authorities will undertake to execute and enforce them; but if the State or municipal authorities shall fail or refuse to enforce said rules and regulations the President shall execute and enforce the same and adopt such measures as in his judgment shall be necessary to prevent the introduction or spread of such diseases, and may detail or appoint officers for that purpose. The Secretary of the Treasury shall make such rules and regulations as are necessary to be observed by persons, shippers, and common or other carriers of persons or goods either at the port or place of departure or shipment for the United States of any persons or goods or on the journey, voyage, or transport to the United States of any persons or goods, or at any port or place at or from which in the opinion of the President contagious or infectious diseases exist, or there is danger that infected goods or persons are likely to enter the United States, to secure the best sanitary condition of such persons, goods, and any medium of transport thereof; which shall be published and communicated to and enforced by the consular offices of the United States. None of the penalties herein imposed shall attach to any vessel or owner or officer thereof until a copy of this act, with the rules and regulations made in pursuance thereof, has been posted up in the office of the consul or other consular officer of the United States for ten days, in the port from which said vessel sailed; and the certificate of such consul or consular officer over his official signature shall be competent evidence of such posting in any court of the United States.

"SEC. 4. That it shall be the duty of the Supervising Surgeon-General of the Marine Hospital Service, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, to perform all the duties in respect to quarantine and quarantine regulations which are provided for by this act, and to obtain information of the sanitary condition of foreign ports and places from which contagious and infectious diseases are or may be imported into the United States, and to this end the consular officer of the United States at such ports and places as shall be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury shall make to the Secretary of the Treasury weekly reports of the sanitary condition of the ports and places at which they are respectively stationed, according to such forms as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall also obtain, through all sources accessible, including State and municipal and sanitary authorities throughout the United States, weekly reports of the sanitary condition of ports and places within the United States, and shall prepare, publish, and transmit to collectors of customs and to State and municipal health officers and other sanitarians weekly abstracts of the consular sanitary reports and other pertinent information received by him; and shall also, as far as he may be able, by means of the voluntary coöperation of State and municipal authorities, of public associations, and private persons, procure information relating to the climatic and other conditions affecting the public health, and shall make an annual report of his operations to Congress, with such recommendations as he may deem important to the public interests.

"SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time issue to the consular officers of the United States and to the medical officers serving at any foreign port, and otherwise make publicly known, the rules and regulations made by him, to be used and complied with by vessels in foreign ports, for securing the best sanitary condition of such vessels, their cargoes, passengers, and crew, before their departure for any port in the United States, and in the course of the voyage; and all such other rules and regulations as shall be observed in the inspection of the same on the arrival thereof at any quarantine station at the port of destination, and for the disinfection and isolation of the same, and the treatment of cargo and persons on board, so as to prevent the introduction of cholera, yellow fever, or other contagious or infectious disease; and it shall not be lawful for any vessel to enter said port to discharge its cargo, or land its passengers, except upon a certificate of the health officer at such quarantine station certifying that said rules and regulations have in all respects been observed and complied with, as well on his part as on the part of the said vessel and its master, in respect to the same and to its cargo, passengers, and crew; and the master of every such vessel shall produce and deliver to the collector of customs at said port of entry, together with the other papers of the vessel, the said bills of health required to be obtained at the port of departure and the certificate herein required to be obtained from the health officer at the port of entry; and that the bills of health herein prescribed shall be considered as part of the ship's papers, and when duly certified to by the proper consular or other officer of the United States, over his official signature and seal, shall be accepted as evidence of the statements therein contained in any court of the United States.

"SEC. 6. That on the arrival of an infected vessel at any port not provided with proper facilities for treatment of the same, the Secretary of the Treasury may remand said vessel, at its own expense, to the nearest national or other quarantine station where accommodations and appliances are provided for the necessary disinfection and treatment of the vessel, passengers, and cargo; and after treatment of any infected vessel at a national quarantine station, and after certificate shall have been given by the United States quarantine officer at said station that the vessel, cargo, and passengers are each and all free from infectious disease, or danger of conveying the same, said vessel shall be admitted to entry to any port of the United States named within the certificate. But at any ports where sufficient quarantine provision has been made by State or local authorities the Secretary of the Treasury may direct vessels bound for said ports to undergo quarantine at said State or local station.

"SEC. 7. That whenever it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the President that by reason of the existence of cholera or other infectious or contagious diseases in a foreign country there is serious danger of the introduction of the same into the United States, and that notwithstanding the quarantine defense this danger is so increased by the introduction of persons or property from such country that a suspension of the right to introduce the same is demanded in the interest of the public health, the President shall have power to prohibit, in whole or in part, the introduction of persons and property from such countries or places as he shall designate and for such period of time as he may deem necessaay.

"SEC. 8. There shall be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of one million dollars, to be expended, or so much of the same as may be necessary from time to time, under the direction of the President and according to his discretion, to meet emergencies arising in the execution of the provisions of this act.

"SEC. 9. That whenever the proper authorities of a State shall surrender to the United States the use of the buildings and disinfecting apparatus at a State quarantine station, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be authorized to receive them and to pay a reasonable compensation to the State for their use.

"SEC. 10. That the act entitled 'An act to prevent the introduction of infectious and contagious diseases into the United States, and to establish a National Board of Health,' approved March 3, 1879, be and the same is hereby repealed; and the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to obtain possession of any property, furniture, books, papers, or records belonging to the United States, which are not in the possession of an officer of the Treasury Department which were formerly in the use of the National Board of Health or any officer or employé thereof.

Mr. WISE. I would like to state that the committee is opposed to the adoption of this motion.

Mr. BURROWS. I object to debate.

Mr. REILLY. I demand the previous question on the motion to recommit with instructions.

The SPEAKER proceeded to submit the question.

Mr. REILLY. I ask unanimous consent simply——

The SPEAKER. The question is not debatable.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 89, noes 6.

So the previous question was ordered.

Mr. COCKRAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCKRAN. The substitute proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. REILLY], on his motion to recommit with instructions to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to report a certain substitute, carries an appropriation of $1,000,000. I want to know, under the parliamentary procedure, whether a point of order may now be made against the proposition, in view of the fact that the substitute has not been considered in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that if any question of that character might be raised it would be after the bill was reported back to be considered. Whether it would be good then or not is another question.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BOUTELLE. In the consideration of this bill there has been but one material point of difference over which I have raised or made any controversy, and in connection with which I gave notice in the committee that I should endeavor to obtain a record vote in the House. Since coming into the House I have repeatedly attempted, by resorting to every parliamentary method available to myself, to obtain such a vote. I gave notice that I would move to recommit the bill with instructions, but after having advertised that purpose once in the Committee of the Whole, and once in the House, the Chair recognized another gentleman to make an entirely different motion. Now, I ask, Mr. Speaker, if there is any way in which I can avail myself of any parliamentary privilege to be heard in the way I have suggested?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that he is not informed as to what took place in Committee of the Whole. The gentleman from Pennsylvania requested the Chair to recognize him to make a motion to recommit, and the Chair had no knowledge of the desire on the part of the gentleman to make such a motion.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I only desire, Mr. Speaker, to have it understood that the failure to obtain a direct vote upon the only proposition in dispute is not due to any lack of effort upon my part to obtain a hearing.

Mr. REILLY. I would like to say a word in reply to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE] in justice to myself and in justice to the Speaker. I did not know that the gentleman from Maine had contemplated making any such motion until he stated it on the floor a short time ago, and when he stated it I replied, holding my resolution in my hand, that I had intended to make such a motion, and it was familiar to members all about the floor this morning that I did intend to make such a motion.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Of course I could not be advised of the private arrangement between the gentleman and the Speaker.

Mr. REILLY. There was no private arrangement. I stated it publicly to the gentleman from Maine, and I had the same right to make the motion that he or any other member had, and there was the same propriety in my making it.

Mr. COCKRAN. I call for the regular order.

Mr. REILLY. May I not be permitted to make a statement by the same courtesy that was extended to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE]?

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded, which is equivalent to an objection. The Chair could not disregard that. The regular order is the vote on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. REILLY] to recommit, with the instructions just read.

The question being taken, the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. REILLY) there were—ayes 60, noes 80.

Mr. REILLY. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 99, nays 158, not voting 72; as follows:

YEAS—99.

Mr. COOMBS with Mr. POST.

Mr. STONE of Kentucky with Mr. BELDEN.

Mr. FITCH with Mr. STEPHENSON.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. RAYNER. I move the previous question on the passage of the bill.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question now is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. MALLORY. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused, 22 members voting in favor thereof.

On a division there were—ayes 111, noes 47.

Mr. MALLORY. No quorum, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER appointed as tellers Mr. RAYNER and Mr. MALLORY.

The House again divided; and tellers reported—ayes 138, noes 29.

So the bill was passed.

The SPEAKER. Without objection the title of the bill will be amended so as to conform with the recommendation of the committee.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

On motion of Mr. RAYNER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 10007) to provide for the lowering of height of bridge proposed to be constructed across the Ohio River between Cincinnati, Ohio, and Covington, Ky., by the Cincinnati and Covington Rapid Transit Bridge Company.

It also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolutions:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound of the special report of the sheep industry of the United States 60,000 copies, of which 20,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 40,000 for the use of the House.

Also,

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound of the special report of the Bureau of Animal Industry on diseases of cattle and cattle feeding 60,000 copies, of which 20,000 shall be for the use of the Senate and 40,000 for the use of the House.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have given notice heretofore that the Committee on Appropriations would ask the House at the earliest moment to enter into the consideration of appropriation bills; and I want to submit a motion now.

The SPEAKER. Before the gentleman submits the motion the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. WHEELER] to report the Military Academy Appropriation bill, simply for the purpose of putting it on the Calendar.

MILITARY ACADEMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WHEELER of Alabama, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported the bill (H. R. 10290) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I reserve all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. All points of order will be reserved.

CONTESTED ELECTION CASE—GREEVY VS. SCULL.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Elections, I desire to present the report of the committee in the contested-election case of Greevy vs. Scull. It is a unanimous report, and there will be no minority report.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] to allow me a few moments to ask for the consideration of a bridge bill—not more than twenty minutes.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, there has been a very earnest appeal made by the gentleman from New York to have a few moments to pass a bridge bill, and with the understanding that not more than twenty minutes are to be occupied, I will yield for that time to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WISE].

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled the bill (H. R. 10007) to provide for lowering the height of a bridge proposed to be constructed across the Ohio River between Cincinnati, Ohio, and Covington, Ky., by the Cincinnati and Covington Rapid Transit Company; when the Speaker signed the same.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE HUDSON RIVER, NEW YORK.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 7585) to authorize the New York and New Jersey Bridge Companies to construct and maintain a bridge across the Hudson River between New York City and the State of New Jersey.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the New York and New Jersey Bridge Companies, incorporated by the States of New York and New Jersey and existing under the laws of said States, are hereby authorized to construct, operate, maintain, and rebuild, in case of destruction, a bridge across the Hudson River between New York City, in the county and State of New York, and the State of New Jersey, pursuant to the laws of said States, respectively, upon the following terms, limitations, and conditions:

First. That said bridge shall be located at such point in the said city between Sixty-sixth street and Seventy-second street and such point north of the southerly line of the township of Union, in the county of Hudson, State of New Jersey, as shall be selected by the Secretary of War upon such examinations, hearings, and reports as he shall hereafter prescribe.

Second. That the companies may lay upon or over such bridge railroad tracks for the use of railroads, and locate, construct, and maintain such connections as are necessary and proper with railroads at the ends of said bridge or approaches thereto: Provided, That any railroad on either side of said river shall be permitted to connect their tracks with said bridge tracks, its approaches and connections, and shall have equal right of transit for their rolling stock, cars, passengers, and freight upon equal and equitable terms, and if a dispute as to the equality or equity of the terms shall arise, it shall be submitted to and decided by the Interstate Commerce Commissioners of the United States, under such rules and regulations as they may prescribe.

Third. That any bridge built under the authority of this act shall be constructed at such elevation as the Secretary of War shall approve and require, provided it shall not be less than 150 feet, and all the plans and specifications, with the necessary drawings, of said bridge shall be submitted to him for approval; and should any change be made in said plans during the progress of construction, such changed plans shall be submitted to him and approved by him before made; and no piers shall be built on the New York side of said river outside of the exterior pier line as established by the laws of the State of New York, and on the New Jersey side only at such points as approved by the Secretary of War.

Fourth. The companies operating under this law shall maintain such lights and signals as the United States Light-House Board may prescribe.

Fifth. The company or companies availing themselves of the privileges of this act shall not charge a higher rate of toll than authorized by the charters granted by the States of New York and New Jersey.

Sixth. That said company or companies shall be subject to the interstate-commerce laws and to all amendments thereof, and when such bridge is constructed under the provisions of this act it shall be a lawful military and post road and a lawful structure.

Seventh. The company or companies availing themselves of the privileges of this act shall file an acceptance of its terms with the Secretary of War, and the construction of said bridge shall be commenced within one year after the location is made by the Secretary of War and plans approved by him, and completed within ten years from said date.

Eighth. The right to amend, alter, modify, or repeal this act is hereby reserved, and nothing herein shall be construed as a repeal or interference with any right to build a bridge across the Hudson River heretofore granted by Congress to any company or bind this or any other Congress not to extend or renew the same.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I now yield two or three moments of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DUNPHY], but I do not yield the floor.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to have the report read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia has the floor. When the gentleman gets the floor he can have the report read.

Mr. WISE. I am not going to yield the floor.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to understand for what purpose the gentleman from Virginia yielded?

Mr. WISE. I yielded to allow the gentleman from New York to offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia yields to the gentleman from New York for the purpose of offering a substitute, which the Clerk will read.

Mr. DUNPHY. I offer the substitute which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend said bill by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting the following:

"SECTION 1. That a bridge suited to the use of steam railroads may be constructed across the Hudson River by the New York and New Jersey Bridge Companies, between the States of New York and New Jersey, under and in accordance with the laws of said States, and upon plans to be submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War, and when built and constructed it shall be a lawful structure, a post and military road, and subject to the interstate-commerce laws. Said bridge companies shall display such lights, use such fog horns or other signals as may be from time to time prescribed by the Light-House Board, and nothing in this act shall authorize the laying down of any railroad tracks except in conformity to the constitution and laws of the State of New York and under the authority of said State: Provided, however, The location of all approaches of said bridge in the city of New York shall be approved by the local authorities of the city of New York: And provided further, That no railroad or railroads shall be operated on any of the approaches of said bridge companies in the city of New York except on such approaches as have been located in said city with the approval of the local authorities of said city of New York: Provided, That this act shall not be construed so as to in any way enlarge or abridge the authority given for the construction of said bridge by said States.

Mr. WISE. I now want one minute.

Mr. STAHLNECKER. Is it in order to have the report of the committee read?

The SPEAKER. It is not until the gentleman has the floor. The gentleman from Virginia can have it read or not, as he pleases.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I want it understood by the House of Representatives that the authority to construct this bridge has been granted by the Legislature of the State of New York and by the Legislature of the State of New Jersey. The substitute which has just been read has been submitted to each of the members of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and also to all the members from the State of New York. It meets the approval of all, and I hope that it will be the pleasure of the members of this House to adopt this bill.

I call, Mr. Speaker, for the previous question upon the substitute, and the bill to its engrossment and third reading.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman from Virginia——

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I desire to ask the gentleman from Virginia to yield to me for an inquiry.

Mr. WISE. I yield to the gentleman for an inquiry.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, this substitute which has just been read does not, I think, protect the interests of navigation at that point upon the Hudson River. I wish to ask the gentleman from Virginia if it is not true that the charter granted by the State of New York to the New York and New Jersey Bridge Company to bridge the river at that point, specifies that the bridge shall be constructed of a single span over the entire river between the towers located on one shore and the established pier lines on the other; and I further desire to ask him if it is not a fact that the charter granted to this same bridge company by the Legislature of the State of New Jersey does not contain that provision?

Mr. WISE. The gentleman is right. The authority granted by the State of New York did require that, but we think——

Mr. BLANCHARD. Now, let me ask the gentleman further if it is not true that the charter granted by the State of New Jersey does not contain that requirement. In other words, is it not a fact that according to the charter granted by the State of New Jersey those piers may be put right in the middle of the Hudson River, while according to the charter granted by New York they can not be placed beyond the pier-head lines?

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I will say in reply to the gentleman from Louisiana that under the provisions of the substitute which has been offered, that bridge can not be constructed unless the plans shall be approved by the War Department, and we think that affords a sufficient safeguard. I call for the previous question.

Mr. DALZELL. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. BLANCHARD. I hope, Mr. Speaker, that in the interest of the preservation of the navigation of the river——

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I demand the previous question.

Mr. DALZELL. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question.

Mr. WISE. No, sir. I demand the previous question.

Mr. DALZELL. Then I tell the gentleman that he can not get his bill through to-day.

Mr. STAHLNECKER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I ask the gentleman——

Mr. WISE. I positively refuse to withdraw the demand for the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia demands the previous question, and pending that motion the gentleman from New York [Mr. STAHLNECKER] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE] move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. ATKINSON. And pending that, Mr. Speaker, I move that when the House adjourn it be to meet at ten minutes past 3 o'clock to-day. [Laughter.]

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a motion to adjourn can not be amended.

The SPEAKER. What was the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. My motion was that the House adjourn.

The SPEAKER. There is a motion to adjourn pending, but the other gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ATKINSON] made a motion, as the Chair understood, that when the House adjourn it be to meet at 3 o'clock to-day. The rule provides that when the House adjourns it shall adjourn to meet to-morrow at 12 o'clock, and that rule can not be changed in this way. The gentleman may move to fix the day to which the House shall adjourn. The Chair will state the question. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WISE] demands the previous question upon the pending amendment and the bill to its engrossment and third reading, and, pending that motion, the gentleman from New York [Mr. STAHLNECKER] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE] move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. DALZELL. And pending that motion I move that when the House adjourns it adjourn to meet on Wednesday next.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. DALZELL; and the Speaker declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 6, noes 106.

Mr. DALZELL. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I made a promise to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] that I would not consume more than twenty minutes in connection with this bill. Although five minutes of that time still remain it is very evident that the bill can not go through within the limit fixed by me, and I therefore comply with my promise to the gentleman from Indiana by withdrawing the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that the gentlemen from Pennsylvania [Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE and Mr. DALZELL] withdraw their motions.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE and Mr. DALZELL assented.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the consideration of general appropriation bills.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Speaker, I move as a substitute for that motion that the House do now proceed to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from South Carolina that this is the legislative day of Saturday. [Laughter.]

Mr. HEMPHILL. I state to the Chair that I am aware of that, but the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] gave notice that he would call up his bill on Monday; now, I am willing that he shall do what he said he would do, but it is not "Monday" yet. [Laughter.] I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana whether he proposes to take up the deficiency bill or the sundry civil bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. The sundry civil bill, as the more important one.

Mr. HEMPHILL. We shall object to that.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. HOLMAN, and the Speaker declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 102, noes 33.

Mr. HEMPHILL. No quorum. Mr. Speaker, I think that if the House will hear me a moment I can submit a proposition that will be acceptable all around.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think we may as well have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 178, nays 31, not voting 120; as follows:

So the motion of Mr. HOLMAN was agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced:

For the rest of the day:

Mr. CAMPBELL with Mr. CALDWELL.

Mr. ENLOE with Mr. TOWNSEND.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole (Mr. LESTER of Georgia in the chair), and proceeded to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10238) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. I think we had better have the bill read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill, but was interrupted by

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois, who said: I withdraw my demand for the reading of the bill.

There being no further objection, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest that the Clerk now go on with the second reading of the bill.

Mr. BLAND. I wish it understand that I object to the closing of general debate. I want to occupy thirty-five or forty minutes.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the reading of the bill will be commenced. Let the first section be read.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Kentucky. Then we can have no general debate.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, yes.

Mr. BLAND. As I understand, the gentleman from Indiana wants the first paragraph of the bill read, but with the understanding that it is not to interfere with the right of general debate.

The CHAIRMAN. No arrangement has been made with reference to closing debate. The bill is now open for discussion.

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for the reading of the first section.

Mr. COGSWELL. I object, until this matter of general debate is settled.

The CHAIRMAN. The bill is open to general debate.

Mr. COGSWELL. I desire to be recognized in my own right.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COGSWELL] is recognized.

Mr. BLAND. I announced my intention of debating the bill, and I supposed I had the floor for that purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts, a member of the committee, has been recognized.

Mr. COGSWELL. Mr. Chairman, this bill carries appropriations for public buildings and heating the same; light-houses, etc.; Light-House Establishment; Life-Saving Service; Revenue-Cutter Service; engraving and printing; Coast and Geodetic Survey; Smithsonian; Fish Commission; Interstate Commerce Commission; miscellaneous objects under the Treasury Department; custodians and janitors of public buildings and fuel, lights, and water for the same; quarantine service; certain public buildings of the Interior Department; Capitol grounds; the Capitol, and lighting the same; expenses of the collection of revenue from sales of public lands; surveying of public lands; Geological Survey; Government Hospital for the Insane; Columbia Institute for the Deaf and Dumb; Howard University; education in Alaska; armories and arsenals; buildings and grounds in and around Washington; military posts; certain river and harbor improvements now under contract; National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers; back pay, bounty, etc.; the Department of Justice; United States courts; the Library of Congress; public printing and binding, and sundry other important items.

The estimate for public buildings is nearly $4,000,000. The amount allowed in the bill, however, is not quite $600,000.

For heating apparatus for public buildings the last bill carried $150,000, which was below the urgent needs of the service, yet this bill appropriates but $125,000, although the urgency is greater than ever before.

In the Light-House Establishment, although 39 light stations have been added, not one dollar has been added to the appropriation for supplies of light-houses, and the same is true of the salaries of the keepers of light-houses. In other words, recent legislation has added 39 light stations, and not a dollar has been given to supply these additional light-houses or to pay the salaries of the keepers of the same.

In the last bill the appropriation for the Coast and Geodetic Survey was reduced $53,200, under the amount given the previous year. This action seriously impaired the valuable work of this important service. This bill reduces even the appropriation in the last bill by the sum of $35,000, and if no more is allowed than this bill authorizes, that Bureau might as well be abolished; indeed, it would have been a manlier way had the committee recommended no appropriation at all, and provided legislation to close the Bureau and sell its effects at public auction.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman must be well aware of the fact that there may be a limited detail to that service both from the Army and the Navy, and it is well known that there is a multitude of officers connected with both branches that can be transferred.

Mr. COGSWELL. I can not yield for the gentleman's explanation.

In this connection I ask to have read a letter from Prof. Mendenhall, the distinguished Superintendent of the Survey.

The Clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY,
OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT,
Washington, D. C., January 17, 1893.

DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of yours of the 16th instant, in which you inform me that the subcommittee having charge of the sundry civil appropriation bill have determined to recommend appropriations for the Coast and Geodetic Survey for the fiscal year 1894 amounting in the aggregate to $420,430, and you request me to indicate how this sum should be divided among the several objects of expenditure for the Survey. You also add that the reduction should be made upon the office and field force, either by reducing their number or the amount of their compensation.

In reply I beg to remark as follows: My original estimates for the fiscal year 1894 were less than any made for many years. On the 19th of December, 1892, after a conference with the acting chairman of the subcommittee, I submitted a revision of these estimates reducing the aggregate amount to $484,530, being slightly less than the appropriation of last year, which was $485,430. This was done at his request and with the understanding that if the total of the revised estimates was not in excess of the appropriation of last year they would be accepted by the subcommittee. You now ask me to reduce this amount by $64,100, and to make this reduction in the field and office force. Both of these are already too small to meet the demands constantly made upon this Bureau, and their compensation is below that of any similar body of men in Government service, and very much lower than that received by persons of equal skill and experience in private employment.

To make such a reduction would result in the practical disruption of a technical corps, most members of which have devoted their lives to the service of the Government and all of whom are possessed of technical knowledge and skill not to be met with elsewhere. It would be a serious injury to the Government to be deprived of the services of these men. The Coast and Geodetic Survey can not be regarded as a bureau engaged in scientic research, the operations of which may be safely arrested or greatly restricted at any time. It is, and always has been, a bureau of applied science. To conduct its operations high scientific attainments combined with great technical skill are required.

The possession of these on the part of its employés has been insured by years of training and experience. Its output is entirely practical in character and some of the most important interests of the country are greatly benefited by or entirely dependent upon its work. It has received the highest praise from all civilized nations, and it is difficult for me to believe that your committee or Congress would willingly sacrifice a service, the necessity for and efficiency of which have long been admitted.

With these facts before me I am not able to share with the committee the responsibility of such action. The estimates as last submitted are as low as they can be made without imperiling important interests of the Government, and I am unwilling to suggest further reduction.

I am yours faithfully,
[Signed.] T. C. MENDENHALL,
Superintendent.

Hon. W. S. HOLMAN,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives.

Mr. COGSWELL. Mr. Chairman, in this bill the Smithsonian Institution is again victim of a niggardly parsimony. The Interstate Commerce Commission, which never justified its existence better than now, and the services of which are so useful and valuable as to compel the commendation of its opponents heretofore, is impeded in its progress of usefulness by the insufficient appropriation given by this bill.

The appropriations for pay of assistant custodians and janitors and for fuel, lights, and water for public buildings, are recommended by the committee with the full knowledge that the amounts allowed are grossly inadequate and insufficient.

As to the expenses of the collection of revenue from sales of public land, there has been a reduction of $187,000, as compared with the last bill, which also made large reductions over previous appropriations; and from surveys of public lands, etc., there has been a reduction from $500,000 to $100,000.

The appropriation for the expenses of the Eleventh Census has again been taken qut of this bill, where it belongs, and is to appear once more as a deficiency in the deficiency bill.

The expenses for the Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb have been increased by the addition of thirty-eight new pupils, which was caused by recent legislation of Congress, and this bill refuses to grant a single dollar for this increase of expense which Congress has placed upon the Institution.

For armories and arsenals it is estimated that $480,494.40 will be necessary for the fiscal year 1894. This bill allows $110,750.

"For military posts," the estimates for 1894 is $1,760,000; the bill allows $200,000.

"For headstones for graves of soldiers," a careful estimate of $40,000 was submitted, which probably is as near an exact and accurate estimate as is in the Book of Estimates, and yet but $25,000 is allowed, leaving a necessary, most proper, and patriotic expenditure to the extent of $15,000 unprovided with a single dollar.

In 1891 the law was changed so as to provide artificial limbs for our disabled soldiers every three years instead of five years. The attempt is made in this bill to change the law so as to provide these limbs not oftener than once in five years, and the estimate has been cut accordingly $575,000.

In the items "Back pay and bounty"—"Bounty to volunteers, their widows, etc.," "For bounty under the act of 1886," "For commutation of rations to prisoners of war," the carefully prepared estimates called for $850,000, this bill allows but $750,000, which leaves our volunteer soldiers, their widows, or their heirs, to wait some eighteen months after their long-delayed claims are adjusted and allowed, for the payment of the same to the extent of $100,000. This same unfair and unjustifiable policy was pursued in the last bill knowingly and purposely, and the deficiency bill, already or soon to be reported, has had to provide for the inadequate appropriations for these items by the last bill, as will the deficiency bill a year hence have to provide for the well-known inadequacy of the appropriations for these items in this bill.

Mr. Chairman, this is the unkindest feature in this whole bill.

I reserve the residue of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts has occupied twenty minutes.

Mr. COGSWELL. I reserve the forty minutes remaining.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I hope the reading of the bill will be proceeded with. I call for the reading of the bill by sections.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman that the general debate has not been closed.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think there is nothing in the rules to require that the general debate shall be closed before the bill is read by sections.

The CHAIRMAN. After the general debate is closed the bill will be so read.

Mr. BLAND. I shall not object to closing the general debate if I can have, to-morrow morning, twenty-five or thirty minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Indiana make any motion?

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the request of the gentleman from Missouri will be granted.

Mr. COGSWELL. Wait a moment, Mr. Chairman. If the time is allowed, then I shall object to closing the general debate until we know what the gentleman from Missouri has to say. Certainly the proposition to give the other side thirty minutes to close the general debate with no opportunity to reply is objectionable.

Mr. BLAND. I only wish to state——

Mr. SAYERS. The gentleman from Massachusetts becomes unduly excited. We have listened to him with a great deal of pleasure——

Mr. COGSWELL. And you listened to me in my own time. Now I object to closing the debate in this way.

Mr. BLAND. I shall not make the remarks I expected to make this evening. I intended to confine them to the Sherman law, which, being a money bill, is connected to a certain extent with the measure under consideration. But I hope that no objection will be made to my having an opportunity to-morrow morning.

Mr. COGSWELL. We do not object if we can have the same length of time on this side.

Mr. BLAND. I ask unanimous consent that I may have thirty minutes in the morning.

Mr. COGSWELL. I will agree to that if the same amount of time be given to the other side.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the bill is still open to general debate, and general debate will continue on the bill unless the committee by unanimous consent agrees to close it, which the committee can do. Otherwise the general debate will not cease.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the reading of the bill will be commenced.

Mr. COGSWELL. I have no objection to that.

Mr. BLAND. I will take the time I want on some other bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for the reading of the bill. I ask that general debate be closed on the bill, and that it be now read by sections under the five-minute rule.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Rockland Lake Light Station, New York: For establishing a light-house and fog signal at or near Oyster Bed Shoal, Hudson River, opposite Rockland Lake Dock, $20,000.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, on the face of that paragraph I think it would be obnoxious to the point of order, and I make that point.

Mr. HOLMAN. What is the point the gentleman makes?

Mr. KILGORE. That this is obnoxious to the point of order, as it is new law.

Mr. HOLMAN. But it has been already authorized by law.

Mr. KILGORE. It does not so specify, and is not in the ordinary form of a provision which has been so authorized. This provision is for the establishment of a light-house and fog signal. I make the point of order on the face of the provision itself that it is for an expenditure not previously authorized by law, and if it is ascertained that it is authorized by law then of course the point of order will be no longer good.

Mr. HOLMAN. No propositions are made here except such as are authorized by law.

Mr. KILGORE. Has there been a law authorizing this?

Mr. HOLMAN. There has been.

Mr. BACON. The building of this light-house was authorized by law passed in the Fiftieth Congress.

Mr. KILGORE. Then why not say for continuing the work on this establishment?

Mr. HOLMAN. Because it was not necessary.

Mr. KILGORE. Why was not the work done?

Mr. BACON. Because no appropriations were made. This is the first appropriation.

Mr. HOLMAN. It was not necessary to put it in the form suggested by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. KILGORE. It is always necessary to tell the truth about these things. It saves time usually.

Mr. HOLMAN. You could not use the form suggested by the gentleman, because this is the first appropriation.

Mr. KILGORE. I withdraw the point of order on the statement made by the gentleman from Indiana that there is a law authorizing the establishment of this light-house and fog signal.

The Clerk read as follows:

Supplies of light-houses: For supplying fog signals, light-houses, and other lights with illuminating, cleaning, preservative, and such other materials as may be required for annual consumption; for books, boats, and furniture for stations, and not exceeding $300 for the purchase of technical and professional books and periodicals for the use of the Light-House Board, and other incidental expenses, $370,000; and articles of light-house supply not manufactured in this country may be imported free of duty.

Mr. COGSWELL. I move to strike out the words "three hundred and seventy," and insert the words "four hundred and eight."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 13 strike out the word "three," and in line 14 strike out the words "one hundred and seventy," and insert in lieu thereof the words "four hundred and eight;" so as to read, "and other incidental expenses, $408,000."

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Salaries of keepers of light-houses: For salaries, fuel, rations, rent of quarters where necessary, and similar incidental expenses of not exceeding 1,250 light-house and fog-signal keepers, and laborers attending other lights, $650,000.

Mr. COGSWELL. I move to strike out, in line 3, page 6, the words "six hundred and sixty" and insert in lieu thereof the words "six hundred and eighty."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 3, page 6 strike out the words "six hundred and sixty" and insert in lieu thereof the words "six hundred and eighty."

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of crews of surfmen employed at the life-saving and lifeboat stations, during the period of actual employment; compensation of volunteers at life-saving and lifeboat stations, for actual and deserving service rendered upon any occasion of disaster, or in any effort to save persons from drowning, at such rate, not to exceed $10 for each volunteer, as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine; pay of volunteer crews for drill and exercise; fuel for stations and houses of refuge; repairs and outfits for same; rebuilding and improvement of same; supplies and provisions for houses of refuge and for shipwrecked persons succored at stations; traveling expenses of officers under orders from the Treasury Department; for carrying out the provisions of sections 7 and 8 of the act approved May 4, 1882; for draft animals and their maintenance; and contingent expenses, including freight, storage, repairs to apparatus, medals, labor, stationery, advertising, and miscellaneous expenses that can not be included under any other head of life-saving stations on the coasts of the United States, $1,088,047.50.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, the item for pay of crews and surfmen, etc., shows an increase of $252,797.50. This very large increase is the result of the legislation of the last session.

The Clerk read as follows:

Alaska boundary survey: To complete the joint survey of the territory adjacent to the boundary line of the United States of America and the Dominion of Canada——

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask the gentlemen of the Committee on Appropriations what they propose to do in reference to the survey between this country and Mexico?

Mr. HOLMAN. That subject was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and I think it properly belongs there.

Mr. BLOUNT. I asked the question because I supposed that would be the difficulty in the gentleman's mind; and if the gentleman means to make an effort to exclude it from the bill on that ground, then I wish to offer an amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT], and ask unanimous consent, that this item be passed over. We have had no opportunity of examining these items.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say that the gentleman has had the same opportunity for examining these two items that he has had for examining any other items in the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, no; the subject was referred to your committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. Not at all. These items are of a miscellaneous character, belonging in the sundry civil appropriation bill, and have been reported thereon from time to time. The Book of Estimates was in possession of the gentleman's committee, the Committee on Appropriations, as much as in the possession of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] make any motion?

Mr. HOLMAN. My friend from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] labors under a mistake. For the information of the committee I will state that all the items that related to our foreign relations went to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. I suggest, in order to save time, that we pass over this item.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not wish to pass over the item, because I fear that when we wish to return to it the gentleman will find that we have passed the place where an amendment will be in order.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, no; I will consent to go back to the item.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will suggest that there is no motion pending before the committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. I understand that. But I hope we may save time by an agreement. These surveys are the result of treaties, and the gentleman has included in the bill a survey in reference to the Alaska boundary, which is just as much a matter for the Foreign Affairs Committee as the other item. The gentleman left one out and put the other in.

Mr. HOLMAN. I propose that we pass this paragraph without any action, so as to go back to it. We want to examine these items.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have no objection to the arrangement suggested by the gentleman if it is understood that we may go back, with the view of offering these amendments as to these surveys.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that we take no action at all on this paragraph, so that we may go back to it at the proper time.

Mr. BLANCHARD. What paragraph does the gentleman refer to?

Mr. SAYERS. The paragraph in reference to the Alaska boundary.

Mr. HOLMAN. No.

Mr. SAYERS. That is where he wants to insert the item.

Mr. HOLMAN. It would come in in connection with that.

Mr. BLOUNT. The proper place for the item to come in is just before the item with reference to the Alaska boundary, to insert a provision in reference to the water boundary between the United States and Mexico, and another item relating to the water boundary between the United States and Canada, Passamaquoddy Bay.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will allow me a word or two, I want to say to the gentleman from Georgia, that while I am in favor of appropriating for these estimates, yet in my judgment this is not the proper place.

This appropriation ought to come under the head of the State Department. The reason why the appropriation for the Alaska boundary comes under the head of the Coast and Geodetic Survey is because the Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey has not only been appointed a commissioner of the United States, but his office is also charged with making the survey.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, without entering into any discussion with my friend on the suggestion he has made, I am perfectly willing that this paragraph shall be passed over, with the understanding that we may return to it and have an opportunity of offering these amendments or that they may be considered in that portion which relates to the State Department, if the gentleman from Indiana will agree to that.

Mr. HOLMAN. I agree to that, subject, however, to any point of order that it may be subject to. I do not know anything about this. I accept the gentleman's proposition to go back to this paragraph, and if his proposition shall be in order, no point of order will be made.

Mr. BLOUNT. I want to be a little more specific. The gentleman from Indiana thinks it is not in order at all. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAYERS] insists that it is in order at another place; and now the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] seems to agree with him; and therefore he yields nothing if the point of order would be in order. I am perfectly willing that the paragraph shall be passed over if these two amendments may be offered at this place.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let it be passed over just as if it had not been read.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not want them passed over in that way.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Georgia——

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the gentleman will consent to the proposition to pass over this paragraph. I want a moment's time to look at the proposition.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have not a particle of objection to the paragraph being passed over, but if the gentleman thinks that it is subject to the point of order that it should not be in this bill, I take it for granted that he does not intend to look to it.

Mr. HOLMAN. If this amendment is not subject to the point of order I certainly have no objection to it.

Mr. BLOUNT. That is all right.

Mr. SAYERS. As I understand the gentleman from Georgia his proposition is this: That he may have an opportunity, either at the present stage or at a subsequent stage, should it be more appropriate, to offer this amendment as an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have no objection, with that understanding, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent to pass over this paragraph, commencing at line 15, page 17.

Mr. KILGORE. Before that unanimous consent is granted I would like to submit a point of order, if it is not too late, in order to bring out information.

The CHAIRMAN. Which paragraph?

Mr. KILGORE. Paragraph 1, beginning at line 1, on page 17, where they provide for an expenditure of $550 for the purpose of measuring the earth. Everybody knows the size of the earth [laughter], and I would like to know under what law that is provided for.

Mr. HOLMAN. No law has ever been passed on that subject.

Mr. KILGORE. Then this got in loose, I suppose. I make the point of order that this is not previously authorized by law.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will my friend allow me there a moment? This appropriation is made in pursuance of a treaty of the United States with several foreign powers, and we are always making expenditures and appropriating money more or less in the execution of treaties between this Government and other countries.

Mr. KILGORE. Is not a treaty a law?

Mr. HOLMAN. It is not exactly a law; it is a treaty.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the Chair understand the gentleman from Texas to make a point of order against this paragraph?

Mr. KILGORE. After the explanation made by the gentleman from Indiana, that it is authorized by law, I will not press the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to pass over this paragraph with permission to return to it for the purpose of offering an amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope there will be no objection to that.

Mr. KILGORE. I move to strike out that paragraph.

Mr. BLOUNT. Before we proceed——

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order on the statement made by the gentleman from Indiana, that this is in pursuance of law, but I move to strike it out because it is unnecessary.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to pass over this paragraph with the right to return to it for amendment.

Mr. KILGORE. I object to that.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas, to strike out the paragraph.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, do I understand that unanimous consent was given to the agreement suggested by the gentleman from Indiana that the paragraph be passed over?

The CHAIRMAN. Objection was made to that.

Mr. KILGORE. I withdraw the objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the committee that the gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to pass this paragraph with liberty to return to it and offer amendments. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HOLMAN. That covers the whole of that paragraph, down to line 5, page 18.

The Clerk read as follows:

And it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey to so reduce the number and compensation of the persons now employed as field officers and in the office force as to bring their aggregate compensation for the fiscal year 1894 within the sum of $222,730, which amount is hereby appropriated for said field officers and office force.

Mr. COGSWELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out "222" and insert "262."

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Paper and stamps: For paper for internal-revenue stamps, freight, and salary of superintendent, messengers, and watchmen, $6,000.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After "dollars," in line 19, page 33, add "For the expenses of the Board of Lady Managers of the World's Columbian Exposition, $93,190."

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point of order upon that amendment that it is not authorized by any existing law.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I do not think the amendment is subject to the point of order.

Mr. HOLMAN. The point is that there is no law authorizing this appropriation. The law authorizing that exhibition limits the amount to be expended to $1,500,000, and that sum and more has already been appropriated.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. I do not think this amendment is subject to the point of order. These commissions have been established under legislation enacted by Congress, and I think it is within the province of this Congress to provide for their compensation, and we did provide for this at the last session under this head.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will inquire of the gentleman from Illinois whether he can point to any law authorizing this appropriation?

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. Yes, sir. Congress passed an act authorizing the appointment of these commissions, and that authorizes us to make provision for their salaries. It is very important to have this amendment acted upon at this time. The money is absolutely necessary. In this connection I desire to have read a communication which I send to the desk.

The communication was read, as follows:

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT BOARD OF LADY MANAGERS WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION,
Chicago, Ill., November 30, 1892.

DEAR SIR: I desire to call your attention to a matter of great importance to the success of the Columbian Exposition.

In order to promote the educational advantages of the exhibition and to stimulate the production of artistic industries in this country, loan collections of very unique and artistic objects, representing the best work done in past times, have been requested for the benefit of our own designers and artisans.

These objects are not articles of merchandise, but are prized as relics and as specimens of art of a former time. Their owners would not part with them, and they could only be exhibited by the courtesy of the individuals or governments that possess them.

As an instance I might cite the case of Italy, to which country an invitation was sent from the Board of Lady Managers and transmitted by the Department of State. This invitation reached Italy at a time when the diplomatic relations were sundered, and the Queen, as a mark of special favor and friendship, volunteered to send a rarely beautiful exhibit comprising her own remarkable historical collection of laces and embroideries, which are of great intrinsic and artistic value, many of the specimens dating back to a period one thousand years before Christ. The Queen of Italy pays for the preparation and installation of this exhibit, together with such other articles as are coming from Italy, but it is of such importance that the collection will be sent through the Italian minister in Washington, who will place it in the hands of the Secretary of State, with the request that a special guard be maintained by the Government during the time of the Exposition. I have recently received a cable asking if the usual guaranty for the insurance, transportation, etc., would be given.

As the owners of these loan collections have no other object than to contribute to the success of the Exposition, common courtesy and established usage require that this Government should pay for the transportation of such articles to and from the Exposition, and should also insure the owners against loss as far as possible to do so.

This will illustrate many other cases of like kind, and the necessity for an appropriation to be made especially for this purpose. It is believed that the sum of $25,000 will be required to cover this expense, and we therefore ask that this sum be appropriated, with the customary provision that so much thereof as is necessary shall be used in the way indicated.

It is also important that this fund should be available at once, as it is now necessary to give guaranties and advance money for the transportation of these articles, and delay in this matter until the close of the session would greatly embarrass the Board of Lady Managers in bringing forward promptly and in time such valuable and useful exhibits.

Asking for favorable consideration of this request, I have the honor to be,

Very respectfully,

BERTHA HONORE PALMER,
President Board of Lady Managers.

Hon. CHARLES FOSTER,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. HOLMAN. That has nothing at all to do with the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is made on this amendment that it is not authorized by existing law.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. Who made the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir. The Chair is prepared to rule. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer another amendment.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After "dollars," in line 19, page 33, add "for the expenses of the World's Columbian Commission, $140,185."

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point of order that there is no law authorizing that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. I offer another amendment, Mr. Chairman, which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After "dollars," in line 19, page 33, add "for expenses of the committee on awards of the World's Columbian Commission, $570,880."

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point of order that there is no law authorizing that.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I simply desire to call the attention of the great Democratic city of Chicago to the fact that it will be compelled to go to a Republican Senate to get these necessary appropriations. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Contingent expenses, independent treasury: For contingent expenses under the requirements of section 3653 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, for the collection, safe-keeping, transfer, and disbursement of the public money, and for transportation of notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, $70,000.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that this part of the bill be passed over, with permission to return to the same and offer an amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope that will be agreed to.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The Clerk read as follows:

Transportation of silver coin: For transportation of silver coin, including fractional silver coin, by registered mail or otherwise, $40,000, to be immediately available; and in expending this sum the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to transport from the Treasury or subtreasuries, free of charge, silver coin when requested to do so: Provided, That an equal amount in coin or currency shall have been deposited in the Treasury or such subtreasuries by the applicant or applicants. And the Secretary of the Treasury shall report to Congress the cost arising under this appropriation.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

In line 5, page 34, strike out the word "forty" and insert "thirty-five;" and after the word "applicants," in line 11, page 34, insert "And provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury may suspend the purchase of silver bullion authorized under the act of July 14, 1890, whenever in his judgment it is advisable to do so for the purpose of maintaining on a parity with each other gold and silver upon a ratio provided by law, this being the policy of the United States as declared in that act."

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order upon that amendment.

Mr. COX of Tennessee. I make the point of order.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that this paragraph be passed over for the present and the ruling of the Chair be made to-morrow.

Mr. SAYERS. I object.

Mr. COX of Tennessee. I raise the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. TRACEY. Then, Mr. Chairman, I wish to be heard on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the point of order that is made?

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point of order that this amendment is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. Which part of it?

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point as to the whole amendment.

Mr. TRACEY. The gentleman from Indiana in charge of this bill can scarcely maintain that it is new legislation to move that the amount appropriated in the bill be reduced from $40,000 to $35,000, and I maintain that there is no legislation in my amendment. It simply authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to carry out the act of July 14, 1890, in accordance with existing law.

The amendment is admissible under Rule XXI, because it is a reduction in the expenditures carried by the bill. I hope the Chairman will not rule without giving this matter serious attention, because if he will give the question the same consideration which he gave to the subject of coinage in the last session he may decide that my amendment is in order under the rules.

Mr. BLAND. If the Chairman gives the same attention to the gentleman's amendment that he did to mine, he will rule it out. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. Of course the proposition to reduce the appropriation to $35,000 would be in order; but the amendment is vitiated by the legislative provision which it contains.

Mr. TRACEY. Why, Mr. Chairman, the law of July 14, 1890, which I have quoted, declares it to be the policy of the Government to carry out this idea of maintaining a parity between the two metals, and if the Secretary of the Treasury accepts the directions proposed to be given under this bill, in accordance with existing law, he will not need to use so much as $40,000, perhaps $35,000 will be sufficient.

Mr. COX of Tennessee. The gentleman means the Secretary of the Treasury need not coin so much.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, we have not members enough here to transact business. We have been working since 11 o'clock; and I must insist that we ought to have a quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman make a motion that the committee rise?

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope that motion will not be made for ten minutes.

Mr. KILGORE. Will you then make the motion that the committee rise?

Mr. HOLMAN. I will.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair regards the amendment offered as embracing two separate and distinct propositions——

Mr. TRACEY. I would like to be heard a moment, that I may call the attention of the Chair to another consideration. This entire paragraph, as a matter of fact, is not in order; but as it has been admitted in the bill, amendments are in order to a greater extent than would be the case were the original paragraph in order under the rules. I do not make any point of order against the original paragraph, but I make the point that the paragraph having been admitted, no point of order having been raised against it, I have the right to offer the amendment, even though under ordinary circumstances it would be out of order.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Kentucky. On what ground does the gentleman from New York [Mr. TRACEY] make the statement that this whole paragraph is new legislation? It has been in all the recent bills. If the gentleman is correct in his statement that this paragraph is new legislation which we have admitted into the bill, of course it may be amendable by new legislation.

Mr. HOLMAN. There is existing law authorizing the transportation of silver coin.

Mr. MUTCHLER. There is no law which authorizes the transportation of silver coin at the expense of the Government, therefore I think the gentleman from New York is entirely correct in his position that this is new legislation.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Kentucky. I take it for granted that if the paragraph is new legislation the amendment is in order, because it would be an anomalous position to hold that after we have admitted a paragraph embracing new legislation it is not amendable by another proposition which proposes new legislation. I do not admit, however, the foundation which the gentleman seeks to lay for his argument; I do not concede that the paragraph itself would be subject to a point of order.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman from New York has not raised any question of order against the paragraph.

Mr. TRACEY. If I had done so, I could not make the point that my amendment is in order.

Mr. BLAND. I understand that this amendment is offered, not to a paragraph affecting the coinage of gold or silver, but only to a paragraph providing for the transportation of coin. Hence the amendment is not germane to the subject-matter; it has nothing to do with the transportation of coin. Although the paragraph itself may be new legislation, it relates to the transportation of coin; and the amendment of the gentleman from New York is not germane to that proposition.

Mr. TRACEY. But, Mr. Chairman, the very law which authorizes the purchase of silver bullion provides for the coinage of a certain portion of the metal purchased; and that very metal at the present time is being conveyed as coin from day to day by the Treasury Department; and the expense of such transportation is a part of the expenditure provided for by the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. This question presents two separate and independent propositions. The gentleman from New York takes the position that the paragraph itself, if a point of order had been raised against it, would not be in order. That may be true, yet at the same time the proposition which the gentleman submits is no less a distinct provision of law which he proposes to have enacted. The fact that the paragraph itself may not be in order does not affect the question whether or not the amendment proposes new legislation. The Chair regards the amendment as liable to a point of order on two grounds: first, because it embraces new and independent legislation, and, secondly, because it is not germane to the paragraph under consideration. The point of order is therefore sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

Fuel, lights, and water for public buildings: For fuel, lights, water, electric-light plants, including repairs thereto, in such buildings as may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury for electric-light wiring and miscellaneous items required by the janitors and firemen in the proper care of the buildings, furniture, and heating apparatus, exclusive of personal services, for all public buildings, marine hospitals included, under the control of the Treasury Department, inclusive of new buildings, $800,000. And the appropriation herein made for gas in any of the public buildings in the District of Columbia, under the control of the Treasury Department, shall include the rental or use of any gas governor, gas purifier, or other device for reducing the expenses of gas, when first approved by the Secretary of the Treasury and ordered by him in writing: Provided, That no sum shall be paid such rental or use of such gas governor, gas purifier, or device greater than the one-half part of the amount of money actually saved thereby.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to this paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out in line 4, on page 38, the words "eight hundred," and insert "eight hundred and fifty," so that it will read $850,000, and that $50,000 of said amount shall be used for repair and extension of the custom-house in Chicago, Ill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I make the point of order against that amendment. It is not germane to this provision.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. I desire to discuss this question, Mr. Chairman, and I notify the chairman of the committee now that he can not get this out this afternoon. In view of that fact I think we had better rise and take it up in the morning.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the point of order will be disposed of at all events.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. It is certainly germane. I have no objection to disposing of the point of order this evening.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh well, Mr. Chairman, it is getting late, and I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LESTER of Georgia, reported, that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union having had under consideration the bill H. R. 10538, had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. CUTTING, for this day, on account of sickness.

To Mr. BYNUM, for five days, on account of important business; and

To Mr. GRADY, for one day, on account of important business.

And then, on motion of Mr. BAILEY (at 5 o'clock and 12 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned.

Also, three petitions of lodges or associations, as follows: Of Lodge No. 13; of Pike's Peak International Association of Machinists; of Denver Musical Protection Association of Denver, and of Pueblo Branch of Journeymen Stone-Cutters' Association, all in favor of repealing the act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—to the Select Committee on the Columbian Exposition.

By Mr. TURNER: Resolution of the Board of Trade of Brunswick, Ga., urging the repeal of the Sherman silver act of 1890—to the Committe on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. WHEELER of Alabama: Papers in claim of William S. Keer, John Haynes, deceased, David Vincent, Jesse Jefferson, William Jones, and Senia McClelland, of Madison County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, papers in claims of Stephen Harris, Corland M. Miller, and Edward Moore, of Madison County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, memorial of F. F. Lomas and voters of Bradford County, in favor of restricting immigration—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, papers in claim of Martha Byrd, of Lawrence County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, January 24, 1893.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented the credentials of GEORGE GRAY, elected by the Legislature of Delaware a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1893; which were read and ordered to be filed.

Mr. HARRIS presented the credentials of WILLIAM B. BATE, elected by the Legislature of Tennessee a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1893; which were read and ordered to be filed.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of State, transmitting, in pursuance of the provisions of the act of Congress approved February 3, 1887, a certified copy of the final ascertainment of the electors for President and Vice-President appointed in the State of Michigan, at the election held therein on the 8th day of November, 1892, as certified to him by the governor of that State; which was ordered to lie on the table.

SALMON FISHERIES OF ALASKA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 19th instant, the report of Special Agent Max Pracht, having in charge the protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska; which was read.

Mr. PLATT. I think the communication should be referred to the Committee on Appropriations. It relates, to be sure, to the salmon fishing industry in Alaska, and might perhaps go to the Committee on Fisheries; but an appropriation will be asked for the continuance of the supervision of those fisheries. That matter is now before the Committee on Territories, and the committee will, I think, report in favor of an amendment to the sundry civil or some other appropriation bill for that purpose. I think, therefore, that the communication and accompanying papers had better go to the Committee on Appropriations, unless it is desired to refer them to the Committee on Fisheries.

Mr. DOLPH. The papers will be printed, I suppose.

Mr. PLATT. Yes.

Mr. DOLPH. I think the reference suggested a proper one.

Mr. PLATT. Unless a claim is made by the Committee on Fisheries, I move that the communication, with the accompanying papers, be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed.

The motion was agreed to.

INDIAN DEPREDATION CLAIMS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Attorney-General in response to a resolution of the 21st instant relative to specified classes of Indian depredation claims entitled to priority of consideration under section 4 of the act of March 3, 1891, transmitting the decisions of the Court of Claims in the cases of John T. Mitchell, administrator, etc., vs. The United States and Sioux Nation of Indians, and of James S. Valk, executor, etc., vs. The United States and Rogue River Tribe of Indians; which, on motion of Mr. CHANDLER, was, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Select Committee on Indian Depredations, and ordered to be printed.

BRIGHTWOOD RAILWAY COMPANY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the president of the Brightwood Railway Company of the District of Columbia, transmitting the names of stockholders of that company, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented memorials of the Third Presbyterian Church of Camden, and of the Presbyterian Church of New Providence, in the State of New Jersey, remonstrating against the repeal of the law closing the World's Columbian Exposition; which were referred to the Committee on the Quadro-Centennial (Select).

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of the North Star Grange, No. 671, Patrons of Husbandry, of Geneva, Ohio, praying for the passage of the Washburn-Hatch antioption bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of the congregation of the First Presbyterian Church of Canton, Ohio, remonstrating against the repeal of the law closing the World's Columbian Exposition on Sunday; which was referred to the Committee on the Quadro-Centennial (Select).

He also presented petitions of the Boards of Trade of West Alexandria, Youngstown, Findlay, Canton, and Cuyahoga Falls, all in the State of Ohio, praying for the establishment of a national quarantine, and the suspension of immigration until the quarantine defense of the country shall be placed in a condition to guarantee protection from contagious diseases; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SAWYER presented a petition of sundry bankers and business men of Fox Lake, Wis., praying for the repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. VILAS presented a petition of the Manufacturers and Jobbers' Union of La Crosse, Wis., praying for the repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law, and remonstrating against the further purchase of silver by the Secretary of the Treasury; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WILSON presented petitions of the Tailors' Local Union No. 207, of Burlington, Iowa, and of Union No. 700, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, of Keokuk, Iowa, praying for the opening of the World's Columbian Exposition on Sunday; which were referred to the Committee on the Quadro-Centennial (Select).

He also presented a petition of the Farmers' Institute of Howard County, Iowa, praying for the passage of the antioption bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. QUAY presented petitions of the Paint and Drug Club of Pittsburg and the Trades League of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the passage of the Torrey bankruptcy bill; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Board of Trade, praying for the repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of Capt. Henry F. Picking, Garrison No. 8, Regular Army and Navy Union, of Erie, Pa., praying Congress to further amend the law retiring enlisted men of the Army and Marine Corps of the United States after thirty years' honorable service; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. CULLOM presented petitions of Cigar-Makers' Union No. 38, of Springfield, Ill., and of Local Union No. 788, of Illinois, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, praying for the opening of the World's Columbian Exposition on Sunday; which were referred to the Committee on the Quadro-Centennial (Select).

He also presented a petition of South Fiatt Grange, No. 1644, Patrons of Husbandry, of Illinois, praying for the passage of the antioption bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of business men and citizens of Mendota, Ill., praying that the purchase of silver under the so-called Sherman act be immediately discontinued; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of citizens of Jasper, Wayne, Hamilton, Monroe, Jefferson, and Moultrie Counties, all in the State of Illinois, praying for the appointment of a Senate committee to investigate the combine formed to depreciate the price of grain now existing between the millers, railroads, elevators, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. DANIEL presented a petition of business men of Norfolk, Va., praying for the repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MORRILL. I am instructed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3500) to amend an act entitled "An act to credit and pay to the several States and Territories and District of Columbia all moneys collected under the direct tax levied by the act of Congress, approved August 5, 1861," approved March 2, 1891, to report adversely thereon. I ask, however, that the bill be placed on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar with the adverse report of the committee.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5504) to permit the withdrawal of certain papers and the signing of certain receipts by John Finn or his attorney, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Claims; which was agreed to.

Mr. MCMILLAN. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom the subject was referred, to submit a report accompanied by a bill to authorize reassessments for local improvements in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes. I ask that the bill be read twice, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The bill (S. 3764) to authorize reassessments for local improvements in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8275) granting a pension to Abraham B. Simmons, of Capt. Thomas Tripp's company, in Col. Brisbane's regiment, South Carolina Volunteers, in the Florida Indian war, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6508) granting a pension to Joseph Fortier, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 929) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary E. Donaldson, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 7036) granting a pension to Lillie Ries, late a nurse at Jefferson Barracks;

A bill (H. R. 4047) granting a pension to Ellen Hewett;

A bill (H. R. 2407) granting a pension to Samuel Luttrell; and

A bill (H. R. 2400) granting a pension to Willis Luttrell.

PROOF IN PENSION CASES.

Mr. SAWYER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10189) relating to proof of citizenship of applicants for Indian war pensions under the act of Congress, approved July 27, 1892, to report it without amendment. This is a short bill, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Commissioner of Pensions to accept as sufficient proof of the citizenship of an applicant for pension under the act of July 27, 1892, the fact that such applicant at the date of the application was an actual and bona fide resident of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DEATH OF MR. JUSTICE LAMAR.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has received a communication from the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, January 24, 1893.

The VICE-PRESIDENT:

It becomes my painful duty to inform the Vice-President and the Senate of the death of Mr. Justice Lamar, which occurred at 8.50 o'clock last night at Macon, Ga.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,
MELVILLE W. FULLER,
Chief Justice of the United States.

Mr. WALTHALL. Mr. President, that the death of the great man just announced—great, sir, in every sense—is a public calamity, will be agreed by men of all shades of opinion throughout the country which he served so well. But it is in Mississippi that this affliction will be most keenly and severely felt. Sir, he was the pride of that State, to whose name he brought so much of credit during his long career of usefulness and honor in public positions of the highest responsibility and trust. He was the idol of the people of his State. They admired him for his rare gifts and his uncommon powers; they were grateful to him for services which they believe and I believe no other man could have rendered them as he did and when he did; and they loved him and trusted him for the sublime courage, the fidelity, generosity, and honor which signalized as well his private as his public life.

Mr. President, on this occasion I may not speak at large of his private life or of his public service, but I may be permitted on behalf of Mississippi and of all her people to thank the Senate in advance for the action which I know will soon be taken in adjourning as a mark of respect to his memory.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. President, this is not the occasion for any extended remarks in reference to the distinguished dead, but I do feel impelled to say that Georgia especially sympathizes with her sister State, Mississippi, in the deep sense of the loss we have sustained.

Judge Lamar's life began in Georgia. His distinguished ancestry make a part of her history. Around his name in early manhood were clustered the hopes of our people. They have naturally followed his career with the deep interest that would attach to a career so illustrious, so brilliant, so exceptionally beneficial to his country. As a mother weeps, so Georgia weeps at the death of this great man.

Sir, it was my fortune to know him and love him. It is the fortune of Georgia to have given to this Union the man who has just passed away with an immortal glory around his name and with the blessings of his entire countrymen of every section forever to follow him.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, in view of the sad announcement which has been made to the Senate and as a proper mark of respect to the memory of the deceased justice, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 28 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, January 25, 1893, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, January 24, 1893.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

REFUND OF CUSTOMS DUTIES.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a detailed statement of the refund of customs duties, etc., for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892; which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

POST-OFFICE BUILDING, HOULTON, ME.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a statement as to the United States custom-house and post-office building at Houlton, Me.; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

THOMAS READY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting copy of a bill for the relief of Thomas Ready, and recommending its approval; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

PURCHASE OF INDIAN SUPPLIES, ETC.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Secretary of War, transmitting statement prepared by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, showing open market purchases of goods and supplies for the Indian service during the fiscal year 1892; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

WASHINGTON AND GEORGETOWN RAILROAD COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a communication from the president of the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company, showing the receipts, etc., of said road for the year ending December 31, 1892; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

BRIGHTWOOD RAILROAD COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a communication from the president of the Brightwood Railroad Company, showing the operations of said road for the year ending December 31, 1892; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House certified copies of the ascertainment of electors in the States of Michigan and Louisiana, transmitted by the Secretary of State; which were severally ordered to lie upon the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3727) to amend an act authorizing the construction of a railway, street railway, motor, wagon, and pedestrian bridge over the Missouri River, near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Nebr.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of that bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 8 of the act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of a railway, street railway, motor, wagon, and pedestrian bridge over the Missouri River, near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Nebr.," be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 8. That this act shall be null and void if construction of said bridge shall not be commenced on or before the 1st day of January, 1892, and be completed on or before the 1st day of July, 1898: Provided, That the navigation of the Missouri River shall not be obstructed by false works during the construction of the bridge."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, and being read read the third time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. BRYAN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection the corresponding House bill (H. R. 10117) will be laid on the table.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

The SPEAKER laid before the House Senate bills and a joint resolution of the following titles; which were severally read a first and second time, ordered to be printed, and referred to the committees named below:

Joint resolution (S. R. 134) authorizing the loan, for exhibition at the World's Columbian Exposition, of the picture entitled "The Recall of Columbus," by Augustus G. Heaton—to the Committee on the World's Columbian Exposition.

A bill (S. 1948) authorizing the Southern Kansas Railway Company to construct and maintain a pipe line from the North Fork of the Canadian River, Indian Territory, to said railway—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

A bill (S. 3690) to incorporate the Tabernacle Society of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

A bill (S. 3383) to amend the act of May 6, 1890, fixing the rate of interest to be charged on arrearages of general and special taxes now due the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

TESTIMONY IN INTERSTATE-COMMERCE CASES, ETC

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 1933) concerning testimony in criminal cases or proceedings based upon or growing out of alleged violations of an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, as amended March 2, 1889, and February 10, 1891, the Senate having disagreed to the House amendments, and asked for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee. I move that the House insist on its amendments and agree to the conference asked for.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. WISE, Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee, and Mr. STORER.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. BROWN of Maryland, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the call of committees for reports be dispensed with this morning, and that gentlemen desiring to submit reports be permitted to file them with the Clerk.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of general appropriation bills.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, pending that motion I desire to make a proposition relating to the business of the House. It is well known that to-day and to-morrow were, by a previous order of the House, set apart for the consideration of the bankruptcy bill. Exception was made in favor of general appropriation bills. Now, I do not care to raise the question of consideration, provided we can reach an agreement which will facilitate business. I ask unanimous consent, therefore, that Thursday be substituted for to-day, so that Wednesday and Thursday may be given to the consideration of the bankruptcy bill, and let the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] go on with his appropriation bill to-day, if that be agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think that is a very proper proposition, inasmuch as to-day ought to be devoted to the consideration of the sundry civil bill, so that it may be laid before the Senate at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. BURROWS. There ought to be no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES], which is that the order heretofore made assigning to-day for the consideration of the bankruptcy bill be vacated, and that Thursday be substituted for to-day, so that Wednesday and Thursday, subject to the same limitation as in the original order, may be given to the consideration of the bankruptcy bill.

Mr. CRAIN. I object.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I wish to submit a request for unanimous consent. As the House well knows, the Committee on the District of Columbia was cut out of its day yesterday. Next Monday happens to be the fifth Monday of the month, and there is no appointment, under the rules, for any particular business on that day. The Committee on the District of Columbia have some measures of consequence to be considered, one of which will probably increase the revenues of the District about $200,000 this year if we can get the bill through, and I ask unanimous consent that next Monday be devoted to business reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia the same as if it were the fourth Monday in the month.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will add to that the provision that it shall not interfere with the appropriation bills.

Mr. HEMPHILL. That is not the rule of the House with reference to District day.

Mr. BLOUNT. We are not talking about the rules of the House. The gentleman from South Carolina is requesting unanimous consent now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the request.

Mr. BLOUNT. I shall object unless that modiffcation is made.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Then I will have to make that modification.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the request as modified. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] asks unanimous consent that Monday next, being the fifth Monday in the month, be assigned to the consideration of such business as may be reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, subject to the right to consider general appropriation bills. Is there objection?

Mr. CRAIN. Is not that suspension day?

The SPEAKER. No; it is the fifth Monday in the month. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I object.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The following reports of committees were handed in at the Clerk's desk, referred to their appropriate Calendars, and otherwise disposed of, as indicated below:

TRESTLE ACROSS THE SHOAL WATER BETWEEN CEDAR POINT AND DAUPHIN ISLAND.

Mr. CRAIN, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 10289) to amend an act entitled "An act to grant to the Mobile and Dauphin Island Railroad and Harbor Company the right to trestle across the shoal water between Cedar Point and Dauphin Island," approved September 26, 1890; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC WORKS ON RIVERS AND HARBORS.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE, from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 10241) to amend "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved July 13, 1892; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CARACAS AWARDS.

Mr. CHIPMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back favorably the bill (S. 2454) for the application of the accretions of the Caracas rewards of 1868 to the new awards made in 1889 and 1890; which was aferred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, SAVANNAH, GA.

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 9756) to provide for the amendment of act of Congress approved January 21, 1891, in regard to the sale of the old site of the public building at Savannah, Ga.; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADMISSION OF UTAH AS A STATE.

Mr. MANSUR, from the Committee on the Territories, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 10190) to enable the people of Utah to form a constitution and State government, and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying reports, ordered to be printed.

INVESTIGATION OF CERTAIN BANKS.

Mr. BACON submitted a report from the Committee on Banking and Currency under a resolution directing the investigation of certain banks; which was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

POSTAL MONEY-ORDER SYSTEM.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina, from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, reported back favorably a bill (H. R. 10245) to modify the postal money-order system; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PROTECTION OF PERSONS FURNISHING MATERIALS AND LABOR FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Mr. LAYTON, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 9491) for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

REPRINT OF A BILL.

Mr. COX of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask that there be a reprint of the bill (H. R. 10143) and the reports upon it, the copies in the document room having been exhausted. I ask that 500 copies of the bill and report be printed.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill concerning which the request is made.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10143) to increase the circulation of national banks, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks for a reprint of this bill and the report accompanying it, containing the views of the majority and minority. Is there objection.

Mr. SIMPSON. I object.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago I asked unanimous consent that Thursday be substituted for to-day for the consideration of the bankruptcy bill, and objection was made. I desire to know if I can not now submit a motion to that effect, to be voted on by the House?

The SPEAKER. It is not in order.

Mr. OATES. Well, then, Mr. Speaker, it is perfectly apparent that if the time which has been set apart for the consideration of the bankruptcy bill be not allowed, there is very little chance of bankruptcy legislation at this session of Congress, and I raise the question of consideration.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will the gentleman allow me a word?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] that the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is to go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of an appropriation bill, and the question of consideration can not be raised on that motion.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. But it can be voted down.

The SPEAKER. It is with the House.

Mr. OATES. If the motion should not be agreed to, then it will be in order to proceed to the consideration of the bankruptcy bill?

The SPEAKER. Unless some other appropriation bill antagonizes it.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a suggestion to the gentleman from Alabama, and it is this: That if to-morrow the measure of the gentleman shall develop sufficient strength to go through the House he can get a recess until the next day. It is of the highest importance that this appropriation bill should be passed at the earliest moment.

Mr. REED. Why have you not had it in before, then?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of general appropriation bills.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is in doubt.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 92, noes 82.

Mr. LODGE. The yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 107, nays 128, not voting 94; as follows:

Mr. DICKERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a recapitulation of the vote.

The SPEAKER. After the announcement, the Chair thinks it would not be in order unless the gentleman states that he was rising for that purpose.

Mr. DICKERSON. I was attempting to do so as quick as I could, but I shall not insist.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 10189) relating to proof of citizenship of applicants for Indian war pensions under the act of Congress, approved July 27, 1892.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 1631) to establish a life-saving station at Gay Head, on the coast of Massachusetts;

A bill (S. 3117) relating to post traderships;

A bill (S. 3581) to amend an act entitled "An act to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes;" and Joint resolution (S. R. 135) making an appropriation of $5,000 for clearing the Potomac River of ice.

DEATH OF MR. JUSTICE LAMAR.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will lay before the House a communication from the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Clerk read as follows:

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, January 24, 1893.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives:

It becomes my painful duty to communicate information of the death of Mr. Justice Lamar, which occurred at Macon, Ga., at 8.50 o'clock last evening.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

MELVILLE W. FULLER,
Chief Justice of the United States.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, we have all heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of one of the most distinguished men this country has produced in our day, Justice L. Q. C. Lamar, of the Supreme Court of the United States.

A man Mississippi was proud to honor with a seat in this House for many years, and afterward with the proud position of her Senator until he was called to a position in the Cabinet, and afterward to be a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; all of which positions he filled with distinguished ability and fidelity. And as a mark of respect to the memory of him whom we all admire so much, and those of us who knew him love so well, I move this House do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. DOLPH, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, the amendment increasing the amount provided for the enforcement of the Chinese exclusion act, reported it favorably, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3531) to amend the charter of the Brightwood Railway Company, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. 3765) to provide for annual reports by certain corporations in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6649) to extend the provisions of an act to provide for the muster and pay of certain officers and enlisted men of the volunteer forces, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3506) for the relief of John Palmier, Pine Ridge, Shannon County, S. Dak., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BUTLER, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 66) for the relief of Commodore Oscar C. Badger, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I desire to state that this is not a unanimous report from the Committee on Naval Affairs; and I shall be obliged to the Senator making the report if he will advise me before he calls up the bill for action by the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. HARRIS. The Committee on the District of Columbia directed the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON], who is now necessarily absent from the Chamber, to report an amendment making an appropriation for the collection and removal of garbage and dead animals, to be proposed to the appropriation bill providing for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia. The Senator from Virginia requested me for him and in his name to report the amendment, which I do. I move that the amendment be printed, and that it, with the accompanying papers, be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HALE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred an amendment providing for a further increase of the naval establishment of the United States to be proposed to the naval appropriation bill, reported it with amendments and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 7234) granting a pension to Mary Millard;

A bill (H. R. 1318) granting a pension to Martha A. Harris; and

A bill (H. R. 7257) granting a pension to Alonzo D. Barber.

Mr. WALTHALL, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7625) for relief of certain settlers on public lands in the Tucson land district in Arizona, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8268) to amend chapter 559, page 1095, volume 26, United States Statutes at Large, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. TURPIE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6272) to pension Susan S. Murphy, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PLATT, from the Committee on Territories, to whom was referred an amendment submitted by Mr. DOLPH on the 21st instant, providing for an appropriation of $5,000 for the protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported it favorably and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and printed; which was agreed to.

ELECTRIC RAILROADS.

Mr. MORRILL. I am directed by the Committee on Finance to ask to have referred to that committee the bill (S. 3561) to encourage the construction of electric railroads, to facilitate the rapid transportation of the mails, to promote the interests of commerce and travel, and to aid in demonstrating the feasibility of the distribution of electrical power for agricultural and other purposes along the line of electric roads, and especially to aid in the construction of a pioneer electric railroad between the cities of Chicago and St. Louis, by the Chicago and St. Louis Electric Railroad Company, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes at the existing rates.

Mr. FRYE. I call the attention of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] to the request which has just been made by the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. MORRILL. I have already called the attention of the Senator from Missouri to it.

Mr. VEST. Let the bill go to the Committee on Finance.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Finance, in the absence of objection.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA COURT OF APPEALS.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10010) to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, to report it favorably with an amendment. I desire to ask unanimous consent that the amendment may be adopted in order that a conference may be had.

I will explain the matter, if the Senate will permit me. The other House, by an inadvertance (the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee having been kept away by illness in his family), instead of passing the Senate bill with two or three amendments, passed a new bill, which is substantially the Senate bill.

There are two or three differences. One of them is the provision in regard to the power of the court of appeals over injunctions. We provided that the court of appeals might revise the action of a single judge in granting or dissolving injunctions. The House expression is "in granting injunctions and the like," which is very vague, like the old term "and so forth," which sometimes used to creep into legislation.

Then the other House used a very inexact expression in regard to the granting of appeals in interference cases. I think all the members of the Senate committee agree that in patent cases where there is a judgment in regard to an interference, there ought to be an appeal to the higher court.

The third difference, which is a trifling one, is that the House bill has made no distinction between the salary of the chief justice and the associate justices. The chief justice has some special duties, and in the bill as it passed the Senate there was an addition of $500 to his salary.

So, in substance, I make the ordinary request, which is always granted by the Senate, that the Senate nonconcur and ask a conference with the other House. I suggest that the House bill be passed with the Senate amendment as a substitute, and that a conference be had.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 10010) to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the committee will be read.

The CHIEF-CLERK. The committee report to strike out all after the enacting clause of the House bill and insert a substitute, the substitute being Senate bill 1185.

Mr. HOAR. If any Senator thinks the substitute should be read, that course had better be taken.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is not very long?

Mr. HOAR. It is not very long. The bill has already passed the Senate without any substantial dissent. If Senators desire to have it read again it can be read.

The amendment was read, it being to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That there shall be, and there is hereby, established in the District of Columbia a court, to be known as the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, which shall consist of one chief justice and two associate justices, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the consent and advice of the Senate, and shall hold office during good behavior.

SEC. 2. That the said justices shall each receive an annual salary of $6,000, payable quarterly at the Treasury of the United States, except the chief justice, who shall receive $6,500.

SEC. 3. That each of said justices, before he enters upon the duties of his office, shall take the oath prescribed by law to be taken by the judges of the courts of the United States.

SEC. 4. That there shall be a clerk of said court of appeals, to be appointed by the court, who shall receive as compensation for his services, in the discretion of the court, an annual salary not to exceed the sum of $3,000, payable quarterly at the Treasury of the United States, and who shall give bond, such as the court may determine to be satisfactory, for the faithful performance of his duties; and his duties shall be such as the court may from time to time prescribe. The court shall regulate from time to time the fees to be charged by the said clerk, which shall be accounted for at least once in each quarter and paid into the Treasury of the United States; and said clerk shall receive such allowance for clerical assistance and necessary expenditures in the conduct of his office as the court may determine by special or general order in the premises, but not to exceed the sum of $2,000 in any one year, payable as aforesaid, at the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 5. That said court of appeals may appoint a crier at a compensation not to exceed $100 a month, and a messenger at a compensation not to exceed $60 a month, both payable at the Treasury of the United States, who shall perform such duties as may be assigned them by the court.

SEC. 6. That the said court of appeals shall establish such terms of the court, not less than three in each year, as to it may seem proper and expedient; and it shall make such rules and regulations as may be necessary and proper for the transaction of the business to be brought before it, and for the time and method of the entry of appeals and for giving notice of appeals thereto from the suppreme court of the District of Columbia, and such other rules and regulations as may be necessary and proper in the premises.

If any member of the court shall be absent on account of illness or other cause during the session thereof, or shall be disqualified from hearing and determining any particular cause by having been of counsel therein, or by having as a justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia previously passed upon the merits thereof, or for any other reason whatever, or if for any reason whatever it shall be impracticable to obtain a full court of three justices, the member or members of the court who shall be present shall designate a justice or justices of the supreme court of the District of Columbia to temporarily fill the vacancy or vacancies so created, and the justice or justices so designated shall sit in said court of appeals and perform the duties of a member thereof while such vacancy or vacancies shall exist: Provided, That no justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia shall, while on the bench of said court of appeals, sit in review of any judgment, decree, or order which he shall have himself entered or made.

SEC. 7. That any party agrieved by any final order, judgment, or decree of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, or of any justice thereof, may appeal therefrom to the court of appeals hereby created; and upon such appeal the court of appeals shall review such order, judgment, or decree, and affirm, reverse, or modify the same as shall be just: Provided, however, That all causes now pending before the said supreme court in general term shall by appropriate orders duly entered of record be transferred and delivered to the court of appeals hereby created, which said court of appeals is hereby vested with authority and jurisdiction to hear and determine the causes so transferred. The appellate power and jurisdiction of said general term is hereby abrogated and abolished and no causes shall hereafter be heard in the said general term. Appeals shall also be allowed to said court of appeals from all interlocutory orders of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, or by any justice thereof, whereby the possession of property is changed or affected, such as orders for the appointment of receivers, granting or dissolving injunctions, dissolving writs of attachment, and also from any other interlocutory order, in the discretion of said court of appeals, whenever it is made to appear to said court upon petition that it will be in the interest of justice to allow such appeal. In all cases of appeal to the court of appeals and in the causes transferred to the court of appeals under this section the original papers and duly certified copies of the necessary record entries shall be transferred and delivered to the court of appeals under such regulations as the court of appeals shall from time to time prescribe.

SEC. 8. That any final judgment or decree of the said court of appeals may be reëxamined and affirmed, reversed, or modified by the Supreme Court of the United States, upon writ of error or appeal, in all causes in which the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, shall exceed the sum of $5,000, in the same manner and under the same regulations as heretofore provided for in cases of writs of error on judgment or appeals from decrees rendered in the supreme court of the District of Columbia; and also in all cases, without regard to the sum or value of the matter in dispute, wherein is involved the validity of any patent or copyright, or in which is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of or an authority exercised under the United States.

SEC. 9. That the determination of appeals from the decision of the Commissioner of Patents, now vested in the aforesaid general term of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in pursuance of the provisions of section 780 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to said District, shall hereafter be, and the same is hereby, vested in the court of appeals hereby created.

SEC. 10. That the opinion of the said court of appeals in every case shall be reduced in writing, duly authenticated, and filed with the clerk of said court before any judgment, decree, or order shall be entered in pursuance thereof.

SEC. 11. That the said court of appeals shall have power to issue all necessary and proper remedial and prerogative writs in aid of its appellate jurisdiction.

SEC. 12. That the Attorney-General is hereby empowered and directed to provide suitable rooms and accommodations in the city of Washington for the court of appeals hereby created, and for the transaction of its business.

SEC. 13. That the marshal of the United States for the District of Columbia shall execute the orders and processes of the court of appeals hereby created in the same manner as he now executes those of the supreme court of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 14. That the justices of the supreme court of the District of Columbia shall hereafter receive an annual salary of $5,000 each, payable quarterly at the Treasury of the United States, except the chief justice, who shall receive $5,500.

SEC. 15. That whenever the number of the justices of the supreme court of the District of Columbia is, by death, resignation, retirement, or otherwise, reduced to five, the said supreme court of the District of Columbia shall thereafter consist of one chief justice and four associate justices, who shall be assigned by the said court annually, or as often as may be deemed expedient, to the several special terms thereof.

SEC. 16. That the justices of the court of appeals hereby created and of the supreme court of the District of Columbia shall be deemed to be justices of the courts of the United States within the meaning of the law providing for the retirement of such justices upon their attaining the age of 70 years and having been in commission ten years or upward. And whenever any justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia shall be appointed a justice of the court of appeals hereby created the terms of service of such justice in both courts shall be deemed continuous and as under one commission for the purposes of said law.

SEC. 17. That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. HOAR, Mr. WILSON, and Mr. PUGH were appointed.

PARIS EXPOSITION REPORTS.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a concurrent resolution for printing extra copies of the reports of the commissioners of the United States to the Paris Exposition of 1889, to report it with amendments, and I ask for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution, submitted by Mr. MANDERSON on the 16th instant; which was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That in addition to the usual number there shall be printed 5,000 extra copies of the reports of the commissioners of the United States to the Paris Exposition of 1889, 1,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House, and 2,000 copies for the use of the Department of State.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 3, strike out "5,000" and insert "5,500;" in line 6, strike out "1,000" and insert "1,500;" in line 6, strike out "2,000" and insert "3,000;" and in line 7, strike out "2,000" and insert "1,000;" so as to make the resolution read:

That in addition to the usual number there shall be printed 5,500 extra copies of the reports of the commissioners of the United States to the Paris Exposition of 1889, 1,500 copies for the use of the Senate, 3,000 copies for the use of the House, and 1,000 copies for the use of the Department of State.

The amendments were agreed to.

The concurrent resolution as amended was agreed to.

DISTRICT BOARD OF CHARITIES.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am instructed by the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3530) to create a board of charities for the District of Columbia, to report it favorably without amendment, and submit a report thereon. As it is important that speedy action should be taken on this measure, which is recommended by the District Commissioners and the commissioner of charities, I ask that it be immediately considered. I think there will be no objection to it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.

Mr. MITCHELL. I shall reserve the right to object if it leads to any debate.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think the bill will not be objected to when it is read.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill be read for information.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am quite sure the bill will lead to debate. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire to let it go over until to-morrow.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will withdraw the report, by unanimous consent.

Mr. COCKRELL. This is an important bill. I hope the Senator will have the report printed and that we may see the bill just as it is proposed to be passed. Otherwise it may be delayed another morning, for I shall certainly want to see the report before I agree to the passage of the bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then let the report be printed and the bill be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill lie on the table, subject to be called up, and not be placed on the calendar.

Mr. GALLINGER. Very well.

Mr. VEST. I desire to make a single remark before the bill goes over. I wish to call the attention of the Senate, or a majority of it, to the fact that during the closing hours of the last session of Congress a bill was passed through the Senate, the contents of which I undertake to say not ten Senators knew, establishing a board of charities in the District of Columbia with most extraordinary powers, giving them authority which I am satisfied a majority of the Senate would never have committed to them. Therefore it becomes a matter of the greatest importance that the contents of this bill, which I do not know, should be well known to the Senate before any additional action is taken.

Mr. GALLINGER. The committee of which I am a member are very desirous that the Senate shall understand everything they report. I am quite willing the report shall be printed and examined before the bill is considered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will lie on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3727) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of a railway, street railway, motor, wagon, and pedestrian bridge over the Missouri River, near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Nebr." and to extend the time for the completion of the bridge therein provided for.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 1933) concerning testimony in criminal cases or proceedings based upon or growing out of alleged violations of an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, as amended March 2, 1889, and February 10, 1891, disagreed to by the Senate, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. WISE, Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee, and Mr. STORER managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 9757) granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 1631) to establish a life-saving station at Gay Head, on the coast of Massachusetts;

A bill (S. 3117) relating to post traderships;

A bill (S. 3581) to amend an act entitled "An act to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes;"

A bill (H. R. 10007) to provide for lowering the height of a bridge proposed to be constructed across the Ohio River between Cincinnati, Ohio, and Covington, Ky., by the Cincinnati and Covington Rapid Transit Company; and Joint resolution (S. R. 135) making an appropriation of $5,000 to clear the Potomac River of ice.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. FAULKNER introduced a bill (S. 3766) to enable the people of Utah to form a constitution and State government, and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3767) to amend "An act to provide for the incorporation of trust, loan, mortgage, and certain other corporations within the District of Columbia;" which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3768) relative to voluntary assignments by debtors for the benefit of creditors in the District of Columbia, and to amend section 782 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. DAVIS introduced a bill (S. 3769) relative to voluntary assignments by debtors for the benefit of creditors in the District of Columbia, and to amend section 782 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a bill (S. 3770) for the appointment of officers of the United States Army on the retired list as Indian agents; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3771) to change the name of a portion of reservation No. 1, in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a bill (S. 3772) for the relief of Maj. Gen. John C. Robinson, authorizing the Secretary of War to place him on the retired list of the Army with the full rank and pay of a major-general; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3773) to ratify and confirm an agreement made between the Seneca Nation of Indians and William B. Barker; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PLATT (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3774) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to contract for the building of an Ericsson Destroyer; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. VEST introduced a bill (S. 3775) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the St. Louis River between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, near the village of West Duluth; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HARRIS (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3776) to amend the charter of the District of Columbia Railway Company; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 139) authorizing the Secretary of War to make use of an unexpended balance in deepening the harbor at Oswego, N. Y.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. MITCHELL. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. 1036) for the benefit of Logan, Simpson, Hardin, and Hart Counties and the city of Louisville, Ky., and of Sumner and Davidson Counties, Tenn. The amendment is a proposed substitute for the bill as reported from the Committee on Claims. I move that the amendment lie on the table and be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TURPIE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MANDERSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying papers, referred o the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. VOORHEES submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

DEFICIENCY PAY OF SESSION CLERKS.

Mr. DOLPH. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the bill (H. R. 10258) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, and for prior years, and for other purposes. The amendment is as follows:

To pay clerks to Senators and per diem clerks to committees retained in the service of the Senate during the recess of the Fifty-first Congress, under resolution of the Senate of September 30, 1890, $21,600.

I beg leave to occupy the time of the Senate a moment to state the matter. On the 30th day of September, 1890—I quote from the Journal—

Mr. JONES of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by Mr. TELLER, August 29, 1890, to pay the salaries of the per diem clerks during the recess of Congress, reported it with an amendment.

The Senate proceeded, by unanimous consent, to consider the said resolution; and the reported amendment having been agreed to, the resolution as amended was agreed to, as follows:

"Resolved, That the per diem clerks to the committees of the Senate and the clerks of Senators be retained in the service of the Senate during the coming recess, and that the Secretary of the Senate is hereby authorized and directed to pay out of the contingent fund of the Senate the per diem now allowed such clerks by law during the sessions of the Senate."

This resolution having been passed, the session clerks of committees and secretaries of Senators were retained in service during the recess of Congress, about two months. The contingent fund of the Senate having been exhausted, none of the clerks or secretaries were paid. Most of them remained in the city, and, as I happen to know in regard to several, borrowed money from their friends to pay their expenses during the recess. The obligation to pay these clerks and secretaries is just as binding, I suppose, as any obligation of the Government.

At the next session of Congress, in the deficiency appropriation bill, House bill 9284, an amendment was inserted by the Senate Committee on Appropriations similar to the one I now propose as an amendment to the next deficiency bill; but it was dropped out in conference, the House conferees refusing to agree to it.

I desire to call the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and the members of that committee to this amendment. I hope it will be adopted by the committee and that it will be insisted on in conference. I can not believe that the House of Representatives will oppose so just an amendment, an amendment which is necessary to enable the Government to deal honestly by these men, and which refers alone to a matter which the Senate ought to be allowed to control for itself.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The proposed amendment will be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, it was—

Ordered, That Philip Hawk be permitted to withdraw his papers from the files of the Senate.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 23d instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 1292) to remit the penalties on the light-house steamer Pansy; and

An act (S. 3580) to amend the proviso to be found in connection with the free-delivery service, page 569, twenty-fourth volume, Statutes at Large.

The message also announced that the President had this day approved and signed the act (S. 3537) for the relief of M. P. Deady.

CONSULAR FEES.

Mr. DOLPH submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be directed to inform the Senate what fees of officers in the consular service of the United States are regulated by law, and the rules of the Department, the amount of fees allowed in such cases, and what rules have been made on that subject; what fees are required by law and regulations of the Department to be reported to the Department; what fees or charges, if any, are collected by such officers not required to be reported and not reported to the Department; the aggregate amount of fees reported by each of said officers for the last fiscal year; what fees, if any, were collected by such officers which are not fixed by law or the regulations of the Department; whether the fees should not be reduced at the principal consulates; and what further legislation is required to regulate the amount of fees and charges collected by such officers, and prevent unjust and unreasonable charges.

NORTHERN PACIFIC INDEMNITY LANDS, ETC.

Mr. HANSBROUGH submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the Senate, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, directed to report to the Senate the area of lands excluded from the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company in each State traversed by said railroad because reserved, granted, or otherwise appropriated, or to which claims or rights had attached prior to July 2, 1864; also the area of lands excluded from said grant by similar causes arising subsequent to July 2, 1864, the area of the different reservations and grants by reason of which lands are held excluded from such grant to be separately given; also the estimated area of lands excluded from said grant as mineral.

Also the area of surveyed lands within the first indemnity limits of said grant in each State selected by said railroad company; the area of such surveyed first indemnity lands in each State now remaining subject to its right of selection; and the estimated area of the unsurveyed first indemnity lands in each State which will probably become subject to said right of selection.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 9757) granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Epidemic Diseases.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After four hours and ten minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, January 26, 1893, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 25, 1893.

TRANSFERS IN THE ARMY.

Capt. James N. Allison, Second Cavalry, to be commissary of subsistence with the rank of captain, January 24, 1893, with rank from January 7, 1893, vice Howard, transferred to the Quartermaster's Department.

Capt. John B. Eaton, assistant quartermaster, to be captain of cavalry, January 24, 1893, with rank from December 20, 1892, vice Allison, Second Cavalry, transferred to the Subsistence Department.

Capt. Guy Howard, commissary of subsistence, to be assistant quartermaster with the rank of captain, January 24, 1893, with rank from January 7, 1893, vice Eaton, transferred to the Second Cavalry.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, January 25, 1893.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

THE JOURNAL.

The Clerk proceeded to read the Journal in the usual manner.

Mr. KILGORE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, the yeas and nays were called yesterday, and I observe that the Clerk has not read the names of members voting. I ask that they be read as a part of the Journal.

The Clerk read the names.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, the Clerk has not read that portion of the Journal included under the headings "Change of reference," "Bills, memorials, and resolutions," "Private bills, etc.," "Petitions, etc." They are part of the Journal, as I understand, and it is the right of any member to have them read in open session.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman desire to have them read?

Mr. KILGORE. I do.

Mr. O'NEILL of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will not require that the long list of petitions for the opening of the World's Fair on the Sabbath day shall be read. They seem to have been collected in masses and there are pages of them in the RECORD of to-day and of preceding days. I trust that the gentleman does not desire to have them read.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order. The rules provide that each morning the Journal of the preceding session shall be read. It has been the custom, in reading the Journal, to omit the yeas and nays and the other matters referred to by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE], but if the gentleman demands the reading of the Journal in full it must be read.

Mr. O'NEILL of Pennsylvania. Well, Mr. Speaker, I request that the reading of those petitions be omitted.

Mr. DINGLEY. Does the Chair regard the petitions, which have been presented through the box, as a part of the Journal which the gentleman can require to have read?

The SPEAKER. They are all entered in the Journal.

The Clerk read the portions of the Journal indicated by Mr. KILGORE.

The SPEAKER. Unless objection be made the Journal as read will be approved.

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] objects to the approval of the Journal.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I move that the Journal be approved, and on that I ask for the previous question.

Mr. BRETZ. Mr. Speaker, before the question is put, I desire to have the Journal and the RECORD corrected. On page 860 I am recorded as not voting. I was present and voted yea.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that the correction has already been made in the Journal, and it will be made in the RECORD also.

The question was taken on ordering the previous question on the motion of Mr. OATES; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to prevail.

Mr. KILGORE. I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 136, noes 3.

Mr. KILGORE. A quorum has not voted, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair appoints to act as tellers the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE].

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 215, nays 3, not voting 111; as follows:

Mr. JONES with Mr. TOWNSEND.

Mr. MUTCHLER with Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa; Mr. MUTCHLER against the bill and Mr. HENDERSON for it.

Mr. O'FERRALL with Mr. ENOCHS, until Thursday, January 26.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The question was taken on the approval of the Journal; and the Speaker declared that the ayes seemed to prevail.

Mr. KILGORE. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 168, noes none; so the Journal as read was approved.

PAYMENT OF NOTARIAL FEES.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a communication from the Commissioner of Customs in relation to the estimate for payment of notarial fees; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

CATALOGUE OF LIBRARY, SURGEON-GENERAL'S OFFICE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Secretary of War, calling attention to the omission in the sundry civil appropriation bill of the usual appropriation bill for printing the next volume of the index catalogue of the library of the Surgeon-General's Office; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

POTOHUNK RIVER, NORTH CAROLINA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter of the Chief of Engineers with accompanying report of preliminary examination of Potohunk River, North Carolina; which was referred to the Committee on River and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

NAVAJO INDIAN RESERVATION.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to House resolution, information relative to the opening of the Navajo Indian Reservation; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

ADJUDICATED LAND ENTRIES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a list of public entries adjudicated by the Commissioner of the Land Office and confirmed by the Board of Equitable Adjudication during the fiscal year 1892; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT TO INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1894, submitted by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs: which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC PROPERTY ON INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a statement prepared by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, showing property transmitted from one reservation to another; also property sold at the various Indian agencies and schools during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled the bill (H. R. 10189) relating to proof of citizenship of applicants for Indian war pensions under the act of Congress, approved July 27, 1892; when the Speaker signed the same.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment the bill (H. R. 10010) to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the House on the bill and amendment, and had appointed Mr. HOAR, Mr. WILSON, and Mr. PUGH as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

It also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That in addition to the usual number there shall be printed 5,500 copies of the reports of the commissioners of the United States to the Paris Exposition of 1889, 1,500 copies for use of the Senate, 3,000 copies for use of the House, and 1,000 copies for use of the Department of State.

BIG HORN AND SOUTHERN RAILROAD.

Mr. PEEL. I ask unanimous consent that the bill (S. 3317) extending the time for the construction of the Big Horn and Southern Railroad through the Crow Indian Reservation be recommitted to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

There being no objection, it was so ordered.

RAFT-TOWING ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Mr. LOCKWOOD. By request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WISE], chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 124) directing the Secretary of War to investigate the subject of raft-towing on the Great Lakes and their connecting waters. This resolution carries no appropriation whatever, but simply proposes that an inquiry may be made under the direction of the Secretary of War, with a view to the adoption of regulations for the towing of rafts on the Great Lakes.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to appointed a board, to consist of three officers of the Engineer Corps of the Army, to investigate the subject of raft-towing on the Great Lakes and their connecting waters, and to report to Congress as to what restrictions, if any, should be placed upon the size and manner of constructing and towing rafts upon said Great Lakes and their connecting waters.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution.

The question being taken on ordering the joint resolution to a third reading, there were on a division (called for by Mr. KILGORE)—ayes 130, noes none.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. LOCKWOOD and Mr. KILGORE were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 167, noes 1.

So the joint resolution was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time.

The question being taken on the passage of the joint resolution, there were on a division (called for by Mr. KILGORE)—ayes 149, noes 1.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. LOCKWOOD and Mr. KILGORE were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 165, noes 2.

So the joint resolution was passed.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled the bill (S. 3727) to amend "An act authorizing the construction of a railway, street railway, motor, wagon, and pedestrian bridge over the Missouri River near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Nebr., and to extend the time for the completion of the bridge therein provided for;" when the Speaker signed the same.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. OATES. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of standing and select committees for reports.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the regular call of committees be dispensed with, and that gentlemen be permitted to file their reports with the Clerk.

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection being made, the Clerk will call the standing and select committees for the presentation of reports.

REBUILDING OF LOCK NO. 2, GREEN RIVER.

Mr. BLANCHARD, from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, reported back, as a substitute for House bill 10173, a bill (H. R. 10318) providing for rebuilding Lock No. 2, Green River, at Rumsey, Ky.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

By unanimous consent, House bill 10173 was laid on the table.

REORGANIZATION OF ARTILLERY AND INFANTRY.

Mr. OUTHWAITE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back, with an amendment in the form of a substitute, the bill (S. 2170) to reorganize the artillery and infantry of the Army and to increase its efficiency; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PROTECTION OF FUR SEALS, ETC.

Mr. BLOUNT, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back the bill (S. 3629) to extend to the North Pacific Ocean the provisions of the statutes for the protection of fur seals and other fur-bearing animals; which was referred to the House Calendar.

ERIE, PA., WATERWORKS.

Mr. AMERMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back the bill (H. R. 9826) granting certain rights and privileges to the commissioners of waterworks in the city of Erie, Pa.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. This completes the call of the standing and select committees.

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe it is in order now to move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider general appropriation bills?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that the House has adopted a resolution under which yesterday and to-day were assigned to the Committee on the Judiciary for the consideration of the bankruptcy bill, subject to the right of the House to take up and consider general appropriation bills.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to further consider general appropriation bills, if now in order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has the right to make the motion.

Mr. HOLMAN. I make that motion.

Mr. OATES. Pending that I desire to ask of the House, in view of the fact that yesterday was disposed of——

Mr. KILGORE. Debate is not in order.

Mr. OATES (continuing). One of the days set apart for the consideration of this special order——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas, as the Chair understands, makes the point of order that debate is not in order.

Mr. OATES. The gentleman from Texas, Mr. Speaker, is a little previous. I am not debating this question. If he will wait until my request is submitted then it will be time to object.

Mr. KILGORE. But the debate is not in order on a motion to go into Committee of the Whole.

Mr. OATES. The Chair will decide that question and not the gentleman from Texas. I am stating my request, but have not yet been permitted to do so by the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. The motion is not debatable, and if the gentleman from Texas makes the point of order the Chair must take notice of it.

Mr. OATES. I am not indulging in debate and do not propose to, but simply rise to submit a request.

I ask unanimous consent, in order that the appropriation bill may go on and be completed, that to-morrow and the next day be substituted for the two days which, by the order of the House, were given to the Judiciary Committee for the consideration of the bankruptcy bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the request of the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope that will be agreed to, as it is eminently fair.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that to-morrow and the next day be set apart for the consideration of the bankruptcy bill, in place of the two days heretofore given for that purpose. Is there objection?

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

Mr. OATES. Then I hope the motion of the gentleman from Indiana will be voted down.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana, that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to further consider appropriation bills.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 56, noes 102.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum has voted.

Mr. OATES. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BURROWS. We can save time by having tellers.

Mr. OATES. Very well; I will withdraw the demand for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. HOLMAN and Mr. KILGORE were appointed tellers.

Mr. KILGORE. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered, there being 27 rising in favor thereof and 124 against; the affirmative vote not being one-fifth of the whole.

Mr. KILGORE. The point of no quorum has not been withdrawn, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that point is waived, however, by the gentleman when he demands the yeas and nays. [Laughter and applause.] Such has been the practice of the House.

Mr. KILGORE. I am not aware of any such practice.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will invite the attention of the gentleman from Texas and the House to an authority which the Clerk will read from the Digest.

The Clerk read as follows:

When a rising vote is taken, and the Chair announces the result, it is in order for any member, if no quorum has voted, to make the point, and it then becomes the duty of the Chair (under Rule I, clause 5) to appoint tellers. But if tellers are demanded and refused by the House (or committee) it is then too late, under the practice, to make the point of no quorum.

Mr. KILGORE. I move that the House take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman in one moment, as soon as he declares the result of the vote that is pending. On the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] the vote was 56 in the affirmative and 102 in the negative. Therefore the House refuses to go into Committee of the Whole on general appropriation bills.

Mr. KILGORE. And now the Speaker rules, does he, that it is too late for me to make the point of no quorum?

The SPEAKER. The Chair holds that, under the practice of the House, it is too late.

Mr. KILGORE. This is the first time the result has been announced on that vote.

The SPEAKER. Oh, no, the Chair begs the gentleman's pardon. The Chair announced the result. The gentleman made the point of no quorum, and then, as the Chair understood, demanded the yeas and nays.

Mr. KILGORE. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] demanded the yeas and nays, and then withdrew the demand.

The SPEAKER. Under the practice, it is the right of any member to make the point of no quorum; but as the Chair understands it, when a member does not choose to do that, and demands the yeas and nays or demands tellers, the practice is that it is then too late to go back and make the point of no quorum.

Mr. KILGORE. Why should the Speaker announce the result twice if it was announced before the demand for the yeas and nays?

The SPEAKER. The Chair announced it twice because, when the Chair first announced it, the gentleman demanded the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays are now refused. The Chair had to determine what had become of the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

Mr. KILGORE. I modify my motion to take a recess until to-morrow at 11 o'clock, and move that the House take a recess until 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. The noes have it. The motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is not agreed to. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] now moves that the House take a recess until 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The question being taken, the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. KILGORE) there were—ayes 1, noes 143.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, a quorum has not voted.

The Speaker appointed as tellers Mr. KILGORE and Mr. OATES.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 1, noes 108.

The SPEAKER. The House refuses to take a recess. The Clerk will report the special order.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. PIERCE. And pending that, I move that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Friday next.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] moves that the House do now adjourn, and pending that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PIERCE] moves that when the House adjourns it adjourn to meet on Friday next. The question will be taken on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PIERCE].

The question being taken, the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. PIERCE) there were—ayes none, noes 119.

Mr. PIERCE. No quorum.

Mr. POWERS. I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PIERCE] makes the point that no quorum has voted. The Chair will appoint tellers on that point, unless it is withdrawn.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I will ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 0, nays 216, not voting 113; as follows:

So the motion that when the House adjourn it be to meet on Friday next was lost.

The following pairs were announced:

Mr. RICHARDSON with Mr. SWEET, for the rest of the day.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois with Mr. O'NEILL of Missouri, on the bankruptcy bill, this day.

Mr. RAYNER with Mr. TILLMAN, on the bankruptcy bill, for this day. Mr. RAYNER would vote for it and Mr. TILLMAN against it.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. O'NEIL of Massachusetts in the chair). The question now recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Texas that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, pending that motion, I move that when the House adjourns it adjourn until Saturday next.

Mr. PIERCE. Pending that motion, I move that the House take a recess until 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The question was taken on the motion to take a recess, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the "noes" appeared to have it.

Mr. PIERCE. Division, Mr. Speaker.

The House divided; and there were—ayes none, noes 55.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Speaker, no quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will appoint the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PIERCE] and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] to act as tellers. [After a pause.] In the absence of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] the Chair will appoint the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] to act as teller.

The House again divided; and tellers having reported,

Mr. HOLMAN said: Mr. Speaker, the tellers having reported, I suppose it is in order to move a call of the House, there being no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. No quorum being present, the gentleman from Indiana moves a call of the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. HOLMAN. I call for a division.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think perhaps a yea-and-nay vote would verify whether there is a quorum present just as well as a call of the House; and therefore I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PIERCE] that the House take a recess until 5 o'clock this afternoon, and on that the yeas and nays are ordered.

Mr. KILGORE. The yeas and nays were demanded on the motion for a call of the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, no; I withdrew that motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana withdrew the motion for a call of the House. The question before the House is the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PIERCE] that the House take a recess until 5 o'clock this afternoon, and on that the yeas and nays are ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 1, nays 211, not voting 117; as follows:

So the motion to take a recess was not agreed to.

The following additional pair was announced:

Mr. FORNEY with Mr. HENDERSON of Illinois, for the rest of this day.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the vote by which the House refused to take a recess until 5 o'clock this evening.

Mr. REED. Is it not possible for the House to recognize the fact that it is in the hands of a minority, with the result that no business can be transacted? Would it not, therefore, be better to let all of us go about our business since we can not transact the public business? It seems to me it would be wiser.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Rule IX, on page 13 of the Rules of this House, reads as follows:

Questions of privileges shall be, first, those affecting the rights of the House collectively, its safety, dignity, and the integrity of its proceedings, etc.

Now, I make the point of order that this kind of conduct is not in keeping with the dignity of this House or any other House. [Cries of "Oh, no!" and laughter.]

Mr. REED. About any other House, you are right. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair overrules the point of order. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I have not stated my point of order yet. I make this point of order because I observe that the present occupant of the chair is one of the Representatives from New England, where they transact a great deal of business in town meetings. The Speaker knows very well, just as well as he knows the district which he represents, that there is not a town meeting in New England where they assess taxes to remove the snow, to work the roads, to keep the poor——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will request the gentleman to state his point of order.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. I am coming to it. [Laughter.] The point of order I make is this, that there is not a town meeting held anywhere in New England where they would permit such absurd, senseless, disgraceful proceedings as we are witnessing here this afternoon. Nothing is better known to the present occupant of the Chair than this.

Mr. ANDREW. Is the gentleman eulogizing New England or making a point of order?

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. I am making a point of order. We only have a few weeks more of this session. We have a tremendous Calendar here; thousands of bills await consideration. The Calendar shows how many have been reported. Here are great measures in which the country is interested, and yet, Mr. Speaker, we are frittering away the hours of this House at the will of one man, and he a resident of the State of Texas, a long distance away from the great business centers of this country. Is it possible, Mr. Speaker, that one man can stop the legislation of this country? I think it is the duty of the Speaker in a case like this to regard these motions as dilatory. I think the Speaker should prevent this waste of time by refusing to recognize men who make such motions. Let us go on with public business. I insist, Mr. Speaker, that my point is well taken in view of preserving the dignity of this House. School boys will make faces at us and laugh at us when they see the way we attempt to do the business of this country. Even the Indians do better than that [pointing to Chief Wolf of the Palouse tribe in the gallery].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of order. I desire to know whether it is in order or in consonance with the dignity of this House for the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR] to insult my constituents who are in the gallery? [Laughter.]

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That motion is not in order, because the Chair decides that the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PIERCE] to reconsider is not in order; and the question recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] that when the House adjourns it adjourn to meet on Saturday next.

Mr. KILGORE. I understand the Chair to hold that the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee to reconsider the vote just taken is not in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair so holds.

Mr. KILGORE. I must appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has decided that the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PIERCE] is not in order, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] appeals from the decision of the Chair. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the House?

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. KILGORE. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 127, noes 2.

Mr. KILGORE. A quorum has not voted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair appoints to act as tellers the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. MAGNER].

Mr. BOUTELLE (pending the count). Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] take a recess until he has determined what kind of business he is willing to permit the House to transact. [Laughter.]

Mr. KILGORE. The gentleman's suggestion is out of order.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 111, noes 6.

Mr. KILGORE. A quorum has not voted.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, as it is evident that we can not do anything here to-day, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House is dividing, and the motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] is out of order.

Mr. BLAND. I think the motion to adjourn is in order whenever the fact is developed that there is no quorum, and I now make that motion.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Speaker, pending that motion I move that the House take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair must rule that that motion is not in order. The motion to adjourn takes precedence.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. BLAND, that the House do now adjourn; and the Speaker pro tempore declared that the noes seemed to prevail.

Mr. KILGORE. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 49, noes 91.

So the motion to adjourn was rejected.

Mr. POWERS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. TRACEY. Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion of the gentleman from Vermont is not in order.

Mr. POWERS. Why not?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There are two motions before the House which take precedence of the motion to take a recess, and in addition to that, an appeal has been taken from the decision of the Chair. The tellers will resume their places. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the House?

The House again divided.

Mr. BAILEY (after the count had continued for some time). Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the tellers make their report, and if that report discloses the absence of a quorum I intend to move for a call of the House.

The tellers reported—ayes 106, noes 1.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum has voted.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. BAILEY; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. KILGORE. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 9, noes 43.

So the motion for a call of the House was rejected.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays on the question on which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] makes the point that a quorum has not voted.

Mr. KILGORE. That is on the appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question recurs whether the decision of the Chair shall stand as the judgment of the House, and on that question the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 208, nays 6, not voting 115; as follows:

So the decision of the Chair was sustained.

The following additional pair was announced:

Mr. STEVENS with Mr. RANDALL, for the rest of the day.

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Texas, that when the House adjourns it adjourn to meet on Saturday next.

The question being taken, there were on a division (called for by Mr. KILGORE)—ayes 2, noes 65.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum has voted.

Mr. BLAND. I move that the House adjourn. We are without a quorum, and we are doing nothing.

The question being on the motion of Mr. BLAND to adjourn, there were—ayes 93, noes 82.

Mr. OATES. I ask for the yeas and nays on this question.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 65, nays 144, not voting 120, as follows:

So the House refused to adjourn.

The following additional pairs were announced for the rest of the day:

Mr. BYRNS with Mr. LODGE.

Mr. CAUSEY with Mr. STORER.

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. ALEXANDER, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. SWEET, for the rest of the week, on account of illness.

To Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois, for two days, on account of sickness.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. DALZELL, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to withdraw from the files papers accompanying House bill No. 2136, first session, Fiftieth Congress, no action having been taken on said bill.

REPRINT OF BILL AND REPORT.

On motion of Mr. COX of Tennessee, by unanimous consent, it was ordered that 2,000 copies of House bill No. 10143 and the accompanying report be printed for the use of the House, the supply having been exhausted.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question again recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Texas, that when the House adjourns it adjourn to meet on Saturday next. On this question the House was dividing when the gentleman from Texas raised the point that no quorum had voted.

Mr. PIERCE. I move that the House take a recess until 5 o'clock.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair decides that motion is not in order.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. TRACEY and Mr. KILGORE were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 2, noes 75.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, there is no quorum voting.

Mr. BLAND. I must renew my motion to adjourn. We are doing nothing here and can do nothing.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 88, noes 50.

Mr. BOATNER. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 74, nays 118, not voting 137; as follows:

So the House refused to adjourn.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. CALDWELL with Mr. BELKNAP.

Mr. PAYNTER with Mr. HARMER, for the rest of this day.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pending the vote on the motion of the gentleman from Texas, the Chair desires to submit the request of Mr. BEEMAN for leave of absence indefinitely, on account of sickness. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Texas, that when the House adjourns to-day it be to meet on Saturday morning next.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to make a statement to the House.

Mr. KILGORE. So far as I am concerned I do not object, provided it does not affect the status of the pending question.

Mr. OATES. I desire, Mr. Speaker, to state the parliamentary status of this pending question.

The Committee on Rules, in obedience to a petition signed by 221 members of this body, reported an order allowing two days, yesterday and to-day, to the consideration of what is known as the bankruptcy bill. We all know how yesterday was disposed of, and to-day as well. Under the rules of this House, Rule XVI, section 4, it is provided that:

When a question is under debate no motion shall be received but to fix the day to which the House shall adjourn, to adjourn, to take a recess, to lay on the table, for the previous question (which motions shall be decided without debate), to postpone to a day certain, to refer or amend, or to postpone indefinitely, which several motions shall have precedence in the foregoing order; and no motion to postpone to a day certain, to refer, or to postpone indefinitely, being decided, shall be again allowed on the same day at the same stage of the question.

Under that provision every member who has had any experience here knows that a determined opposition, like this seems to be, to prevent the consideration of the bankruptcy bill, presents a question which becomes one of physical endurance. There is no way under these rules, unless it be by a provision of the rule for a clôture, on a report from the Committee on Rules, to stop these dilatory proceedings and bring the House to a direct vote so as to dispose of the question in that manner. There is no other way by which it can possibly be done. Hence, it resolves itself into this proposition: While there is a large majority, according to the vote, in favor of the bill, shall we go on here and make this a question of physical endurance like unto a prize fight and proceed indefinitely in this manner as long as the opponents of the measure see proper to resort to what is known as "filibustering" tactics, and without any hope of reaching a definite result?

We have no opportunity to apply the rule of clôture, and I do not see the good sense of going on under the circumstances, unless there was some hope of our accomplishing something besides merely staying here and taking vote after vote to no purpose whatever.

I am as anxious as any one in this House for the consideration of this bill, which has been considered with great care before it was reported to the House; but I do not see how this can be accomplished, except in the way I have indicated; and we have no report forthcoming for a future day for the consideration of this bill. The Committee on Rules decline to report in favor of giving another day for the consideration of this bill, by which we might possibly reach a vote by what is known as clôture, and get consideration and final action upon the measure. The House, by its rules, has rendered itself thus helpless. It can not consider a measure which two-thirds of its members favor if but one or two determined members oppose it.

Mr. FITCH. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. OATES. Certainly.

Mr. FITCH. I would like to ask whether it would not be possible for this large majority to vote that the House take a recess until to-morrow, in order that the matter may come up then?

Mr. OATES. I desire to answer that question. It is important that I should. The motions made by those opposed to the consideration of the bankruptcy bill, which motions are now pending, are, first, a motion to adjourn, and, second, that when the House adjourns it be to meet on Saturday next. These motions take precedence of a motion for a recess; and even if we made a motion for a recess, these other motions, which take precedence, could be made as an amendment to that, so that under the rules no recess can be taken, if these gentlemen wish to prevent it, except by unanimous consent. Now, in this situation I do not see that there is any good sense in continuing this conflict any further, and therefore I move that the House do now adjourn.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. BOUTELLE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. OATES. Certainly.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama if it is not the fact that the situation in which we find ourselves is the result of the deliberate refusal of the House, or rather the deliberate action of the House, in divesting itself of the power to control its own business, when we have had, session after session, an advertisement of the impossibility of doing business under such rules, if there is opposition to it? [Cries of "Oh!" on the Democratic side.]

Several MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. OATES. In reply to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE], I will say that is a question which goes back to the adoption of the rules of the House.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded. The pending motion is to fix the day to which the House shall adjourn.

Mr. KILGORE. Is not the pending motion my motion to adjourn?

The SPEAKER. There is a motion pending to fix the day to which the House shall adjourn. The present occupant of the chair is informed that the gentleman from Texas has pending both a motion to adjourn and to fix a day to which the House shall adjourn.

Mr. KILGORE. I will withdraw my motion.

Mr. ATKINSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ATKINSON. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] asked unanimous consent to make a statement, as I understood it, and unanimous consent was given to make that statement. Therefore his statement would be the regular order until it was completed.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood that it was completed.

Mr. ATKINSON. If it was not completed it would be the regular order, would it not?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has heard no suggestion except that now made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ATKINSON], that the statement of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] was not completed.

Mr. OATES. I had finished what I had to say.

Mr. ATKINSON. I thought the gentleman from Alabama was cut off before he had completed his statement.

Mr. OATES. The Speaker is right. I have completed what I wish to say. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] made a motion about four hours ago to adjourn.

Mr. KILGORE. I withdraw that.

Mr. OATES (continuing). And another one that when the House adjourns it be to meet on Saturday.

Mr. BOUTELLE. It seems we have got to a point where even unanimous consent can not adjourn the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that the motion made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] is withdrawn. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, January 26, 1893.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

KILLING OF FRANK B. RILEY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

In response to the resolution of the Senate of the 21st instant, relating to the alleged killing of Frank B. Riley, a sailor of the United States steamship Newark, in Genoa, Italy, I transmit herewith a report on the subject from the Secretary of State.

BENJ. HARRISON.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, January 25, 1893.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ST. ALBANS, VT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, submitting a statement relative to the United States custom-house and post-office building at St. Albans, Vt., authorized under the act of Congress, approved January 26, 1891; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. HOAR presented the credentials of Henry Cabot Lodge, elected by the Legislature of Massachusetts a Senator from that

State for the term beginning March 4, 1893; which were read and ordered to be filed.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON THE LATE SENATOR KENNA.

Mr. FAULKNER. I desire to give notice that at 3 o'clock p. m., Saturday, February 18, I shall submit resolutions in reference to the death of my late colleague, Hon. John E. Kenna.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a petition of the Custom Foreman Tailors' Association of Indiana, praying for the passage of House bill 9473, limiting the free importation of personal wearing apparel; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. COCKRELL. I present a petition numerously signed by citizens of the city of St. Louis, Mo., stating "that at divers times and places there have been landed upon our shores large numbers of foreign immigrants, embodying paupers, criminals, anarchists, socialists, nihilists, mafias, birds of passage, who work a season and return to spend the fruits of their labor abroad, and (especially during the past year) persons affected with cholera, typhus fever, and other malignant and loathsome diseases, thus endangering the life of our nation and individual citizens as well, bringing unfair competition into our market, resulting in hardships, the extent of which can not be computed, and causing general depression on every side."

The petitioners therefore pray "for the passage of such an amendment to the immigration laws as to prohibit the landing within our border of any and all immigrants, whether at seaports or along our borders, for the space of one year after the passage of said law, excepting foreigners who may come here as visitors during the progress of the World's Fair."

The petitioners further pray "for the appointment of a commission to thoroughly investigate the evils of immigration in sections colonized by aliens during the last two decades, and to report to the next session of Congress."

I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Immigration.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER. I present a petition similar to the one just submitted by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL], signed by James Clemens and 61 other citizens of the State of West Virginia, relative to the evils of immigration in sections colonized by aliens during the last two decades. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Immigration.

The motion was agreed to.

Wheeler, president of Wheeler & Wilson Manufacturing Company, and 150 employés, of Bridgeport, Conn., praying for the opening of the World's Columbian Exposition on Sunday; which were referred to the Committee on the Quadro-Centennial (Select).

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Hartford, Conn., praying for the repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Hartford, Conn., praying for the passage of the Torrey bankruptcy bill; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Merchant Tailors' Association of Boston, Mass., praying for the passage of legislation to limit the amount of wearing apparel and personal effects which may be admitted free of duty; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TELLER. I present a memorial of sundry citizens of Colorado, remonstrating against the repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law. I wish to state that the memorial is signed by persons who have given a great deal of attention to the subject, and are fully qualified to speak of it. I move that the memorial lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PLATT presented the petition of C. A. Parker and sundry citizens of New Britain, Stamford, and other cities of Connecticut, praying for the appointment of a commission to thoroughly investigate the evils of immigration in sections colonized by aliens during the last two decades, and to report at the next session of Congress; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. HUNTON presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Roanoke, Va., praying for the passage of the House bill providing for the extension of the line of the Norfolk and Western Railroad into the city of Washington, D. C.; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Roanoke, Va., praying for the repeal of the so-called Sherman silver act; which was ordered to lie on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the joint resolution (S. R. 124) directing the Secretary of War to investigate the subject of raft-towing on the Great Lakes and their connecting waters.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10010) to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CULBERSON, Mr. OATES, and Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 3727) to amend "An act authorizing the construction of a railway, street-railway, motor, wagon, and pedestrian bridge over the Missouri River near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Nebr., and to extend the time for the completion of the bridge therein provided for;" and

A bill (H. R. 10189) relating to proof of citizenship of applicants for Indian war pensions under the act of Congress approved July 27, 1892.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6345) granting an honorable discharge to Frederick E. Kolter, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. COKE, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9531) to make Rockport, Tex., a subport of entry, reported it without amendment.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8106) for the correction of the army record of David R. Wallace, deceased, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred an amendment submitted by Mr. DOLPH on the 19th instant, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported it favorably, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and be printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 7238) granting a pension to Amanda Atherton;

A bill (H. R. 7226) granting a pension to Julia P. Wright;

A bill (H. R. 7662) granting a pension to Marion Kern Sharman; and

A bill (H. R. 6507) granting a pension to Sarah A. Hagan.

Mr. DOLPH. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9955) providing for sundry light-houses and other aids to navigation, to report it with amendments. This is substantially a copy of the bill which has already passed the Senate on the same subject. I give notice that at an early day I shall call up the bill for consideration by the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. PROCTOR, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred an amendment, submitted by himself on the 21st instant, intended to be proposed to the Army appropriation bill, reported it with an amendment, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and to be printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred an amendment, submitted by himself on the 25th instant, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported it favorably, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and be printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. FRYE, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3512) to provide communication from lightships and outlying light-houses to the shore, reported it without amendment.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3573) for the relief of James Joyes, late lieutenant United States Army, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. QUAY, from the Committee on the Library, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 746) to settle and adjust the claims of any State for expenses incurred by it in defense of the United States, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred an amendment submitted by Mr. TURPIE, January 25, intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill, reported it without amendment, and moved that, with the accompanying report, it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and be printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. MCMILLAN, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to whom were referred two amendments submitted by Mr. CAREY on the 21st instant, one intended to be proposed to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, and the other to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported them favorably, and moved that they be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and be printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM, from the Committee on Interstate-Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10163) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, reported it with amendments.

WILLIAM SMITH AND OTHERS.

Mr. DAVIS. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5597) for the relief of William Smith and others, to report it favorably, without amendment. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be now considered.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to credit Lieut. Col. William Smith, deputy paymaster-general, United States Army, in the settlement of his public accounts, with $3,015.15; to credit Maj. William F. Tucker, paymaster, United States Army, with $5,461.61; to credit Assistant Surgeon John O. Skinner, United States Army, with $199.14; to remove the charge of $2,185.92 standing against Maj. John S. Billings, surgeon, United States Army; and remove the charge of $1,029.60 standing against George M. Wheeler, captain on the retired list of the Army; and to remove the charge of $634.42 standing against Lieut. P. Henry Ray, Eighth Regiment of Infantry, United States Army; these amounts having been paid out and received in accordance with the orders of the Secretary of War or the provisions of the regulations for the government of the Army of the United States prescribed by the President.

Mr. CULLOM. There seem to be a good many items proposed to be discharged by the bill. I do not know anything about the bill, but I should like to have it explained before we pass it.

Mr. DAVIS. The items were paid out by these various paymasters under the explicit orders of the Secretary of War. These amounts were stopped against them by the accounting officers of the Treasury. The bill is based upon the recommendations of the War Department after a careful examination by the Committee on Military Affairs. A counterpart of this bill passed the Senate a few days ago, but the other House instead of passing the Senate bill passed one of its own, which is the bill now under consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the House of Representatives be requested to return to the Senate the counterpart of the bill just passed, being the bill (S. 1678) for the relief of William Smith and others.

The motion was agreed to.

COUNT OF ELECTORAL VOTES.

Mr. TELLER, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress shall assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Wednesday, the 8th day of February, 1893, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, pursuant to the requirement of the Constitution and laws relating to the election of President and Vice-President of the United States, and the President of the Senate shall be the presiding officer; that two persons be appointed tellers on the part of the Senate and two on the part of the House of Representatives, to make a list of the votes as they shall be declared; that the result shall be delivered to the President of the Senate, who shall announce the state of the vote and the persons elected to the two Houses assembled as aforesaid, which shall be deemed a declaration of the persons elected President and Vice-President of the United States, and, together with a list of the votes, be entered on the journals of the two Houses.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 25th instant approved and signed the joint resolution (S. R. 135) making an appropriation of $5,000 for clearing the Potomac River of ice.

The message also announced that the President of the United States had on the 26th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 2345) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River above New Orleans; and

A joint resolution (S. R. 128) to authorize the Secretary of War to grant permits for the use of reservations and public spaces in the city of Washington, and for other purposes.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. CALL introduced a bill (S. 3777) for the construction of works to render the Bight of Canaveral, in the State of Florida, available for the uses of the Navy; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3778) granting a pension to Mrs. Elisha Kent Kane, widow of Dr. Elisha Kent Kane, the Arctic explorer; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 3779) authorizing the purchase of oil paintings for the Executive Mansion; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas introduced a bill (S. 3780) to authorize the loyal Creek Indians, Indian Territory, to bring suit in the Court of Claims for damages committed upon their property; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PETTIGREW introduced a bill (S. 3781) to establish a military post at or near the city of Pierre, Hughes County, in the State of South Dakota; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3782) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the St. Louis River between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, near the village of West Duluth; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a bill (S. 3783) to amend the several acts of Congress relating to the acquisition of property for a site and for the construction of a building for the custom-house in the city of New York; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. WASHBURN (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3784) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the St. Louis River, between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, near the village of West Duluth; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas introduced a bill (S. 3785) to provide for the condemnation of land for a military post near the city of Little Rock, Ark.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 142) authorizing the control of matters pertaining to the assignment, occupation, etc., of rooms occupied by officers and employés of the Government to be vested in the Secretary of the Treasury; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

LOAN OF THE LIBERTY BELL.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 141) requesting the municipal authorities of Philadelphia to loan to the United States Government the Liberty bell for exhibition as therein stated; which was read the first time by its title.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask that the joint resolution be considered at this time.

The joint resolution was read the second time at length, as follows:

Whereas it is desirable that the Liberty bell be placed on exhibition at the forthcoming World's Columbian Exposition to give all our countrymen an opportunity to see this historical medium through which liberty was first proclaimed to the American people; and

Whereas this bell is under the charge and in the care of the municipal authorities of Philadelphia: Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the municipal authorities of Philadelphia be, and they are hereby, requested to permit the Liberty bell to be removed by a representative of the Board of Management of Exhibits of the Government of the United States to the city of Chicago, to be exhibited as a part of the Government exhibit of the World's Columbian Exposition, subject to such conditions as the said authorities of Philadelphia and said Board of Management may decide upon.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. CULLOM. I hope there will be no objection to it. It is simply a request to the authorities of the city of Philadelphia, which they can comply with if they desire. I wish to state that the proposition is to allow the managers of the Government exhibit to take charge of the bell, and that there is a place provided in the Government building at the World's Columbian Exposition where the bell can be hung, so that all the people attending that great Exposition in this country may have an opportunity to see it. I do not see that there ought to be any objection to it by the Government, and I anticipate that there will not be by the city of Philadelphia, from what I have heard, although I do not know certainly as to that.

Mr. HOAR. The joint resolution certainly puts the Congress of the United States in a very remarkable position, that of a petitioner to a municipal body in one of the States. I do not think that Congress ever took that position before. If we set such a precedent, I do not see why we may not be asked to petition municipal bodies, or a State Legislature, or county commissioners, or the selectmen of a town, or constables in particular States, or individuals.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let the joint resolution be referred.

Mr. HOAR. I think the joint resolution had better be referred to a committee. I presume the United States can undertake the custody of this bell if it is desired; but I shall very strongly resist this particular mode of accomplishing the result. I move that the joint resolution be referred to the Select Committee on the Quadro-Centennial.

Mr. CULLOM. Or the Committee on the Library.

Mr. QUAY. It is a matter of no consequence to me to which committee the joint resolution is referred. I was merely about to say that I have no objection to the joint resolution, and if it shall be referred to the Library Committee, as the chairman of that committee I shall be disposed to make a favorable report upon it.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. QUAY. I think the Government will have no difficulty in procuring the bell from the municipal authorities of Philadelphia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on the Library, if there be no objection.

Mr. CULLOM. One word further before the joint resolution is referred. While it is true that it is a request by the Government, yet I do not see myself how we can procure the bell unless the authorities of Philadelphia see proper to send it to Chicago without any request. It occurred to me that in relation to such a matter it is not out of place for the Congress of the United States to make a request of the city of Philadelphia, which great city has had charge of the bell since the announcement by it that the Declaration of Independence had been adopted; therefore the joint resolution was put in this form. I hope, however, if it goes to a committee that it will not be delayed long, to whatever committee it may be referred, and I am not particular as to the reference.

Mr. QUAY. I repeat that I have no doubt, unless the Senator from Illinois is acquainted with something to the contrary, that upon application by the directory of the Exposition the bell will be furnished by the municipal authorities of Philadelphia for exhibition at Chicago without any difficulty.

Mr. CULLOM. Without any action by Congress?

Mr. QUAY. I should think so, unless the Senator from Illinois knows something to the contrary.

Mr. CULLOM. I do not know anything to the contrary. A gentleman who is somewhat connected with the Exposition brought me this joint resolution, and it occurred to me that it is a proper thing to do, and I took pleasure in introducing it. The only purpose is to secure the presence of the bell at the great Exposition, and however it may be gotten there is a matter of indifference to me, if it is agreeable to the city of Philadelphia.

Mr. HAWLEY. I wish to say just one word about this matter. I concur with the Senator from Massachusetts in rather criticising the joint resolution. There will be no practical difficulty, it seems to me. I know the bell went to New Orleans. I think a simple communication from the Columbian Commission will obtain the bell, under proper safeguards. The city of Philadelphia takes good care of it, and will take it there and bring it back.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on the Library, if there be no objection. It is so referred.

LOAN OF FLAGS, ETC., FOR INAUGURATION PURPOSES.

Mr. GORMAN. I introduce a joint resolution and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The joint resolution (S. R. 140) authorizing the Secretaries of War and of the Navy to loan to the committee on inaugural ceremonies, flags, and so forth, was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy be, and they are hereby, authorized to loan to the committee on inaugural ceremonies such ensigns, flags, and so forth (except battle flags), that are not now in use, and may be suitable and proper for decoration, and may be spared without detriment to the public service; such flags to be used by said committee under such regulations and restrictions as may be prescribed by the said Secretaries, or either of them, in decorating the fronts of public buildings and other places on the line of march between the Capitol and the Executive Mansion, and the interior of the reception hall: Provided, That the said committee shall indemnify the said Department, or either of them, for any loss or damage to such flags not necessarily incident to such use.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. SHERMAN. I will ask the Senator from Maryland if the joint resolution is in the usual form when this courtesy is extended in cases of the inauguration of a President?

Mr. GORMAN. It is substantially in the usual form. I will state to the Senator from Ohio that the resolutions heretofore passed at the time of the inauguration of Presidents have specified that the Secretaries of War and the Navy shall loan the flags from practically all the navy-yards, naming the yards in the District of Columbia, at Norfolk, League Island, Portsmouth, &c. This has been changed so as to permit the Secretaries to loan such flags where it is convenient to do so. It is framed after the resolution which was passed in the matter of the Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic held in this city. It was objected at that time that the navy-yards ought not to be specified. Otherwise, it is exactly the usual measure.

Mr. SHERMAN. All right.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PLATT (by request) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to the fortification appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. VOORHEES submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on the Library, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HOAR submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, it was Ordered, That Aden Benedict be permitted to withdraw his papers from the files of the Senate.

INAUGURATION ARRANGEMENTS.

Mr. GORMAN submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That a committee of three Senators be appointed by the Vice-President to make the necessary arrangements for the inauguration of the President-elect of the United States on the 4th day of March next.

LIQUOR TRUST.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance is hereby directed to make inquiry whether or not a trust exists to control and monopolize the business of producing and selling high wines and alcohol or other distilled liquors, and to restrain the freedom of trade and commerce therein, which trust is maintained in violation of the laws of the United States; whether the purpose of said trust is accomplished in whole or in part by giving rebate certificates for the payment of 5 cents per gallon on all such liquors sold by the persons or company maintaining the trust, payable only on condition that the purchasers and their successors and assigns, shall make all their future purchases solely from said persons or company, and if so, what amount of rebate certificates have been issued from time to time and how many are now outstanding unpaid;

Whether any portion of such liquors produced or handled by said trust has been at any time adulterated with any poisonous or deleterious drugs or other additions and thereafter sold or used as a beverage;

What portion of such liquors produced or handled by said trust is used as a beverage and what portion in the arts or for medicinal purposes;

Whether such adulteration is practiced under licenses issued to rectifiers under the internal-revenue laws or under the protection of special taxes imposed by said laws; and

Whether any legal proceedings have been commenced against the persons or company maintaining said trust, and to investigate any and all other facts connected with said trust which the committee may deem material, said committee to have power to send for persons and papers and examine witnesses, and to act as a full committee or by a subcommittee or subcommittees during the present session of Congress and after its expiration and until the next regular meeting of Congress on the first Monday in December next, the expenses of making said inquiry to be paid from the appropriation for the contingent expenses of the Senate.

ATTORNEYS' FEES IN INDIAN CLAIMS.

Mr. DAWES submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That the copies of contracts made with Indian tribes or Indians since January 1, 1889, by which compensation was agreed to be paid to attorneys, agents, or other persons for obtaining the recognition, allowance, or payment of claims in favor of such tribes or Indians against the United States, and other papers furnished to the Senate by the Secretary of the Interior, January 5, 1893, in response to the Senate resolution of June 1, 1892, be printed.

MARITIME OFFENSES.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the President be requested to return to the Senate the bill (S. 2625) to provide for the punishment of offenses on the high seas.

WORLD'S COLUMBIAN COMMISSION REPORT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, referred to the Committee on the Quadro-Centennial (Select), and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, for the information of Congress, the third regular report of the World's Columbian Commission, and the report of the president of the Board of Lady Managers, with the accompanying papers.

BENJ. HARRISON.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, January 26, 1893.

NOTE.—The documents referred to accompanying the message have been sent to the House of Representatives.

MILITARY POST AT FORT WAYNE, MICH.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 985) to provide for the enlargement of the military post at Fort Wayne, Mich., which was to add to section 2 the following proviso:

Provided, That said land shall be acquired without cost to the United States.

Mr. HAWLEY. There is no objection on this side to that amendment. I move that it be concurred in, and that passes the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS AND SPECIAL DEPUTIES.

Mr. BATE. I move that the bill (S. 3504) to repeal all statutes relating to supervisors of elections and special deputies be taken from the table and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The motion was agreed to.

UNITED STATES CANALS, ETC.

Mr. DOLPH. I ask leave to call up the bill (S. 3568) providing for the establishment and enforcement of rules and regulations for the use and navigation of United States canals and similar works of navigation, and for other purposes. The bill was prepared by the Chief of Engineers and relates to an important and urgent matter.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 2, line 3, after the word "misdemeanor," to strike out "for which the owner or owners, agent or agents, master or pilot of the vessel offending shall be separately and collectively responsible;" and in line 8, after the word "committed," to insert "the person or persons so offending;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That any willful violation of any rule or regulation made by the Secretary of War in pursuance of this act shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof, in any district court in the United States within whose territorial jurisdiction such offense may have been committed, the person or persons so offending shall be liable to punishment by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court, for each offense.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 1, after the word "that," to strike out "it shall be the duty of all persons using or navigating such canals or similar works, their channels and approaches, or using any of the piers, breakwaters, docks, wharves, or other improvements belonging to the United States, to observe the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War as aforesaid;" in line 9, after the word "failure," to strike out "or neglect;" in line 18, after the words "regulations, shall," to strike out "be liable" and insert "in addition;" in line 19, after the word "act," to strike out "and shall, in addition thereto," and insert "in cases of willful violations of such rules and regulations;" and after the word "thereby," at the end of line 23, to to strike out "or by any unlawful acts, to said United States or such aggrieved person;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That any person who shall willfully or negligently strand or sink any steam vessel, boat, or craft in such canals or similar works, or in the channels or approaches, or who shall willfully or negligently, or by failure to observe the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War for the use thereof, obstruct or impair such canals or similar works, or cause any impediment, injury, filling up, or shoaling therein, or in the approaches thereto, tending to obstruct or impair the navigation thereof, or who shall willfully damage or injure the piers, breakwaters, wharves, docks, or other improvements of such canals or similar works belonging to the United States, or who shall fail to obey or observe any of said prescribed regulations, shall, in addition to the penalty prescribed by section 2 of this act, in cases of willful violations of such rules and regulations, be liable to the United States or to any person aggrieved by such obstructions or injuries or unlawful acts or omissions, in a civil action for all damages occasioned thereby.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OSAGE RIVER BRIDGE, IN BENTON COUNTY, MO.

Mr. VEST. I ask the Senate to take up and pass a bill for which there is immediate necessity. It has been reported by the Committee on Commerce and is upon the Calendar, being House bill 10062. It is an ordinary bridge bill, but the work has been stopped until this legislation can be had.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 10062) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Osage River, between the mouths of Pomme de Terre River and Buffalo Creek, in Benton County, Mo.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LUCIUS L. DYER.

Mr. PLATT. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate for the present consideration of House bill 5049, to remove a charge of desertion.

Mr. MITCHELL. I shall make no objection to the taking up of the bill referred to by the Senator from Connecticut, but after it has been considered I shall object to taking up any other bill until we proceed with the Calendar.

Mr. PLATT. There is a special reason for the passage of this bill.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5049) to remove the charge of desertion against Lucius L. Dyer.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of War be, and hereby is, authorized to revoke and set aside Special Orders Numbered 66, dated February 10, 1864, War Department, dismissing Lucius L. Dyer, late second lieutenant of Company C, Fourteenth Regiment of Connecticut Volunteers, to date January 11, 1864, and to correct his military record accordingly, and to issue to him a certificate of discharge as of date January 11, 1864: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or emoluments of any kind shall become due or payable by reason of the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend the military record of Lucius L. Dyer."

MRS. S. A. FARQUHARSON.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1303) to increase the pension of Mrs. S. A. Farquharson, which was on page 1, line 4, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "fifteen."

Mr. TURPIE. I move that the Senate nonconcur in the amendment of the House of Representatives, and ask for a committee of conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. DAVIS, Mr. TURPIE, and Mr. PALMER were appointed.

MRS. MARY P. C. HOOPER.

Mr. KYLE. I wish to call up at this time the bill (S. 2130) for the relief of Mrs. Mary P. C. Hooper.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill named by the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. MITCHELL. I have given notice that I should ask for the regular order. What does the Senator wish to do?

Mr. KYLE. I wish to secure the consideration and passage of a short bill, to which I think there will be no objection.

Mr. MITCHELL. I gave notice a moment ago that I should insist on the Calendar after the passage of the bill then proposed to be considered.

Mr. HISCOCK. After the passage of two or three other bills, I hope the Senator will say.

Mr. MITCHELL. It seems to me that we ought to take up the Calendar. We have not been on the Calendar now for about two weeks, I think. Such action will give everyone a chance and be fair to all. Let us go to the Calendar for awhile, and perhaps later on we can take up bills on the application of individual Senators.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to the consideration of the bill named by the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. HALE. I hope the Senator from Oregon will not insist upon his objection.

Mr. MITCHELL. Why not?

Mr. HALE. Most of the bills on the Calendar have nothing but the public interest behind them, while there are a good many Senators who personally desire to have bills passed.

Mr. MITCHELL. There are some bills at the head of the Calendar which I personally desire to have passed which have been laid over.

Mr. HALE. I have not any that I myself desire to have passed, but I see that several other Senators have. I hope the Senator from Oregon will give way to Senators who desire to have their bills passed.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator is disposed to be a little ironical, I am afraid.

Mr. HALE. Never.

Mr. MITCHELL. I insist on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to the request of the Senator from South Dakota, and the first bill on the Calendar will be stated.

HIRAM SOMERVILLE.

The bill (S. 88) for the relief of Hiram Somerville was announced as first in order, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, in line 1, after the words "sum of," to strike out "six hundred and fifty-five" and insert "two hundred and fifty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $250 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated to Hiram Somerville, of Marion County, Ill., for supplies furnished by him to the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read in that case.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report submitted by Mr. SANDERS May 27, 1892.

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 88) for the relief of Hiram Somerville, for certain property of his to the value of $655, taken for the use of the army of Gen. Hunter, in Jackson County, W. Va., has had the same under consideration and report:

Five hundred and five dollars' worth of this property seems to have been taken by irresponsible persons and without furnishing the possessor or claimant or owner any voucher therefor, and although the owner at the time was an enlisted man in the United States Army, and a prisoner in Libby Prison, so much of his claim must be attributed to depredations of an army in the field, and upon well-defined principles of public policy and law placed beyond the demand for remuneration.

Two hundred and fifty dollars' worth of this property consisted of one horse and five hogs, and was taken and voucher or memorandum receipt given for the same with the intent that it should ripen into a claim against the Government and be paid out of its Treasury. That voucher was given to the wife of the claimant, and by her to Col. Frost, of the Eleventh West Virginia Regiment, with a view to his forwarding it to the proper authority and obtaining the money thereon for the claimant. Shortly thereafter Col. Frost was killed at Snicker's Gap and the voucher lost.

Your committee are of the opinion that that debt should be paid, and they recommend where the words "six hundred and fifty-five dollars" occur they shall be striken out and that "two hundred and fifty dollars" be inserted in lieu thereof, and that as so amended the bill pass.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS ANTISELL.

The bill (S. 1790) for the relief of Thomas Antisell was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, in line 3, after the words "sum of," to strike out "ten thousand" and insert "two thousand five hundred;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted etc., That the sum of $2,500 be, and is hereby, appropriated, to be paid out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Dr. Thomas Antisell, late surgeon and brevet lieutenant-colonel of volunteers, in compensation for the use and occupation of his land near Fort Albany, Va., by the troops of the United States during the war of the rebellion, and for property taken by said troops, used and destroyed by reason of said occupation.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read in that case.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. SANDERS May 27, 1892:

The Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1790) for the relief of Thomas Antisell, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave respectfully to report as follows:

The bill proposes an appropriation of $10,000 to Dr. Thomas Antisell for injury to his real property, situate at the west end of Long bridge near the banks of the Potomac River in Virginia, where at the breaking out of the war Dr. Antisell resided. Of his loyalty to the Government of the United States in those troublesome times there can be no doubt. He was in the service of the Government and he remained a loyal, intelligent, and efficient officer, and in every avocation acquitted himself in a manner wholly creditable to himself and to the great advantage of his country. At the breaking out of the war troops occupied his place, a fort was built upon it, his home was broken up, and he was compelled to remove to the District of Columbia, where he has ever since resided. The orchard and forest and fencing was taken by the troops and used for firewood, or in the construction of a fort thereat, or for other military uses.

Your committee has repeatedly held that damage in the form of depredations or injuries to real property within the limits of the States in rebellion or where war was flagrant are not such damages as the Government is called upon under any circumstances to pay. The Government is in such places engaged in such work upon its own lawful business, and can not be required to compensate for injuries resulting therefrom, unavoidably or otherwise, on any principle of law or equity.

Nor does your committee recognize that always quartermaster and commissary stores used by the Army in time of war call for compensation, but instances have occurred where it has seemed not inappropriate to pay for timber used in the construction of forts or for firewood, or for other military uses, where there are circumstances indicating that it was the purpose of the officers of the Government so to pay for the same.

If any case justifies such a payment, it seems to your committee the case at bar is one. The place occupied was in sight of the Capitol, the officers of the Government seem to have entered upon a consideration and negotiation as to the value of the property taken by them, but in the excitement and mutations of the time did not give to Dr. Antisell the proper vouchers whereby he could be paid for the same; but your committee do not believe that the value of the orchard, the forest trees, and the fencing used for military purposes by the Army exceeds in value the sum of $2,500, and believing that that sum, upon the principle hereinbefore stated, is due Dr. Antisell, your committee recommend that the words "ten thousand dollars" where they occur in the bill be stricken out, and that the words "two thousand five hundred dollars" be inserted in lieu thereof, and as so amended your committee recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move to amend the bill by inserting the word "and" before the word "used," in the last line, and also by striking out all after the word "used" and inserting "by them."

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senator to accept an amendment to his amendment by adding to the words he proposes to insert the words "for military purposes."

Mr. MITCHELL. I accept the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] as modified by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 10, after the word "troops," it is proposed to insert the word "and;" and in the same line, after the word "used," to strike out "and destroyed by reason of said occupation," and insert "by them for military purposes;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $2,500 be, and is hereby, appropriated, to be paid out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Dr. Thomas Antisell, late surgeon and brevet lieutenant-colonel of volunteers, in compensation for the use and occupation of his land near Fort Albany, Va., by the troops of the United States during the war of the rebellion, and for property taken by said troops, and used by them for military purposes.

Mr. MITCHELL. The object of the amendment is to get rid of the word "destroyed," which has crept into the bill evidently through mistake, as it is not the habit of the Committee on Claims to report in favor of peying for property destroyed, but only for its use and occupation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Oregon as modified.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PLATT. I do not quite understand the bill and I should like some further explanation of it than has yet been given or than is given in the report of the committee before I give it my support.

Mr. MITCHELL. As this bill was reported from the Committee on Claims by a Senator who is now absent from the city, I ask that it may go over until he returns, without losing its place on the Calendar.

Mr. PLATT. Let me simply state what the line is on which I should like an explanation.

When the war broke out nearly all the land in Virginia near the Potomac River and extending several miles inward from the river was occupied by the troops. Dr. Antisell, it appears, was a loyal citizen who lived on the other side of the Long bridge near to the river; the military authorities occupied his land and undoubtedly did him damage, but are we to stop with Dr. Antisell? There undoubtedly were many loyal citizens all through eastern Virginia whose land was occupied and whose property was destroyed; and I do not see how the case of Dr. Antisell is to be made an exception. It does not appear from the report that any receipt was given him by the quartermaster or any other officer for the property which was taken and used by the military authorities. As there is nobody in these cases ever to say a word for the United States when claims are made against it, I thought there ought to be some explanation upon the points I have indicated.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I wish to leave my caution on record against the time when this bill shall again come up. It reads like paying Dr. Antisell for the use and occupation of his house and grounds during the war, or for some time during the war. I recollect very well a veto sent to Congress by President Grant, I think it was in the case of a Mr. Best, a citizen of Missouri.

Mr. MITCHELL. J. Milton Best. He resided near Paducah, Ky.

Mr. HAWLEY. J. Milton Best was a loyal man; his house was destroyed; breastworks were, I think, erected through his grounds, and he took a musket and joined the Union side in defense of its position. A bill was passed through Congress paying him for the destruction of his property, which was vetoed by President Grant upon the broad, if cruel, doctrine adopted by all nations in case of war; and I warn the Senate—which does not need the warning, I am sure, if its attention is called to it—against the danger of passing bills like this. If we establish this precedent there will come from every State and section of the South claims for compensation for the destruction of property, which will seriously add to the national debt.

During the war I occupied the houses of loyal citizens in the South with my troops and my staff. I have swept houses away to build a fort at the direction of my commanding officer. In one case six or eight colored people—I think the presumption is in favor of the colored man being loyal—lost their entire possessions, and the ground was swept as clear as a place for a flower bed, with no sign left that there ever was a house there, unless it was the presence of the well-hole. I never thought they were to get compensation. It was terribly cruel, but that is what war is.

This case does not differ, in my judgment, from other cases that may arise hereafter.

Mr. PLATT. I am quite willing the bill shall go over until the Senator who reported it returns to his seat.

Mr. MITCHELL. I wish to say a word before the bill goes over.

This bill was reported by the Senator from Montana [Mr. SANDERS] who is now absent, as we all know. It is quite true, as stated by the Senator from Connecticut, that the aggregate amount of bills making claims for property destroyed, and for the use and occupation of property pending before Committees on Claims of the Senate and House of Representatives will run up into the millions. The bills which are now pending before the Committee on Claims of the Senate amount to over $15,000,000. It is hardly right, however, to contrast this case, it seems to me from my little knowledge of it, with the case of Dr. J. Milton Best.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator refers to the case of Dr. J. Milton Best, of Kentucky.

Mr. MITCHELL. That is the case.

Mr. COCKRELL. And also the case of Thomas C. Wallace, of Missouri.

Mr. MITCHELL. I recollect the Best case distinctly, and it is one of the first cases to which my attention was called when I came to the Senate, nearly twenty years ago. That was a case where Dr. Best occupied a very valuable and finely furnished house near the city of Paducah, in Kentucky. A fort was erected near his house. A battle actually took place at the time. His house was in direct range of the Federal guns, and the bullets penetrated, went through, and destroyed it. It was that character of claim that President Grant vetoed.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator permit me a word there?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am quite familiar with that case. The battle did not actually take place. The house was destroyed to give range to the guns in the fort, but at the time when the house was actually destroyed the Confederate forces were in full retreat, as the evidence substantially showed, and it was destroyed to give range for the guns, just as Col. Wallace's house, at Lexington, Mo., was destroyed for the same purpose.

Mr. MITCHELL. That is substantially the same thing. The house was in range of the guns of the fort.

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes.

Mr. MITCHELL. That was the character of the case which President Grant vetoed. This bill may be open to criticism and may not be all that it should be, but as the Senator who reported it is not here, I ask that the bill may go over.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Without prejudice.

Mr. MITCHELL. Without prejudice, so as not to lose its place on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the bill will go over without prejudice, retaining its place on the Calendar. The next bill on the Calendar will be stated.

DAM ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2173) to authorize the Missouri River Power Company of Montana to construct a dam across the Missouri River.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, to add to the bill the following:

Said dam shall be constructed under the supervision and control of the Secretary of War, and before the same shall be commenced the plans and specifications shall be approved by the Secretary, and any changes of such dam thereafter required by the Secretary of War shall be made by the company, or its assigns, without expense to the United States. The dam shall be furnished with a suitable boom and log sluice, and the company, or its successors and assigns, shall execute to the United States, with sureties approved by the Secretary of War, a bond in such sum as the Secretary may determine, conditioned to indemnify the United States against all claims for damages for overflow or otherwise caused by the construction of said dam.

SEC. 2. That the United States shall be secured a free right of way for constructions and approaches to said dam for transferring boats and freight around the same, and a free use of water power for operating such construction works.

SEC. 3. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TIMBER LANDS ON SILETZ INDIAN RESERVATION.

The bill (S. 2869) to provide for the reservation of certain timber lands upon the Siletz Indian Reservation for the benefit of the Indians was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment, in line 13, after the word "self-supporting," to insert:

Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to in any way alter, change, or affect the right, title, and interest of the Indians, as at present existing, in the land hereby authorized to be reserved from sale.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to reserve from sale five sections of timber land upon the Siletz Indian Reservation, not required for allotment to the Indians upon said reservation, and located conveniently to the sawmill upon said reservation; and that the timber on said lands may be cut and manufactured by the Indians upon said reservation for their own use and for sale, under such rules as the Secretary of the Interior shall, from time to time prescribe, regulating the cutting of timber so as to secure an equality of benefits to the Indians, employment for them, and judicious aid to them in becoming self-supporting: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to in any way alter, change, or affect the right, title, and interest of the Indians, as at present existing, in the land hereby authorized to be reserved from sale.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. I did not understand the amount of the reservation on the land referred to. I should like to have that part of the bill again reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again read the bill.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. DOLPH. This is an entering wedge, a proposition to create upon a reservation some industry by which Indians can be given work and made to earn a portion of their living. It is proposed simply to reserve five sections of timber land and allow the Indians to cut and manufacture timber under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WATERTOWN, SIOUX CITY AND DULUTH RAILWAY.

The bill (S. 2657) granting right of way to the Watertown, Sioux City and Duluth Railway Company through the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indian Reservation was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 8, after the word "lands," to insert "heretofore;" so as to make the section read:

That the right of way is hereby granted, as hereinafter set forth, to the Watertown, Sioux City and Duluth Railway Company, a corporation duly authorized under the general incorporation laws of the State of South Dakota, its successors and assigns, for the construction, operation, and maintenance of its railroad through the lands heretofore set apart for the use of the Sioux Indians, and commonly known as the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indian Reservation, running in a northeasterly course through the counties of Codington, Grant, and Roberts by the most practicable route.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 11, before the words "shall direct," to strike out "President of the United States" and insert "Secretary of the Interior;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to fix the amount of compensation to be paid the Indians for such right of way, and provide the time and manner for the payment thereof, and also to ascertain and fix the amount of compensation to be made individual members of the tribe for damages sustained by them by reason of the construction of said road; but no right of any kind shall vest in said railway company in or to any part of the right of way herein provided for until the consent of such Indians as are entitled to such compensation shall be obtained thereto in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior shall direct, and until plats thereof, made upon actual survey for the definite location of such railroad, and including the points for station buildings, depots, machine shops, sidetracks, turn-outs, and water stations shall be filed with and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and until the compensation aforesaid has been fixed and paid; and the surveys, construction, and operation of such railroad shall be conducted with due regard for the rights of the Indians, and in accordance with such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may make to carry out this provision.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. In section 3, line 3, after the words "right of way," I move to insert "material, stone, earth, and timber taken from the adjacent lands," so as to require the company to pay for the material, stone, earth, and timber taken from the lands adjacent to the right of way.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. ANN MERCER SLAUGHTER.

Mr. HUNTON. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate for the consideration at this time of House bill 9433 granting a pension to Mrs. Ann Mercer Slaughter. I ask that the bill and the report may be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. COCKRELL. There are quite a number of House pension bills, and if we are going to pass one we should pass all the others. I do not think it is right to pass this bill without passing the others. If the Senator will move to proceed to the consideration of all pension bills, I shall not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is not debatable. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON]?

Mr. COCKRELL. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill can not be considered at this time.

ALCOHOLIC LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Mr. CAREY. I ask the Senate to return to Senate bill 749, to provide for a commission on the subject of the alcoholic liquor traffic, which was passed over without prejudice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill referred to has been under consideration heretofore, was amended, and has reached the stage of the question, Shall the bill pass? Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. VEST. Let the bill be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, that bill will give rise to considerable discussion, and there will have to be a quorum here to pass it. I am utterly opposed to all such legislation, creating a commission here at the public expense to investigate a question which is being preached upon, written upon, and prayed upon—both ways prayed upon—in every part of the civilized world, and especially in this country.

Mr. HUNTON. Prayed or preyed?

Mr. VEST. Both.

The police powers in regard to the sale of alcoholic stimulants are left by the Constitution of the United States to the States. All that we have to do in regard to this traffic under the Constitution is to regulate commerce among the States and to exercise the taxing power so far as internal revenue is concerned.

How can any commission advise us as to these matters? Where is the necessity for taking money out of the public Treasury in order to have a commission tell us what are the effects of alcoholic stimulants? A man who does not know that the excessive use of stimulants is deleterious to personal health and to public morals is unworthy to exist in a free government. All this class of crank legislation—for it is nothing else—is in order to meet the urgent demands of certain pseudo-philanthropists who want to use the power of the Congress of the United States in order to advance some special hobby or fad to which they are devoting their otherwise useless lives. I am utterly opposed to all such legislation, and I want the yeas and nays, at any rate, to see how many favor the bill.

Mr. PEFFER. Mr. President, I do not understand that this bill proposes any legislation concerning the traffic in liquors, but it merely proposes an investigation into the general subject in reference as well to revenue matters as to the moral and social effects produced by the traffic.

It seems to me that it is a very important bill. The subject of the effect of the use of intoxicating liquor among the people is coming to be one of very great importance in all portions of the country. I had a letter the other day from a friend in New York City calling my attention to the fact that somewhere (if I remember the figures correctly) in the neighborhood of 3,000,000 persons had already voted in different States in the Union for a prohibition of the public traffic in liquors so far as their use as a beverage is concerned. There can be no doubt that at this time a very large proportion of the people of the country are viewing with alarm the increasing encroachments of the liquor traffic upon the various departments of our social, our religious, and our political life.

I hope that the Senator from Missouri will withdraw his objection, especially because his objection is based upon proposed legislation. The measure proposes nothing of that kind, but simply an investigation of facts that will be of interest to the people, and I believe the people have a right to them.

Mr. VEST. The Senator from Kansas has furnished another argument, if I needed any for my opposition to this measure. He says no legislation is proposed. Where, then, does the Congress of the United States get the power to spend the tax money of the people in acquiring information not to be used by us as legislators? Are we to go into the work of making encyclopedias by Congressional action? It is said that this commission will give information in regard to the finances of the country. Does the Committee on Finance want that information? Does the Senate want it? How far are we to extend outside Congressional inquiry into all questions of health and morals? The States are not asking for it, and nobody is asking for it except the people who are devoting themselves, for want of something else to do, to this sort of subjects. I object.

Mr. PEFFER. Mr. President, just one further word in reply to the Senator from Missouri. Investigations invariably precede legislation, and the friends of this bill are not now prepared to suggest legislation in the line of the thought upon which the bill is based. The very reason the Senator states is a proper one. There has not yet been sufficient investigation to justify even the preliminary steps of legislation in this direction. It is the facts that we need now, and we will talk about the legislation afterwards.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill pass? Upon which the Senator from Missouri demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WASHBURN. I should like to have the bill read again before the vote is taken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be again read at length.

The bill was read.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. President, this bill presents an interesting question. The yeas and nays have been called for, and as I shall feel it my duty to vote against the bill, I should like to have my reasons understood. That the purpose of the bill is praiseworthy is not to be denied. The discovery of facts and the extension of information in regard to the injurious effects of the abuse of alcoholic liquors ought to gratify any man who sympathizes with the interests of humanity.

My objection to a proposition like this is, first, because Congress has no rightful jurisdiction over the subject, and I can anticipate no proper legislation that would result from the information if acquired. That this Government shall put itself at the service of the mere moralists and incur large expenses when legislation can not be anticipated seems to me hardly in harmony with the duties of this body.

But I think I could waive that objection if it were not for another consideration which my experience has demonstrated to be sound. I have lived longer than most members of this body and I have spent my life in active intercourse with the people. I observed in my earlier days that questions of practical morality were deemed essentially personal; that individual morality was the result of organized teachings such as were appropriate to the end in view.

Now almost every attempt at reform, it may be said, is accompanied by a bill. Moralists have almost ceased to reason and to argue with those they desire to convince, but legislation is demanded as the remedy. Morality is sought to be enforced by legislation, so that the subject of the law is as immoral after the reformatory punishment has been applied as he was before. The result has been that the American people have lost their confidence in moral agencies.

Mr. President, the man who can see what has been accomplished by moral efforts in this direction within the last fifty years ought to be satisfied that the work is being accomplished by legitimate means. Men have been taught to be temperate because to be intemperate is injurious to them. They have been taught to be temperate because temperance is in harmony with sound morality. The process of moral culture makes better men, while the habits and resolutions of men are strengthened by moral agencies.

The effect of such methods as are proposed is to destroy men's confidence in the proper agencies of improvement. Efforts are made to compel men to become moral. The subject of the punishment——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois will please suspend. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business.

DEALING IN OPTIONS AND FUTURES.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7845) defining "options" and "futures," imposing special taxes on dealers therein, and requiring such dealers and persons engaged in selling certain products to obtain license, and for other purposes, the pending question being on the amendment of Mr. VILAS to the amendment of Mr. GEORGE.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. President, there are two propositions pending before this body seeking to accomplish a common purpose. The bill as it came from the House of Representatives proposes under the constitutional power to lay and collect taxes to suppress the right now exercised by citizens of the different States in buying and selling certain agricultural products. That proposition is denied by those who sit on this side of the aisle that divides this Chamber. They can not afford, after a century of struggle in which the Democratic party originated, to admit that the power of taxation given by the Constitution to Congress can be exercised for any purpose than that of raising revenue.

The two parties which have existed in this country from the foundation of our Government have arisen out of a struggle about the rightful construction of the Constitution. The Democratic party under the lead of Thomas Jefferson contended for a strict construction of every grant of power conferred by the Constitution. That construction grew out of a jealous regard for liberty and for local self-government as the means of its preservation. We on this side of the Chamber are born into that faith. Our sires and our grandsires grew up and lived and died in that faith. The opposition, or Federal party, favored a liberal, latitudinous construction in order to enlarge the national authority at the expense of the States. By the jealousies and fears of our ancestors we have preserved our liberties, and preserved them through the instrumentalities of local self-government.

Hence it is not a matter of surprise that Senators on this side of the Chamber, just after an election when they have gone before the country upon the one single issue that taxation can only be imposed for revenue for public purposes, can not come into this body and admit that the power to tax may be perverted and abused and used as a legitimate instrument for the suppression of a right reserved by the States.

But they contend that some other provision of the Constitution may be invoked; that some other dark retreat, hitherto unpenetrated, may be discovered where this monster may be crowned and the sword placed in his hands, that he may invade the States and trample out of existence the rights that were intended to be secured by that instrument. They are willing to accomplish the same purpose, but under a power hitherto unclaimed by any party in this country. They hold that the right to make contracts—to buy and sell—may be suppressed under the power to regulate commerce among the States.

This reminds me of an incident which occurred immediately on the close of our "unpleasantness." A number of gentlemen were sitting in a social circle discussing the proclamation of President Johnson, in which he proposed to grant amnesty to everyone in the Southern States beneath the rank of colonel who had taken part in the insurrection. A number of us who had been colonels were discussing what it meant. Some said it meant that there was hemp growing for our necks and we had better leave the country.

Some took a more cheerful view of the subject and said it was only intended to keep the colonels down until the subordinates could be brought to accept the altered condition of things. A gentleman, and a very intelligent one, a great lawyer, a great scholar, a great humorist, and a great philosopher came in and said, "Gentlemen, I want to submit some questions for your serious consideration. I want to ask you if you do not all agree that all men must die?"

After some deliberation we said that we could not dispute the truth of the proposition that all men must die. He then asked if it was not equally true that it was only a question of time when we should die. That was admitted also. "Then, admitting that there is a time when all men must die, you must admit that all men must die when their time comes to die, do you not?" It was admitted that there was no escape from that situation. "Now," he said, "gentleman, when it is conceded that you have got to die and die when your time comes, do you not think it is very unphilosophical to be tormenting yourselves about whether you shall die perpendicularly or horizontally?" [Laughter.]

These two propositions admit that there are certain rights which are to be destroyed; that certain States must be invaded under some pretext of constitutional authority in order to reach and extinguish these rights which are now resting in security, through the protection of State governments. To those who are now in the enjoyment of these rights it makes little difference whether their suppression takes place by the perversion of the power to tax or the power to regulate commerce.

In the bill offered as an amendment by my distinguished friend from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], in order to inform the Supreme Court, he places in the face of his proposition the declaration that buying and selling for future delivery is an obstruction to interstate commerce. This declaration is an admission that the Supreme Court without that statement could never ascertain that fact by the provisions of the bill. There is nothing in the body of the bill that would inform the court or any intelligent citizen of the country that the things which it interdicts have any sort of relation to commerce among the States. What is commerce? And what is the power to regulate commerce?

Commerce is not production. It is not consumption. It is that intermediate stage between production and consumption. It is the movement of product from the producer to the consumer. Movement is essential to commerce. There can be no commerce until the product starts on its transportation, and none after its transportation ends. To give Congress rightful power over it, it must start on a journey that is to end in another State or a foreign country. If by any sort of distortion of language a contract to buy and sell may be construed to be a movement, it must be continued across the State line to give Congress the right to regulate it.

To call it gaming is not to define it as an act of commerce. Gaming may be an obstruction to morals, but it is the obstruction to commerce which Congress is authorized to remove. The States have reserved to themselves the power to regulate morals and have given to Congress the right to regulate commerce. They have felt at all times that they were more competent to regulate their domestic concerns than those who lived beyond their boundaries. They have never conferred that power on the General Government. The powers they gave to the National Government were such as no State could exercise by itself. It could not by itself regulate commercial intercourse between its own citizens and those of another State, or of a foreign state.

The powers of the National Government are international and interstate. But it can not prescribe the punishment of crime in a State when committed by one citizen of the State on another. Nor can it punish gaming or other immoral conduct. Nor has it the rightful power to enter the State and prescribe and enforce regulations to protect the health of its people, though we passed such a measure a few days ago.

If the National Government has jurisdiction of the subject it can either suppress or protect gaming, it can either suppress or protect crime. It may do what it wills in the State of Virginia, New Jersey, or Texas, and do it in defiance of the will and against the remonstrances of their people. Can the Federal Government license and uphold gambling shops in Texas against the wishes of her people? Can it license saloons or protect them in selling without license? If it has the power to destroy, it has the power to preserve and protect, and the power to keep and protect is more important than the power to destroy.

If Congress has the power to erect and sustain gambling shops, or the power to destroy them, no State can interfere, and if it should think proper to establish them they would stand though every man, woman, and child within its jurisdiction should remonstrate against it. This power this bill and its supporters claim for Congress. I claim for the people of every State the right to govern themselves, and to determine for themselves what they will permit to live within their jurisdiction and what they will interdict.

Congress is authorized to regulate commerce among the States, and to make all laws that are necessary and proper to carry that power into execution. Is the supression of buying and selling necessary to regulate commerce? Is it an appropriate means to be adopted in regulating commerce? In answer to these questions I will not quote one of the great sires of the Democratic party who contend for strictly construing all the grants in the Constitution. I will quote that great Federalist who sat so long upon the Supreme bench, and who during his life did more than all others, by judicial interpretation, and I might almost say by judicial legislation, to warp and twist the Constitution and wrench it from the pedestal upon which the jealous lovers of liberty placed it.

In the case of McCulloch vs. The State of Maryland, Chief Justice Marshall laid down a rule for determining the constitutionality of any measure proposed by Congress to execute any provision of the Constitution; and his language has been repeatedly quoted and indorsed by Federal and State courts. He says:

> Let the end be legitimate, let it be within the scope of the Constitution; and all means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, which are not prohibited, but consist with the letter and spirit of the Constitution, are constitutional.

Let us apply his test to this bill. Is the end to be reached legitimate? The end is the suppression of buying and selling farm products for future delivery. Is that end within the scope of the Constitution? If so, why not say so directly? Why call it a regulation of commerce? That subterfuge is only resorted to because the end is illegitimate and without the scope of the Constitution.

The end is neither within the scope of the language of the Constitution nor within the scope of any fair implications from its powers. Are the means used in this bill appropriate? Appropriate for what? Not for suppression of gaming, but for regulation of commerce. Are they plainly adapted to that end? No, they are adapted to suppress buying and selling in the State, but not at all adapted, either plainly or obscurely, to a regulation of commerce among the States. And no supporter of the measure claims it as a means to that end. Its purpose, stated by its friends in the bill and on the floor, is to suppress contracts now legal by State law, and not to regulate commerce.

The power given in the Constitution was given to regulate commerce, not to be perverted to some other purpose. The Constitution confers power on Congress for certain purposes, and it is not a legitimate exercise of that power when it is used for a purpose forbidden to Congress. The power to regulate commerce was to free it, secure it, cheapen it, expedite it. The restrictions on commerce, more than any other cause, gave birth to the Constitution. It was to free it from restrictions that the old confederation was abandoned and the "more perfect" union substituted in its stead.

In the resolutions passed by Virginia appointing delegates to Annapolis the regulation of commerce was the only subject mentioned. That there were other causes we all know, but they were dwarfed in the presence of the great overshadowing evil of commercial obstructions. The power was given in the Constitution of "the more perfect union" to so regulate it as to remove the hindrances; but does this bill propose to emancipate our commerce from any of its fetters? Does it secure it while moving? Does it expedite its movement? Does it cheapen its cost? These were the ends the fathers were looking to when the power was granted.

Where are the appropriate means to secure the end? In what part of either of these propositions is there anything looking to securing, freeing, expediting, or cheapening commerce? Commerce is the exchange of commodities, and this exchange had been hindered, obstructed, and burdened by the several States before the adoption of the Constitution by taxes and other means and the Constitution was adopted and power given to Congress to remove these objections from its way.

Commerce, as I have said, is transportation. It is the movement of the products of labor. It is the movement of things that have commercial value. Wind has no commercial value, and we are told that this bill means to prohibit the purchase and sale of wind. Contracts nominally for the sale of cotton, really for the sale of nothing. Water has no commercial value and neither the movement of wind or water is regulated by law. The beneficence of the Creater has given to everyone without money and without price wind and water sufficient for all wants. But I can imagine a condition where both of them would have commercial value. I imagine that if some one could have conveyed wind into that dark hole of Calcutta on that fatal summer night when the English prisoners were suffocating and dying for want of air he could have sold it for a fabulous price by the square foot.

If some one could be found in a desert perishing for want of water and a passing traveler had more than his wants required he could sell it. Under such circumstances wind and water would have commercial value. But neither New York nor New Orleans have ever known wind and water to be so scarce as to be bought and sold on boards of trade or elsewhere. Yet this bill is designed to suppress the sale and purchase of wind in these two cities, and for the declared reason that these transactions are gambling devices.

There are two kinds of buying and selling for future delivery. One is real, the other fictitious. One is a necessary and appropriate means for facilitating the movement of products in exchange. The other is speculating on these prices, and it may be properly called gambling. Gambling in all its varied phases is a subject that belongs within the jurisdiction of the States, and the power either to protect it or suppress it has never been surrendered by the people of the States to the Federal Government. It has been over and over declared by the courts that everything affecting the morals, health, or domestic affairs of the people of the States is within the exclusive control of their local governments.

This fact this bill admits on its face, when by strategy it seeks to prevent the courts from reaching it by a declaration that these things are obstructions to interstate commerce. It is contended that this declaration prevents the courts from inquiring whether it is a violation of the Constitution. It is claimed that the courts can not look behind this declaration; that they are estopped from making the inquiry when a suitor or citizen may appeal to the courts for a vindication of his rights. This, sir, is a most startling assumption of power. Is there any right of any citizen of any State or Territory that can be destroyed without a remedy? If so what are courts created for? and why are they called courts of justice?

Why was it, when the Constitution was made by the wise men and submitted to the people, that they arose almost as one man and declared the work incomplete and compelled the first Congress to incorporate the first ten amendments, which have been designated the Bill of Rights of the Constitution? Why did that illustrious citizen whose pen wrote the Declaration of Independence write home from Paris where he was representing his Government and sound the warning note and demand the amendments that secured the personal, political, civil, and religious liberties of the people?

Why was it that freedom of religion, of speech, of the press, and of the peaceable assembly of the people were taken away from Congress? Why did they declare the inviolability of the persons, houses, and papers of the citizen, and surround them with interdictions against Congressional approach? Why take the right of trial by jury beyond the reach of Congress? Why declare that every person should have a speedy public trial by an impartial jury? Why that he should be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation? Why that he should be confronted with the witnesses against him, and have the process of the courts to compel the attendance of the witnesses in his favor?

All these were the bulwarks and defenses thrown around the citizen to shield him against the oppression of arbitrary power. The courts were created to hear every cause and decree and enforce justice to every citizen. But now we are told that these safeguards are all worthless and obstructions to interstate commerce; that the courts must be muzzled; that self-government of the local communities must be abandoned, and Congress must put on the purple vestment of arbitrary power.

In Great Britain the parliament is the seat of sovereignty; in this country it is not Congress but the people. And the people as the paramount sovereigns have given to Congress some, to the States some, and reserved the balance to themselves. Ours are governments of distributed powers, a complex system of "checks and balances." The National Government is one of enumerated powers. It was so defined by the great Federalist Chief Justice, but the encroachments it is making constantly upon the rights of local self-government will soon require it to be defined as a Government of nonenumerated powers—an absolute legislative despotism.

If it be true, as contended, that Congress by writing in the face of a bill that its purpose is to execute some specific grant in the Constitution can take from the courts all power to declare it unconstitutional, though it be in the very teeth of constitutional interdictions, then this is no longer a Government of three independent and coördinate branches. The executive and the judiciary have gone out of existence, or they have fallen into dependence and exert their powers only by the permission of the legislative department. Among all free people it is an accepted truth that the freest and best government can only exist where these three branches are independent of each other. This bill boldly challenges that truth and demands that Congress shall usurp and exercise that power whether right or wrong.

Mr. President, this is not the first attempt to muzzle the courts of the country by a legislative declaration in a bill. The Legislature of the State of Minnesota tried the experiment a few years ago, and a case was made and brought by appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. It was an attempt to control interstate commerce, and confessing on its face, like this bill does, that it was usurping a power that did not belong to it, made a declaration in its title that it was executing a power that belonged within its jurisdiction. The Supreme Court declared it unconstitutional, null, and void, in spite of its declaration. In that case they say:

> In whatever language a statute may be framed, its purpose must be determined by its natural and reasonable effect, and the presumption that it was enacted in good faith for the purpose expressed in the title can not control the determination of the question whether it is or is not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. (Minn vs. Barber.)

I suppose that every court in the United States would so rule. I can not see how any court could rule otherwise. This was a case arising on the interpretation of a State statute, but the construction of language is the same whether the words are employed in Federal or State legislation.

Would not a court in the States have held the same rule to be correct in construing the same statute? And would not the Supreme Court of the United States have applied the same rule to the same language if found in a law of Congress? All the courts have sworn to support the Constitution of the United States just as we have. We have all been swearing to support the Constitution so long that we have almost forgotten what it means. We seem sometimes under pressure to regard that obligation as merely an old formula of induction into office that is retained alone on account of its age.

Every officer, from the highest to the lowest, in our State governments, and every officer, from the President down, in the Federal Government was required by our jealous, liberty-loving fathers to bring his conscience with him and lift his hand and invoke the Divine Being to help him keep his solemn promise to support the Constitution which they had erected as the citadel of the people's liberties. The obligations of that oath require the officer to support that Constitution in every word that sustains the National Government, in every word that sustains the State goverments, and in every word that sustains the individual person in governing himself.

To support the Constitution we are to abstain from invading either one of the jurisdictions lying outside the boundaries of national authority. What does the Constitution mean if it does not mean that both national and State governments are to be preserved, as Mr. Jefferson said, each revolving "like the planets around their common sun"? There is no conflict between them. Each turns on its own axis and moves in its own orbit. In defining our duty he said, in his inaugural in 1801:

The support of the State governments in all their rights, as the most competent administrations for our domestic concerns, and the surest bulwarks against antirepublican tendencies: the preservation of the General Government in its whole constitutional vigor as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad.

We are citizens of the United States and citizens of the several States as well. We are here the representatives of the citizens of both governments. We have assumed obligations to the citizens of the States and citizens of the United States, and to the governments of both the State and the United States. And our duty is to each and all to preserve the landmarks and prevent each from crossing the boundary that divides the rights of each from the other.

But if we are to go on stretching out the national authority by India rubber construction, surpassing that of the wildest days of the most extreme of the Federalist judges; if we on this side of the Chamber born and reared in the faith of strict construction, as the essential means of preserving the right of local self-government unimpaired, "the right preservative of all rights;" if we are to go about with a lighted candle and a microscope hunting for some dark recesses in the Constitution where we may find some power with which to invade our own States and destroy rights belonging to our people and secured to them by the laws which they have made for that purpose, then indeed are we nearing the beginning of the end.

It may be said, as it is in this case and as it is said in every case, "We come to do you good." These invasions are all made in the sacred name of right. They say they come to secure a right that the State government can not secure; they come to bestow a blessing that the State government can not dispense.

If these assumptions are correct, local self-government is wrong. Constitutions and constitutional limitations are all wrong. Bills of rights and reservations in the sacred name of liberty are all wrong. And our fathers instead of being the greatest, the wisest and most profound statesmen that God has ever given to the world, were mere charlatans and pretenders.

All the checks and balances, all the reservations and prohibitions were but obstructions, instead of safeguards to right. If what we are doing now is right, it would have been better to have left all the barriers down and not have imposed on us the task of hunting subterfuges by the aid of which we might ride, booted and spurred, over all the rights of the people of the several States.

It has been said that the war has changed the relations hitherto existing between the national and State governments. It has been said that we have passed away from some of the ideas and principles taught by Mr. Jefferson; and so we have. He doubtless believed, when he wrote the Kentucky resolutions a century ago that when an unconstitutional act was passed by Congress, the rightful remedy was nullification by the States. Sixty years ago that sentiment was condemned and buried by the people of the United States. I do not know that he believed in the right of a State to secede; but whether he did or not, thirty years ago that right was blotted out by a bloody sponge.

But is there nothing for which he contended that remains to us? The Constitution remains to us the same as in his day, with the exception of the amendments made to meet certain supposed requirements of a class of persons whose status had been changed by the results of the war. In the beautiful and expressive words of Chief Justice Chase, we have yet "an indestructible Union composed of indestructible States." Local self-government remains to us, with all the rights it had at the beginning of the Union. Not a single muscle, nerve, or tendon is paralyzed or impaired.

The Union in the whole scope of its constitutional vigor still remains, and so remain in all their youthful vigor all the States that compose and all the principles upon which the Union was formed, and upon which it is to be preserved and transmitted to posterity. The National Government lives within the circle of powers given to it by the people of the several States, and the local governments live within the circle of powers retained by the people for themselves.

The organization and preservation of local government as an essential instrument for the preservation of just government is an idea that was not born with the men who framed our Constitution.

The jealous love, the sleepless vigilance with which our fathers watched over local self-government was inherited by them, and their characteristics like their blood may be traced back through many generations. Two thousand years ago the germ which has been developed through centuries was seen in the Teutonic tribes in the forests of Germany. Five centuries afterward the same traits were seen in their descendants in Great Britain. When the Saxons came and established themselves, we see them occupying the territory now known as England, and it was divided up into several small sovereignties. They kept their separate and independent governments until their autonomy was destroyed by the sword.

When the Norman came and blotted out with blood their laws, language, and institutions of government, yet their ideas continued to live and struggle for the mastery. The streams murmured them and the very winds that swept over hills and plains seemed to bear them continually on their wings. The historian says that while the Norman gave the laws the vanquished Saxons gave their ideas to their victors. The advent to power of the Norman was the advent of an irrepressible conflict between power and liberty, between right and wrong.

In the beginning of the thirteenth century, when the king was brought to Runnymede, it was not to establish a new code hitherto unknown. It was to promise to restore ancient institutions. It was to give larger liberty, the idol the Saxon worshiped. From that time down to 1688 the struggle was kept up with little result. But in 1688 great results were accomplished, but not sufficient to satisfy men who felt their strength and felt that they were born to be free. From the advent of the house of Orange we have seen the public mind of England agitated like the ocean when stirred by angry winds, and one reform after another has been demanded, and each for larger liberty to the subject.

To-day that kingdom is still in the throes, and one part of its people who have long been oppressed by a centralized power are demanding home rule. And the Irishman demands it because he has realized through a long period of oppression that good government can only come from home rule, or local self-government. It was the same pernicious administration of the same Parliament that drove our ancestors to this country. They, too, realized that just government could only be found in self-government in localities of limited areas. When they came they settled the wilds, formed societies, and in these infant States they demanded from their sovereigns and had written in their charters the right of governing themselves.

"A burned child dreads the fire," and they had been thoroughly scorched in the fires of political and religious persecution. How jealously each one of the little States watched over the safety of its household! How vigilantly each watched its own rights, and how courageously each resisted the advancing step of the invader! The irritation and friction eventuated in open rebellion, and that ended in victory to the Colonies, and the treaty of peace acknowledged them as independent States. Though they fought as one people, when peace came they were many.

In the midst of that terrible and exhausting struggle, when the destinies of all hung upon the fortunate termination of the war, and its success depended upon the union of every element of strength possessed by the whole, how reluctantly they yielded even the least mite of power! And the government they created was a rope of sand that perished of its own impotency in one decade. So great had been the suffering they had endured and so deeply had the evils of a powerful centralized government impressed themselves upon them, that all the wisdom of all their great men and all their arguments and entreaties could not induce them to give to the central government power enough to live.

When at last experience had shown them that they must have a stronger government, they halted and debated over it, and when it was made by their representatives they waited, some of them nearly two years, before they would accept, and not then till they made it bristle with interdictions against the invasions of their domestic concerns. With all these lessons before us, we are here in the closing years of the first century, with all the grandest achievements ever accomplished in the annals of mankind as the direct result of liberty guarded by local self-government, and we are closing our eyes to our own history and almost falling on our knees and begging the National Government to come into the heritage reserved to liberty and take the worthless bauble from our hands.

We are begging the distant and centralized power to cease tantalizing us and take the worthless beads that have been hanging around our necks, for they have ceased to amuse us and they annoy us with their noise. We are beseeching the General Government to accept the surrender without terms and relieve us of the care of the toys that have grown old and worn and no longer find any place in our affections. We are invoking, beseeching, and entreating the National Government to come and close the doors of the courts, national and State, paralyze the arms of the executives, and make Congress one great, supreme, unchallenged sovereign, and bid it go into all the States and do just what it pleases, as it pleases, and when it pleases.

My friend from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] has just given me a note and recalled to my mind the fact that the Constitution as it was made at the beginning of the Government is the same to-day, with the exception of the amendments that were deemed to be necessary to meet the altered conditions of certain parts of our population; but no single feature of that instrument has been changed in reference to the rights and powers of the States which compose the Union. In that respect it is the Constitution, in the very words, as it was written by our fathers.

Mr. President, when the Constitution was adopted, and the Government organized, and a Federalist Supreme Court appointed, with Chief Justice Jay at the head, that court brought the State of Georgia to its bar, just as it would have done the meanest culprit in the land. State sovereignty over its own domestic affairs was ignored, and States, as persons, were held amenable to the processes of Federal courts. The Federalists had the organization and machinery of the Government, but democracy had the hearts of the people, and the decision of Chisholm vs. Georgia had scarcely been pronounced till a storm of disapprobation arose and it was swept away by an amendment of the Constitution, as a Minnesota blizzard would sweep the snow before its breath.

The people then were not in favor of obliterating the boundaries between national and local power, and our statesmen are mistaken if they think the people of the United States are in favor of it now. Our people to-day cling to the principle of local self-government as tenaciously as they did then or at any other time in the past. They know by instinct that their liberties depend upon its preservation. It runs in their blood and is transmitted from generation to generation. I would not hesitate to stand before any audience in the Union from the rocky coasts of New England across to the Pacific or down through the South and vindicate the right of every State in the Union to deal with its own people in its own way, and I would meet the approval of my audience, too, wherever I found it.

The National Government has no rightful power to suppress immorality in a State. If it has that right, it has power over the whole subject and may establish it and protect it against the will of the people. If it has the right to punish murder in the State, it has a right to turn the murderers loose on an innocent, helpless people, and they are without the power to remedy the wrongs to which they are subjected. If the National Government may do these things, it may come unbidden into the State, throw open the doors of its penitentiaries and prisons, take the criminals from the custody of the State courts, deprive the people of the security sought to be established by their local institutions, and turn loose the felons upon society.

Self-government is the touchstone by which each community secures its own liberty, peace, and prosperity against domestic violence. Local self-government in this country is founded upon a faith that is as steadfast and immovable as the rock on which the mountains stand—a faith, a deep-rooted conviction that every community is best governed when governed by itself and governed by laws which it can make and unmake at pleasure.

Mr. President, if we can by this system of India-rubber construction; if, as Chief Justice Taney says, we can give new definitions to old words, and call a contract made in a State between citizens of the State, to be performed in the State, an obstruction to interstate commerce, we can by the same means unsurp every power retained by the States. There is no end to Congressional dominion. We can regulate production in all its branches. We can regulate the consumption of all articles. We can say that a certain number of acres shall be planted in cotton, limit the production, and then raise the price by decreasing the supply.

We can prohibit the farmers in Texas from planting cotton and cut down the annual crop 2,000,000 bales and advance the price in all the other States. Texas would only have 2 votes out of 88 in the Senate to prevent it, and 13 out of 356 in the other branch. Her 3,000,000 people might sit in the ashes of ruin and desolation, but she would be powerless to avert the calamity. How long will it be till Congress will be pressed by some powerful interests to limit the number of acres of wheat that shall be grown; of hogs that shall be fattened; of bacon that shall be cured and put upon the market?

If this bill is to be passed in defiance of the Constitution because its friends believe it will raise the prices of certain products, then any other measure that will increase prices will be equally commendable. And there is no reason why the other cotton States may not combine with the wheat States and the manufacturing States and thus, by prohibiting the people of Texas from growing cotton, increase largely the price of the staple, fill the pockets of the cotton-growers of other States with money, and fill the bosoms of my constituents with bitterness and distress.

That power, sir, I deny to this Government, and as long as I am intrusted by the people of Texas as their representative I shall refuse to recognize it. As there is no limit to the elasticity of this kind of construction we can stretch it still further. We can not only say that Congress has the power to regulate the price of the cotton, but the price of the land that produces the cotton, and we can continue to stretch our power till we reach the absurdity to which Mr. Jefferson called attention in his letter to Edward Livingston, April 30, 1800, when he was sitting where you are now sitting, Mr. President, and presiding over this body. He says:

> The House of Representatives sent us yesterday a bill for incorporating a company to work Roosewell's copper mines in New Jersey. I do not know whether it is understood that the Legislature of Jersey was incompetent to this, or merely that we have concurrent legislation under the sweeping clause. Congress are authorized to defend the nation; ships are necessary for defense; copper is necessary for ships; mines necessary for copper; a company necessary to work the mines; and who can doubt this reasoning who has ever played at "this is the house that Jack built"? Under such a process of filiation of necessities the sweeping clause makes clean work.

I should say that it did make "clean work," and I should say further that if the construction contended for is right, Congress will eventually make clean work of the States and everything within their boundaries. If the amendment written upon the face of the bill that brands it as a regulation of commerce can not be traversed, then Congress is a legislative despotism. All local governments must pass into extinction; all rights must be dealt with here, far away from the people concerned, beyond the reach of their power. They must be tried before a tribunal that is so remote as to be beyond the kindly touch of sympathy for their distresses and sufferings, and a tribunal that may do what it will with all the rights of life, liberty, property, and happiness of a powerless people who, by constitutional construction, have fallen under its dominion.

I have some passages here from the great founder of the party to which I belong which I wish to read to the Senate to show what he thought of local self-government as the instrument of preserving freedom. In a letter to Mr. Stuart, dated December 23, 1791, he says:

> I wish to preserve the line drawn by the Federal Constitution between general and particular governments as it stands at present, and to take every prudent means of preventing either from stepping over it. Though the experiment has not yet had a long enough course to show us from which quarter encroachments are most to be feared, yet it is easy to foresee, from the nature of things, that encroachments of the State governments will tend to an excess of liberty, which will correct itself (as in the late instance), while those of the General Government will tend to monarchy, which will fortify itself from day to day instead of working its own cure, as all experience shows.
> I would rather be exposed to the inconveniences attending too much liberty than those attending too small a degree of it. Then it is important to strengthen the State governments, and as this can not be done by any change in the Federal Constitution (for the preservation of that is all we need contend for), it must be done by the States themselves erecting such barriers at the constitutional line as can not be surmounted either by themselves or by the General Government. The only barrier in their power is a wise government. A weak one will lose ground in every contest.

In a letter to Mr. Fitzhugh, dated February 23, 1798, he again says:

> I do not think it for the interest of the General Government itself, and still less for the Union at large, that the State governments should be so little respected as they have been. However, I dare say, that in time all these, as well as their central Government, like the planets, revolving around their common sun, acting and acted upon according to their respective weights and distances, will produce that beautiful equilibrium on which our Constitution is founded, and which I believe it will exhibit to the world in a degree of perfection unexampled but in the planetary system itself.

In a letter to Judge Johnson, dated June 12, 1823, he writes:

I ask for no straining of words against the General Government, nor yet against the States. I believe the States can best govern our home concerns, and the General Government our foreign ones. I wish therefore to see maintained that wholesome distribution of powers established by the Constitution for the limitation of both; and never to see all offices trasferred to Washington, where, further withdrawn from the eyes of the people, they may more secretly be bought and sold as at market.

In a letter to Joseph C. Cabell, dated Monticello, February 2, 1816, he again writes:

The way to have good and safe government is not to trust it all to one, but to divide it among the many, distributing to every one exactly the functions he is competent to. Let the National Goverment be intrusted with the defense of the nation and its foreign and federal relations; the State government, with the civil rights, laws, police, and administration of what concerns the State generally; the counties, with the local concerns of the counties, and each ward direct the interests within itself. It is by dividing and subdividing these republics, from the great national one down, through all its subordinations until it ends in the administration of every man's farm by himself, by placing under every one what his own eye may superintend, that all will be done for the best.

What has destroyed liberty and the rights of man in every government which has ever existe i under the sun? The generalizing and concentrating all cares and powers into one body, no matter whether of the autocrats of Russia or France, or of the aristocrats of a Venetian Senate. And I do believe that if the Almighty has not decreed that man shall never be free (and it is a blasphemy to believe it) that the secret will be found to be in the making himself the depository of the powers respecting himself, so far as he is competent to them, and delegating only what is beyond his competence by a synthetical process to higher and higher orders of functionaries so as to trust fewer and fewer powers in proportion as the trustees become more and more oligarchical. The elementary republics of the wards, the county republics, the State republics, and the Republic of the Union, would form a gradation of authorities, standing each on the basis of law, holding every one its delegated share of powers, and constituting, truly, a system of fundamental balances and checks for the Government.

To William T. Barry he writes July 2, 1822:

If ever this vast country is brought under a single government it will be one of the most extensive corruption, indifferent, and incapable of a wholesome care over so wide a spread of surface. This will not be borne and you will have to choose between reformation and revolution. If I know the spirit of this country, one or the other is inevitable. Before the canker is become inveterate, before its venom has reached so much of the body politic as to get beyond control, remedy should be applied.

In a letter to Mr. C. Hammond, August 18, 1821, Mr. Jefferson says:

It has long, however, been my opinion, and I have never shrunk from its expression (although I do not choose to put it into a newspaper, nor, like a Priam in armor, offer myself its champion), that the germ of dissolution of our Federal Government is in the constitution of the Federal judiciary; an irresponsible body (for impeachment is scarcely a scarecrow), working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little to-day and a little to-morrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a thief, over the field of jurisdiction, until all shall be usurped from the States, and the government of all be consolidated into one.

To this I am opposed, because, when all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another, and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated. It will be as in Europe, where every man must be either pike or gudeon, hammer or anvil. Our functionaries and theirs are wares from the same workshop, made of the same materials and by the same hand. If the States look with apathy on this silent descent of their government into the gulf which is to swallow all, we have only to weep over the human character formed uncontrollable but by a rod of iron, and the blasphemers of man, as incapable of self-government, become his true historians.

In a letter to Judge Johnson, June 12, 1823, Mr. Jefferson says:

I have stated above that the original objects of the Federalists were, first, to warp our Government more to the form and principles of monarchy, and, second, to weaken the barriers of the State governments as coördinate powers. In the first they have been so completely foiled by the universal spirit of the nation that they have abandoned the enterprise, shrunk from the odium of their old appellation, taken to themselves a participation of ours, and under the pseudo-republican mask are now aiming at their second object, and, strengthened by unsuspecting or apostate recruits from our ranks, are advancing fast towards an ascendancy.

I have been blamed for saying that a prevalence of the doctrines of consolidation would one day call for reformation or revolution. I answer by asking if a single State of the Union would have agreed to the Constitution had it given all powers to the General Government? If the whole opposition to it did not proceed from the jealousy and fear of every State of being subjected to the other States in matters merely its own? And if there is any reason to believe the States more disposed now than then to acquiesce in this general surrender of all their rights and powers to a consolidated government, one and undivided?

In a letter to Judge Johnson, June 14, 1823, he said:

Can it be believed, that under the jealousies prevailing against the General Government, at the adoption of the Constitution, the States meant to surrender the authority of preserving order, of enforcing moral duties, and restraining vice within their own territory? And this is the present case, that of Cohen being under the ancient and general law of gaming. Can any good be effected by taking from the States the moral rule of their citizens, and subordinating it to the general authority, or to one of their corporations, which may justify forcing the meaning of words, hunting after possible constructions, and hanging inference on inference, from heaven to earth, like Jacob's ladder.

Such an intention was impossible, and such a licentiousness of construction and inference, if exercised by both governments, as may be done with equal right, would equally authorize both to claim all power, general and particular, and break up the foundations of the Union. Laws are made for men of ordinary understanding, and should, therefore, be construed by the ordinary rules of common sense.

If this letter had been written yesterday to a friend at Washington, saying that it was the duty of the States to enforce moral duties and restrain vice within their territories, everybody would have said he is opposing the Hatch antioption bill. When he asks the question, "Can any good be effected by taking from States the moral rule of their citizens and subordinating it to the general authority?" everyone would have said he is evidently aiming at the antioption bill. When he said, in his inaugural, the State governments were the surest guaranty against antirepublican tendencies, he meant that antioption bills like this were antirepublican and antidemocratic and anti-American.

Again, in a letter to William B. Giles, December 26, 1825, Mr. Jefferson says:

I wrote you a letter yesterday, of which you will be free to make what use you please. This will contain matters not intended for the public eye. I see, as you do, and with the deepest affliction the rapid strides with which the Federal branch of our Government is advancing towards the usurpation of all the rights reserved to the States, and the consolidation in itself of all powers, foreign and domestic; and that, too, by constructions which, if legitimate, leave no limits to their power. Taken together, the decisions of the Federal court, the doctrines of the President, and the misconstructions of the constitutional compact acted on by the Legislature of the Federal branch, and it is but too evident that the three ruling branches of that department are in combination to strip their colleagues, the State authorities, of the powers reserved by them and to exercise themselves all functions, foreign and domestic.

Under the power to regulate commerce, they assume indefinitely that also over agriculture and manufactures, and call it regulation to take the earnings of one of these branches of industry, and that too the most depressed, and put them into the pockets of the other, the most flourishing of all. Under the authority to establish post-roads, they claim that of cutting down mountains for the construction of roads, of digging canals, and aided by a little sophistry on the words "general welfare," a right to do, not only the acts to effect that which are specifically enumerated and permitted, but whatsoever they shall think or pretend will be for the general welfare.

And again, in his autobiography, page 82, he says:

It is not by the consolidation or concentration of powers, but by their distribution that good government is effected. Were not this great country already divided into States, that division must be made, that each might do for itself what concerns itself directly, and what it can so much better do than a distant authority. Every State again is divided into counties, each to take care of what lies within its local bounds; each county again into townships or wards to manage minute details; and every ward into farms, to be governed each by its individual proprietor. Were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap we should soon want bread. It is by this partition of cares, descending in gradation from general to particular, that the mass of human affairs may be best managed for the good and prosperity of all.

The last extract I will give is from a letter to Albert Gallatin, dated June 16, 1817, in which he writes:

You will have learned that an act for internal improvement, after passing both Houses, was negatived by the President. The act was founded, avowedly, on the principle that the phrase in the Constitution which authorizes Congress "to lay taxes, to pay the debts, and provide for the general welfare," was an extension of the powers specifically enumerated to whatever would promote the general welfare; and this, you know, was the Federal doctrine. Whereas, our tenet ever was and indeed it is almost the only landmark which now divides the Federalists from the Republicans, that Congress had not unlimited powers to provide for the general welfare, but were restrained to those specifically enumerated; and that, as it was never meant they should provide for that welfare but by the exercise of the enumerated powers, so it could not have been meant they should raise money for purposes which the enumeration did not place under their action; consequently, that the specification of powers is a limitation of the purposes for which they may raise the money.

That I have always understood to be the Democratic creed. I have understood, and still understand, that it is around this distribution of the powers of government that the Democratic party has been standing throughout its existence, challenging every advance that crosses the line, it makes no difference under what sort of a pretense the advance may come.

But I will not detain the Senate longer in a discussion of the constitutional power to pass this bill or of rules of construction or of party tenets. I wish to say a few things about the bill itself, and I will speak as though I were standing in the Legislature of the State of Texas. I say I will not support this bill because it is not a regulation of commerce; because it does not and can not advance the price of either cotton, wheat, corn, or any other agricultural product embraced in it.

What is it that makes price? We have been told all along, and told in books, and I have never known it to be challenged until now, that the price of an article depends upon the supply of the article in a market and the demand for that supply. We all know, when we get to thinking about it, that that is the truth, and that that law is as incessant in its operation and as irreversible as the law of gravitation itself that compels water to run down hill instead of up. Water does not run down-hill sometimes and sometimes up-hill, but in obedience to a great law of nature, to which everyone has to conform, except the Congress of the United States, water runs to seek its level, and it runs down.

Why is it that demand and supply fix the price? It comes out of the law of human nature just as it was written by the Creator in the breast of man as a part of his constitution. No man will pay more for a thing than he can get it for. Self-interest makes that limitation. Every man will exact as much for the thing he sells as he can get. The limitation is fixed by the wants of those who buy and by the supply of those who sell. You can not make it anything else.

Cotton is the thing we are told about on this side of the Chamber; wheat on the other side. Every man who raises a bale of cotton has got to pay the cost of production. Who denies that? He has got to pay the cost of transportation to market. Who denies that? He has got to pay every cost incident to its production and transportation and then sell it at the market price. These expenditures the producer is bound to incur and he can not escape them.

Let me illustrate it. If a man in Texas, away out in the Panhandle country of our State, away from railroads, raises a bale of cotton at a cost of $20, hauls it 100 miles to a railroad, pays $5 transportation by wagon, that is $25 it has cost him at the railroad. He pays $5 more to have it transported by rail to Galveston; that is $30. He pays $5 at Galveston to have it transported to Liverpool, where it is sold in the market which regulates the price of cotton for the world, because there is gathered together the largest supply in the world. There is the largest demand. The largest demand makes the highest prices; and the market of the highest price controls all other markets. Cotton has the highest price in Liverpool that it has anywhere, and the Liverpool price regulates the price of cotton all over the globe.

The cost of production and transportation of that bale of cotton is $35 delivered in Liverpool. When that cotton comes in competition with all other cotton in Liverpool we find that 500-pound bale of cotton is worth $50. The margin of profit to the producer is $15. He pays all the cost out of his own pocket. Nobody else pays it. No one else is willing to pay any part of it, and he can not compel anyone to pay any part of it. The board of trade does not pay it. It does not buy the cotton. If he ships it directly he pays it, and nobody else touches it.

Now let us see another case. A farmer living on the Mississippi River just below New Orleans raises another bale of the same weight and the same grade of cotton. It costs him $20 to produce it. He puts it on a vessel at his farm on the river bank and sends it to Liverpool for $5. His cost of production and transportation is $25. In the market the two bales of cotton are sold for the same price exactly. Competition regulates that. The Louisiana man pockets $25 profit; the Texas man pockets $15.

Let us take another case. A farmer living in Georgia close to Savannah, along the seashore, raises another bale of cotton of the same grade and the same weight at the same cost. He finds a vessel going to Liverpool, perhaps after steel rails or pig iron, and the commander says, "I will carry your cotton for you for nothing; I want it for ballast in my vessel." His bale of cotton has cost him $20. He sells it at $50 in Liverpool, and his profit is $30.

Then we are told in this bill that all these charges that are accumulating in these boards of trade are distributed around by the cotton producers of the country, and they have got them all to pay. I want to know if that Georgia fellow pays any part of the cost of transporting the bale of cotton of the Texas man to Liverpool? I want to know if he comes up and helps to pay the charges of the Louisiana man in transporting his cotton to Liverpool?

Everyone will at once say no, because the charge is a part of the cotton and follows the bale wherever it goes. Every charge incurred by production and transportation is incorporated with the cotton and sticks to it as closely as the tie and bagging. When the farmer sells to the cotton-buyer the buyer gets the money from the bank and delivers the bill of lading as security for the advance. When the cotton starts the bill of lading goes with it to secure the lien on the cotton for the money advanced in its purchase. The banker who advanced the money is not doing business on wind, but on business principles. He takes the collateral that gives him the right to control the property.

As that bale goes, so go its charges fixed to it, and when it is sold all its charges are paid out of its proceeds. It is sold at the market price, all charges are paid, and the difference between its charges and the market price is the profit of its owner. How can any other charge be saddled on that bale of cotton except those incurred in its production and its transportation? How can the wind charges of the cotton exchanges of New York and New Orleans become attached to it? Can cotton gamblers or others attach to it any of their losses or expenditures.

If so I would like to know how it can be done. If that be true, every man holds his property subject to such charges of others as they may think proper to make. Every one of the 9,000,000 bales of the crop of 1890 and every one of the 6,500,000 bales of last year's crop go to market the same way, subject to the same burdens and the same exemptions. And it makes no difference whether they go in lots of 100,000 at a time or one bale at a time.

I want to know how two men or two hundred men in a cotton exchange in New York or New Orleans by betting on the future price of cotton can affect the price of a single pound of cotton in Texas, when not a single citizen of that State knows anything of the bet or speculation.

I did not dream that such a thing was possible till I heard it so argued here. A statement has been quoted from a member of the Cotton Exchange of New York that says that is a fact. The statement is the expression of an opinion, and like many of the same kind I have heard in the committee rooms of the Capitol, is not only groundless but absurd. I have heard persons of learning state that when a tax was imposed on an imported article the price was not raised to the consumer.

I have heard statesmen say that the foreigner paid our taxes. I have heard intelligent manufacturers contend that their laborers got all the benefits of duties imposed on imports. Many people who make such statements believe them to be true. At best they are opinions, and opinions are sometimes true and sometimes not true. It is said that the charges incurred by buying and selling futures on cotton amount to eight or ten million dollars a year, and it may be asked, if the cotton-growers do not pay these charges, who do? Where does this money come from? Where does the money come from which is staked on cards, horse races, and elections?

It certainly is not paid by the manufacturer of cards or the raiser of horses, or the voters at elections. It may be obtained in various ways. The people who compose the cotton exchanges and boards of trade belong to other occupations—merchants, importers, grocers, bankers, speculators, many of them doubtless men of large wealth. Many of them make money; many of them lose it, but the losses and gains are confined to their own pockets, and when one loses all he quits. It can no more be said that the cotton-grower pays the charges of this business than it can be said that he receives the profits made by the successful speculator.

The trafficking on cotton in the boards of exchange does not and can not tranfer its costs to the cotton-grower. Neither does it, nor can it, depress the price of a single pound of cotton in the world. When one wishes to buy cotton he consults the prices at Liverpool, because that is the price in New York and New Orleans, less the cost of transportation and handling between these points and Liverpool. He would never consult the actions or the reports of the cotton exchanges of either New York or New Orleans.

If they report prices current at all they are made from prices ruling at Liverpool, and they are made by the actual supply and demand in that market. Prices can not be changed without changing either supply or demand; and charges incurred by speculators who bet on what the future price of cotton will be can not fasten themselves upon cotton or other property owned by others. I want to know how a charge of $5 made on a cotton contract in New York can come down to Texas and locate itself on a bale of cotton belonging to one of my constituents? If this can be proved, then it is in the power of people everywhere to put charges at their will to any amount on the property of others without their consent.

What is this reprehensible business of buying and selling for future delivery, which is so vehemently denounced all over the country and which this bill seeks to extinguish? It is a part of the immense commercial business of the country. It has grown up out of the development of our civilization by the necessities of that civilization. It comes like the bank, the bank check, the bill of exchange, the clearing-house, the railroad, the telegraph, and telephone. Does anyone suppose that either of these instruments of commerce could be dispensed with without arresting our industrial growth? Does anyone suppose that all future contracts for delivery of products could be stopped without incalculable injury.

There are many that are absolutely necessary to successful business. The bill admits this, for it excepts many kinds of contracts for future delivery from its operation. If it had not done so, and directed its destroying hand at all future contracts, its friends would no more support it now than I would stick my hands in the fire. There is not one of us who could return to his constituency after having voted for such a measure without receiving a stern rebuke for having done what every one of us would know was wrong.

The friends of this measure have attempted to draw the line between such contracts and those they would condemn. But the contracts they suppress are as necessary a part of the commercial machinery of the country as those they except. I am now speaking of real contracts and not speculations on prices. The commanders of our military posts on the frontier have their quartermasters to make contracts for the future delivery of corn for cavalry horses. The quartermaster does not go into the market every day and buy the day's supply at the market price of the day. No command could be supplied that way. He makes a contract for the future delivery of the corn all along through the year, as it is required. The contract in many cases is made before the corn is planted, before the ground is broken up, before the plowshare has been stuck into the soil, and it may be before the plow is made at the factory.

Every one will see, at once, that this sort of a future contract is necessary to the efficiency of the administration of the army. Suppose an army in the field and of course to be constantly supplied with food, clothing, and the munitions of war. Can it not be seen at once that contracts for future delivery of enormous amounts of army stores are absolutely essential to the organization and movement of its columns? But the army of a few hundred thousand men is but a type of that vast army of millions of men, women, and children who have to be supplied daily with the necessaries of life while fighting for life itself.

Labor is useless without exchange, and it is profitable just in proportion to the facilities of exchanging its products. If we would go through all the various departments of our industry and see the enormous output and the necessities for every instrument that could aid in its transportation and distribution, we could then see, perhaps, that not one of these aids could be dispensed with without material injury to the whole country. Contracts for the future delivery of cotton and other products have come into existence as we have been told during the last twenty-five years. It is a part of that vast system of commerce that has grown up during that time.

As production has grown, so have the demands for the means of distribution. Look at the clearing-houses in the large cities on the seaboard. They have grown up and spread out their business to enormous proportions. This vast commerce, foreign and domestic, could not now be carried on without the clearing-houses. They were invented by the necessities of commerce, and when we look at the business they do, we see in the city of New York alone their operations amount to $100,000,000 per day.

Mr. MCPHERSON. More than that. A thousand millions a week.

Mr. MILLS. More than $100,000,000 a day, the Senator from New Jersey informs me. Over one hundred and fifty millions a day. And of that vast sum 95 per cent is performed by credit, and credit utilized and made an instrument for helping forward the movement of the ceaseless stream of products pouring out of our hives of industry. What is a contract to buy and sell cotton for future delivery but a commercial contrivance by which credit is made money and made to contribute its resources to aid in the work of distribution. I wonder if my friends around me have recalled to their minds the mammoth proportions of the domestic commerce of the United States?

There was a very elaborate investigation made on that subject a few years ago and an extended report on it by Mr. Nimmo, Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, a very capable and well-informed gentleman. He stated then that the domestic commerce of the United States was twenty-five times as much as our whole foreign commerce. I do not doubt the correctness of his estimate. Our foreign commerce is now over eighteen hundred millions annually, and both foreign and domestic over forty billions. To move and market this monstrous volume requires the existence and employment of all the instrumentalties we now have, and we could not dispense with one without injury falling somewhere.

We might dispense with the telephone, but some convenience would be lost. We might dispense with the telegraph, and a still greater convenience would be lost. We might dispense with the railroads, and then we would lose both our commerce and our civilization. Does anyone think this commerce can be carried on by paying down in cash gold and silver for every exchange? Does anyone think that we could preserve our civilization by going back to barter and exchanging so many cows for a horse, or so many bushels of corn for a suit of clothes?

To do that is to go backward, not forward. And that is the policy which this bill commends to us. It is Bellamy looking backward. We want to go forward. To do that we must continue to utilize and capitalize credit. Instead of suppressing any of the agencies now employed in commerce we should invent more if we can. What possible wrong can there be if two men contract one to sell and the other to buy a bale of cotton to be delivered a year hence?

Suppose a farmer in my county goes to his neighbor who he knows has a little money and says, "I will give you my note for two bales of cotton worth $100, payable twelve months after date with interest, if you will let me have that amout of money to help sustain my family while I am working to make a crop," and the contract is made. This bill says that contract is virtuous when made by a farmer, but vicious when made by any other person. But let us see if it is not a contract that ought to be protected when made by anyone. The man who takes the note gives it for a horse which he needed; the assignee gives it to another farmer for provisions and family supplies, and the last trades it to a merchant in town for goods, and at the end of the year the maker of the note, having by the help of $100 supported his family, raised six or eight bales of cotton, pays two of them to the merchant, and takes up and cancels his note. Here four persons were benefited by that farmer coining into money, so to speak, $100 of his credit. But this bill says the three farmers all did right, but the merchant is a criminal for letting the farmers have clothing while working for subsistence.

The architects of this bill have abandoned the old landmark of free government established by Jefferson—"Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political." He has taught us that equality of rights is the fundamental principle of association among all free people. He lays it down with exactness and mathematical precision, and without exception. Now, it is proposed to permit some citizens to make contracts beneficial to them, and punish other citizens for making the same contracts. The farmer can make this contract now, so can a merchant, or a manufacturer, or any other.

But the bill says that if some person shall contract to sell and deliver 100 bales of cotton the 1st day of May, and that man is not a farmer, he must be punished. It is objected that these cotton contracts are sold several times and that the cotton crop of 1890, amounting to 9,000,000 bales, was sold five times, or, what is the same thing, five times as much cotton was sold as was raised. Is there anything hurtful in that? That $100 note was sold three times. The first time it was sold two men were benefited, the second time three, and the third time four. The advantages accrued increased just in proportion to the number of times the contract was sold.

If a man in New York or New Orleans capitalizes his credit, making a contract to sell 100 bales of cotton to be delivered the 1st day of July, and that contract, like a bank bill, bill of exchange, or promissory note, is sold five times, each time a benefit is conferred and the selling of the 100 bales of cotton fives times helps every one of the parties instead of hurting him.

The Director of our Mint tells us that there is about sixteen hundred millions of dollars in this country outside the Treasury, and in moving the mighty volume of our annual commerce each one of these dollars is promised twenty-five or thirty times; but instead of doing wrong to anyone, the whole country receives an incalculable benefit.

Mr. President, this bill can not do what its friends claim it will do if it should become a law. And it can not become a law unless it does it in the very teeth of the Constitution. Congress can not rightfully pass it under the power to lay and collect taxes. It can not do it under the power to regulate commerce among the States. But if Congress had the power under either or both clauses of the Constitution then it could not increase the prices of the products mentioned in it.

As I have said before, price is the product of demand and supply. Never was the truth of any proposition more abundantly proved than the prices of cotton and wheat have proven this in the last year. When the wheat crop of Europe was greatly reduced, and in some parts of Russia a total failure, and the supply was reduced, the price went up till the demand ceased, and then it went down again. When the cotton crop of the United States ran up to 9,000,000 bales, cotton went down, and when last year it fell to nearly six and a half million bales, cotton went up. The future system was in full operation all the time.

When prices were down they said futures did it. When prices rose they said nothing. The same cause will never produce opposite effects. Everything that has commercial value will take its price according to the demand for it. A horse might be worth a hundred dollars to-day and a thousand to-morrow. If one was in great need, and a life was involved, his price might go into many thousands. We are told by England's great poet that an English king, unhorsed on the bloody field of Bosworth, when his army was undone and his enemies gathering around, offered his kingdom for a horse. Horses that he could buy were scarce on that field, and kingdoms with titles such as he then had were abundant.

Congress may pass its penal laws and fulminate its menaces of punishment, but they can no more counteract the laws of nature than Richard could get a horse for his kingdom. Nature's laws are perfect and unchangeable. The design of our fathers who "laid the shafts and hewed the architraves" of our great temple of freedom was to secure to us the benefit of those laws and the inviolability of those rights with which the author of those laws endowed us. He who organized the party to which I belong, who wrote its creed and stamped its principle upon the administration of government, believed that man could only attain to his highest estate when his conduct was strictly in harmony with those laws.

If instead of turning backward we move forward and tear down the obstructions that have separated us from the enjoyment of our rights, we will be a wiser, a better, and a happier people. Let us free our commerce from burdens, cheapen its cost and expedite its movements both going and coming. Let us remove the prohibition imposed in the name of taxation and permit the winds and waves of ocean to bring to us the things we want from other lands at lower cost to our people, and let us send them our surplus in return at the higher prices which increased demand will bring, and thus the wealth created by labor will be distributed by nature's laws, and every home and household will receive and enjoy the munificent bounty which the God of Nature bestows upon His children when they live in obedience to nature's laws.

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr President, I am well established in the opinion that under the provisions of the Constitution to regulate foreign commerce, to levy imposts and to collect them, the general welfare clause of the Constitution and the power granted to Congress by the Constitution, to strengthen our country in time of peace, as in a preparation for war, we may foster our manufactures, and, if it be necessary, we may to that end pass laws absolutely prohibiting importations, or impose import duties which will practically have that effect.

I am not alarmed if this bill be defeated, and upon the ground that it is unconstitutional and void, that it will be a precedent impairing our power to pass what are commonly known as protective duties. I do not know that I am prepared to go to the extent of advocating that there is not the same power in the Congress of the United States to prohibit commerce between the States as there is to prohibit commerce between this nation and another.

In construing the words "regulate commerce," when we look to them for power over foreign commerce or domestic commerce, we should take into consideration the surroundings—what was intended to accomplish, what great interest was to be promoted. We should consider the relation of the States to each other, their common interest, and their combination into a nationality, to ascertain what power Congress has over interstate commerce and relating to foreign commerce, the relations between our Government and other nationalities when we give a construction to this language of the Constitution.

To illustrate, the Constitution provides that we may regulate commerce with the Indian tribes, and we have the power to make the selling of whisky or firearms to Indians a penal offense. Does it follow that we are obliged to concede that we have a like power to prohibit the sale in one State of wheat raised in another, or of cotton raised in one State, in another, or the general products of one State, in another?

But let us look a little more critically at the bill as it comes from the House. It is not a bill to regulate commerce. The arguments which have been made in favor, both of the bill as it came from the House and the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], have scarcely touched the question of the regulation of commerce. The bill assumes, and the argument in support of it is, that under the taxing power vested in Congress we have the right, not to regulate commerce between the States, but that we have the right to regulate the price and sale of commodities, not between the States, but in the States, respectively.

The Senator from Mississippi has enlightened the Senate in respect to the vast amount of business done in the city of New York, some one else has given the same information (and I do not know but it was he) in respect to the volume of trade in the city of Chicago, which would be prohibited by either the bill or by the amendment the Senator from Mississippi has offered. Parties to these contracts, I doubt not in every instance, at the time when they were made were in the city and in the State in which they were made. For aught we know the subject-matter covered by the contracts was in the States in which the contracts were made.

Then we have the parties and we have the subject-matter of the contract both, we will say, in the city of New York, subject to its laws. In the one case this bill proposes to prohibit the contracts by taxation, and in the amendment to prohibit them by penal statutes, not because interstate commerce is involved, for there is not a single element necessary to constitute interstate commerce involved in them.

More than that, the State in which I live is a large producer of many of the articles covered by this bill. Then we have the articles themselves raised in New York, both parties to the contract residing in New York, the contract entered into in New York, to be performed in New York, and the bill proposes to prohibit such contracts by taxation, and the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi proposes to prohibit them by penal statutes.

I ask in what provision of the Constitution do Senators find warrant for that? I am inclined to believe that it is settled by authority that when there is the constitutional power either to prohibit or to regulate commerce, Congress may invoke the taxing power, or any other grant of power in the Constitution, to bring about that result. This is not a question of regulating commerce; it is not claimed on the part of anyone that if this bill is passed or the amendment is adopted a single bushel more or less of wheat will flow through the channels of trade from the West to the city of New York. The great volume of cotton, of wheat, and of each article enumerated in the bill will not be diminished or increased by this proposed legislation.

The proposition is, as I have stated, to take possession of the markets of New York, of Minneapolis, of Chicago, of New Orleans, control the manner in which their merchants shall make contracts, and prohibit certain contracts either by taxation or by penal statutes.

It is agreed on all hands in respect to "future" contracts as they are described, whenever it is the intention of the parties to a contract, on the one side to deliver the goods and on the other side to receive the goods, where an execution of the contract is comtemplated by both parties, that they are promotive of trade and of exchange.

It is doubtless true that there is not of wheat or corn or cotton any considerable amount that reaches the market that at some point before consumption is not covered by a contract, the vendor undertaking to sell and deliver when he is not in possession of the commodities; nevertheless he intends in good faith to deliver and execute.

It will not be said by my distinguished friend from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN] that those contracts are not beneficial to commerce and promotive of trade and exchange. Their validity and their morality have been recognized from the earliest days of civilization to the present time; they have been sanctioned by all the courts of all civilized nations and have been enforced as moral and held to be legal and binding. Nevertheless the bill as it came from the House proposes to prevent those contracts by taxation, and the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi proposes to prevent them by the criminal law.

What reason or excuse is given for this? I understood it to be asserted in debate upon the floor by the friends of this measure that those contracts are all right; that they do not injure nor wrong anyone; that they are meritorious; but, extensive as they are, covering the vast amount of property which they do, the excuse is made that we shall not except them because it would be difficult to prevent contracts when delivery is not intended.

For the first time in my experience I have heard it urged that you must make penal statutes so sweeping and taxation laws so general that they will prohibit contracts covering all the articles named in this bill which are produced in this country and find their way to market, contracts both meritorious and promotive of exchange because they will not be as readily discovered or you can not as readily prevent contracts being made which are mere wagers or bets upon the price of goods; that that which is legitimate and proper is to be prohibited because in an exceptional case it may be difficult to draw the line between the meritorious and the vicious. Mr. President, there is no difficulty in drawing that line or in defining the boundary between the two.

But it is imagined by the promoters of this legislation that there may be more difficulty in the execution of the law against betting and wager contracts. It can not be urged that a court and a jury can not define the line between the two; it can not be urged that there would be any considerable number of cases in which there would be a failure of justice if a distinction were made, but if made it is feared that there may not be some one always on the watch tower to pursue the violators of the law, to promote the execution of these statutes, to collect the fines and penalties imposed. For that reason, and for that reason only, it is proposed to legislate indiscriminately against both classes of contracts. The distinction is not made, because it is easier to convict, if you do not, those who make the wager contracts.

In the preparation of the bill, and equally so in the preparation of the amendment, it seems to me that no care whatever was exercised to bring either within constitutional provisions. The motive which prompted this legislation was this and this only: There are great centers of trade, Chicago, New Orleans, New York, Minneapolis, and others, where merchants are transacting business in their own way, subject to the laws of their respective States; and those promoting this legislation conceived the purpose to prohibit it.

Instantly they appealed to the agricultural class, the farmers, with the clamor: "Here is something which affects you; this trading is destructive of your rights; these markets tend to depress the price of your products;" and without regard to the Constitution the bill and the amendment to it were prepared to invade the States and by tax laws or by penal statutes prohibit methods of trade sanctioned by good morals and the laws.

It is true that the promoters of the legislation have said that it is constitutional; and yet I am not sure that any one has gone to the extent of urging that it is constitutional, except in form. I am not sure that the Senator from Minnesota urges that this legislation is warranted or would be sustained as constitutional if the real object and purpose of it were disclosed. They trust the courts will be cheated and defrauded in respect to the intent and purpose. It is, sir, rarely that a measure has ever been presented to Congress where there was less regard either to the pro-prieties of legislation or to the Constitution itself than in this particular case.

I desire, in this connection, to call the attention of the Senate to one provision of the bill, which I believe has been adopted by a decided vote, and yet which is unconstitutional, and in an analogous case it has been so held by the highest judicial tribunal in the United States. That provision and the action taken upon it, in my judgment, illustrate the recklessness of the efforts which are being made to procure this legislation. I refer to section 10.

That section of the bill as it is before the Senate provides that whenever any agreement is made for future sale or delivery of articles embraced by the act the collector of internal revenue may require the vendor in such agreement to furnish him with proof of the vendor's ownership or right to future possession at the time of the agreement. The vendor then is required to make affidavit setting forth—

1. Whether he was owner at the time of the agreement.
2. Whether at the time of the agreement he was entitled to the future possession of the property.
3. How the right to such future possession was obtained.
4. Where the property is stored, or in what carrier's possession it is if in transit.
5. Numbers and dates of, and articles covered by, the bills of lading issued for the property.
6. All other property embraced in any such agreement.
7. All other agreements in relation to the sale and future delivery of such articles.
8. The vendor may also be required to exhibit original warehouse receipts, or bills of lading for such property.

The vendor's failure to comply with any of these requirements raises a presumption against him that the agreement so made was a "futures" contract, and he becomes liable to pay taxes accordingly.

Not only is he liable to pay taxes under such circumstances, but, by virtue of the provisions of section 11, he becomes liable to criminal prosecution, and possibly conviction. In other words, the vendor's refusal to produce and exhibit before the collector his private papers described, and give the details of his private contracts, and to state the whereabouts and condition of his private property, is made to raise a presumption of guilt against him, subjecting him to criminal penalties and imprisonment.

I desire in this connection to call the attention of the Senator from Minnesota and the Senate to the case of Boyd vs. The United States, in which there were two opinions written, one by Mr. Justice Bradley and the other by Mr. Justice Miller. It will be found in volume 116, United States Reports, 616.

The fifth section of the act of June 22, 1874, is as follows:

"In all suits and proceedings other than criminal arising under any of the revenue laws of the United States, the attorney representing the Government, whenever in his belief any business book, invoice, or paper belonging to, or under the control of, the defendant or claimant, will tend to prove any allegation made by the United States, may make a written motion, particularly describing such book, invoice, or paper, and setting forth the allegation which he expects to prove; and thereupon the court in which suit or proceeding is pending may, at its discretion, issue a notice to the defendant or claimant to produce such book, invoice, or paper in court, at a day and hour to be specified in said notice, which, together with a copy of said motion, shall be served formally on the defendant or claimant by the United States marshal by delivering to him a certified copy thereof, or otherwise serving the same as original notices of suit in the same court are served; and if the defendant or claimant shall fail or refuse to produce such book, invoice, or paper in obedience to such notice, the allegations stated in the said motion shall be taken as confessed, unless his failure or refusal to produce the same shall be explained to the satisfaction of the court. And if produced, the said attorney shall be permitted, under the direction of the court, to make examination (at which examination the defendant, or claimant, or his agent, may be present) of such entries in said book, invoice, or paper as relate to or tend to prove the allegation aforesaid, and may offer the same in evidence on behalf of the United States. But the owner of said books and papers, his agent or attorney, shall have, subject to the order of the court, the custody of them, except pending their examination in court as aforesaid."

Here is a provision not precisely in the language of the tenth section of the pending bill, but a statute forcing from a man testimony upon which to convict himself, or testimony upon which the title to his property may depend. It is distinguishable from the bill we have before us further in this, that it is only applicable to proceedings in civil suits. In this case the evidence which the man is obliged to furnish, under pain and penalties, is not only evidence against him upon which a tax can be levied, but it is also evidence against him upon which he may be convicted of an offense.

This statute, considered by the court for a long time, was held to be constitutional by our highest courts, until finally it was presented in the case to which I have referred, and in an elaborate opinion, which I will not consume the time of the Senate in reading, Mr. Justice Bradley holds that it is against the spirit of our Government, that it is against the provisions of our Constitution, that a man should be compelled to furnish evidence against himself, therein giving the opinion of the court. I do not know but there were some of the judges who dissented from the doctrine.

Mr. CHANDLER. Does the Senator mean that there was some judge who dissented?

Mr. HISCOCK. I am not sure.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator be kind enough to inform us?

Mr. HISCOCK (after examining). There was not a dissenting opinion as to the unconstitutionality of the law. All of the judges did not concur in all the views expressed by Mr. Justice Bradley. Mr. Justice Miller did not concur in all those views; and I will read a part of his opinion:

I concur in the judgment of the court reversing that of the circuit court, and in so much of the opinion of this court as holds the fifth section of the act of 1874 void as applicable to the present case.

I am of the opinion that this is a criminal case within the meaning of that clause of the fifth amendment to the Constitution of the United States which declares that no person "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

Bear in mind, the defendant in that case was not on trial for a crime. The eleventh section of the bill before us provides affirmatively that evidence forced from the party can be used or a presumption is raised against him by the failure to produce it upon what he may be convicted in a criminal prosecution.

Mr. Justice Miller continues:

And I am quite satisfied that the effect of the act of Congress is to compel the party on whom the order of the court is served to be a witness against himself. The order of the court under the statute is in effect a subpœna duces tecum, and, though the penalty for the witness's failure to appear in court with the criminating papers is not fine and imprisonment, it is one which may be made more severe, namely, to have charges against him of a criminal nature taken for confessed, and made the foundation of the judgment of the court. That this is within the protection which the Constitution intended against compelling a person to be a witness against himself is, I think, quite clear.

But this being so, there is no reason why this court should assume that the action of the court below, in requiring a party to produce certain papers as evidence on the trial, authorizes an unreasonable search or seizure of the house, papers, or effects of that party.

There is in fact no search and no seizure authorized by the statute. No order can be made by the court under it which requires or permits anything more than service of notice on a party to the suit. That there may be no mistake as to the effect of the statute and the power to be exercised under it, I give the section here verbatim.

The Chief Justice concurred with Mr. Justice Miller. The other members of the court held it to be unconstitutional upon the broader ground, which I have stated. The provision as it came here from the House has been changed and modified by the astute men who have had in hand the preparation of the bill. But it is in direct conflict with the decision in this case, unconstitutional and void, and I undertake to say that there is not a lawyer in the Senate who will disagree with me in this view.

The other day this vicious provision was adopted by the Senate, almost without deliberation, possibly prophetic of the deliberation and of the consideration which will be given to the grave constitutional questions involved in the bill itself. This provision is a part of the scheme; it is necessary. Taxing officers of the United States are to be clothed, and must be clothed, with these extraordinary powers to establish inquisitorial investigation of every man's private business, to drag to the light contracts which may be made in violation of this proposed law, contracts which are not wager contracts, but contracts made in good faith by parties who intend to execute them in good faith.

It is not necessary, as the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] seemed to think, for us to circumscribe the power of Congress in respect to prohibitory duties in respect to importations, to find sufficient grounds for opposition to this legislation. It is utterly impossible to argue that this bill has for its object the regulation of interstate commerce or the prohibition of interstate commerce; its only object and its only purpose is to take the control of markets in States, purely domestic and absolutely confined to the States in which they exist.

Mr. President, as compared with the other promoters of the legislation, I admire the candor of the Senator from Mississippi, of the Senator from New Hampshire, and of all those who promote the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi. There is something manly and fair and ingenuous in bringing a measure in here which provides in terms for taking possession of the markets of the State which I have the honor in part to represent rather than attempting it by a fraud upon the Constitution under the taxing power, because it is believed that the courts will be unable to determine that the legislation is not taxation and not for the purpose of taxation: can not determine judicially when we have properly exercised the taxing power, or when we have exceeded the limits, if there are limits, to which it shall be extended. Because it is believed the court can not discover from the law the purpose for which we enacted it, we will under this bill force the legislation through Congress, violating our oaths and our consciences.

The design is ambushed in the bill to regulate prices in commerce, and to revolutionize the customs and laws of exchange. It is concealed there. But there is no power in the court to try and determine that question, and will we therefore perpetrate this fraud and this wrong against the judicial tribunals of the country?

I think it has been proposed here— if it has not it will be—to insert in the House bill a provision declaring the purpose to regulate the markets, to prevent the contracts which may be made there, and the traffic in goods which may have been, in interstate commerce, and those which may never have been, to influence the prices and prescribe the manner in which the business shall be done and the contracts shall be made. Who doubts for a moment that then the law would be held unconstitutional and void? Will the advocate of the bill accept the challenge and write in the bill the purposes of the legislation as he has announced them on the floor and as they have been announced here by nearly every gentleman who has spoken in favor of the bill? I apprehend not.

It seems hardly worth while, Mr. President, for me to discuss the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. He directly grasps this jurisdiction upon the assertion that it in some way is an obstruction to commerce, and therefore Congress can remove it. He takes the bold position that the manner in which the wheat which is raised in Minnesota is marketed in Minnesota is subject to the regulations of Congress because it affects interstate commerce.

With the subject-matter, the parties to the contract, and the execution and performance of the contract all in Minnesota, he reaches out and says it may affect the price somewhere else in the other States; therefore, if we will put in the law a declaration that certain contracts are obstructions to commerce Congress has the power to regulate the Minnesota market for her wheat and the New Orleans market in respect to cotton raised in Louisiana.

I wonder, if this be true, why the Senate so carefully drew the line in the preparation of the interstate-commerce law and confined it solely to the commerce between two or more States. Who does not know that local freights upon roads in one State exert a much wider influence over interstate commerce than the price which may be fixed in one city of the goods and merchandise which may be offered for sale in that city? If you may pass this bill you have the right to extend legislation and provide that Congress may regulate the freight rates upon the goods in transportation starting in a State and delivered in the same State and "regulate" common carriers engaged in transportation in one State alone, not passing its boundaries.

Mr. President, when once the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi is adopted there is no limitation to the power of Congress if it should be sustained by the courts. He enters the domains of States and declares that certain laws are obstructions to commerce, and forbids them by penal statutes; declares them illegal and void. I now appeal to the Senator from Mississippi whether Congress has the power to enter the State of New York and declare void contracts made there, to be performed there, their subject-matter in that State, and the parties residents of the State?

If Congress has the power to declare those contracts void, to impose penalties for making them, why can not Congress grasp the jurisdiction to administer contracts and to enforce them? Why can not Congress take jurisdiction of all contracts in respect to property or the kind of property which may be or is the subject of interstate commerce or may have been at some time in interstate trade to enforce them? If we may declare contracts illegal and void, and impose penalties for their making, why can not Congress go one step farther and declare that the national courts shall enforce them?

The result follows that every contract in respect to all the property of the kind which may be the subject of interstate commerce may be made subject to the jurisdiction of the national courts to pass upon their validity to enforce them, for certainly Congress has the power to declare their validity and provide for their inforcement, if it has the power to declare their invalidity and punish the parties to them.

Mr. President, I have but little to add to the discussion of this question, and I must allude briefly to that which has been stated here in the way of argument in favor of the bill and of the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi. I think we have been told that in the city of New York there is reared a costly and expensive building that is devoted to trade in cotton.

Ten thousand dollars are required as an admission fee to membership in the organization that own the building. They have their rules and regulations that no one shall trade there but members of the association. They have their rules and regulations that no cotton shall be sold there that is not inspected by their agents. They have a rule, I think, that no cotton shall be sold there except it is warehoused in one of the places indicated by them.

Is all that, sir, a reason for the adoption of the amendment or the proposed legislation? The Senator from Mississippi may organize another company in the city of New York precisely like the one he refers to and enter into competition with it. It has no exclusive privileges. It is a private corporation; it is not public. It is an expensive corporation to administer, and under the by-laws which it has adopted in respect to the cotton which is to be sold there, regulating where it shall be stored, how it shall be graded, the cotton bought and sold in that exchange has an indorsement in respect to its quality, its texture, its value the world over which is unchallenged wherever it is offered in the markets of the world. It has its committee of experts, men who are devoted to the various investigations essential to the business. It extends its investigations to the amount of cotton which is to be produced in the United States and in the world in any one year. More than that, it makes investigations in respect to the improvement and protection of the cotton crop. All these matters are included within its operations.

This private corporation chooses to say that the Senator from Mississippi can not go in there and market his cotton, but must do it through one of the members of the exchange. An insurance company exercises certain rights and privileges in respect to the manner of conducting its business which may not be invaded by those from the outside.

Bankers do the same, and merchants, railroad companies, and all corporations; and is that any reason why this proposed law should be passed? If this were the place and the time, it might easily be demonstrated that in reference to fixing the quality of cotton which goes upon the market, investigating the amount of cotton to go upon the market, guaranteeing the quality of cotton which is sold, that the corporation which is inveighed against here is a great public benefactor; and simply because it is wealthy, that it costs $10,000 to be admitted to it, that it has a large and expensive place of business, days have been spent in dwelling upon the supposition that for those reasons either the House bill or the George amendment should be adopted!

Mr. President, I am one of those who believe that this class of legislation will be vicious in its effects, and I may allude to what I have said before on this subject. This bill if it should be crystallized into law would become the basis of the most gigantic trust that has ever existed in the United States. I believe that when you give the power to Federal officers to place upon their books the private transactions of individuals and so arrange it that by an examination of their books you may discover where the grains are and where the cotton is, how much there is (and all of this is not only possible but probable under the bill), you place it in the power of a limited amount of capital comparatively to control all the property and render it subject to sale and delivery at the option of a few men. The producers will not get the benefit of it.

Corners in the market will control—I do not desire to have it understood that I charge or insinuate that that is the purpose of the promoters of the bill. I do say, however, that so far as the prices of grain and of cotton are concerned I would as soon leave it to be effected by men who bet upon it as to put it in the power of the warehousemen and of the elevator men to combine and control the market.

In my judgment the farmers are far safer, prices are much less liable to fluctuations and are likely to be fairer with open trading, without the inspection of Government officials, without the imposition of taxes upon certain forms of contracts, without penal statutes aimed against certain dealers or against certain contracts, in a free open market, even if there is some gambling, than to place it in the power of a few men with their capital to control the agricultural products which are enumerated in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER in the chair). The pending question is on the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] to the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE].

Mr. PLATT. I do not suppose it is intended to take any vote upon the amendments to-day?

Mr. VILAS. It was agreed that no vote should be taken before Tuesday.

Mr. WASHBURN. Final action on the bill and all amendments it was agreed should go over until Tuesday.

Mr. PLATT. I wish to call up the bill for the ratification of the Cherokee agreement.

Mr. WASHBURN. Then let the antioption bill be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. PLATT. I ask that the pending bill be laid temporarily aside so that the Senate may proceed to the consideration of the Cherokee bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut asks unanimous consent that the bill now before the Senate be temporarily laid aside, without losing its place as the unfinished business, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2870) to ratify and confirm an agreement with the Cherokee Nation of Indians, of the Indian Territory, to make appropriation for carrying out the same, and for other purposes. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut? The Chair hears none, and it is agreed to.

Mr. PLATT. I ought to state that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER], who wishes to move an amendment to the bill, was obliged to leave the Chamber this afternoon, and I do not think we ought to dispose of the matter under the circumstances. But I understand the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] desires to make some observations upon the bill, and perhaps we might go on with it for a while. It is somewhat late in the afternoon to be sure, and I suppose many Senators have gone away not expecting that this bill would come up, but I wish to avail myself of every moment's time in the Senate that I can to press it forward to a conclusion. If the Senator from Kansas is ready to go on now he might do so.

Mr. BLACKBURN. It is evident that there is not a quorum present, and as we are to transact business, I ask for a call of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll, the Senator from Kentucky having suggested the want of a quorum.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Blackburn,	Frye,	Mitchell,	Stewart,
Call.	Gorman,	Morgan,	Teller,
Carey.	Harris,	Pasco,	Vest,
Chandler,	Hawley,	Peffer,	Vilas,
Coke.	Hiscock,	Perkins,	Washburn,
Cullom.	Hoar.	Platt,	Wilson.
Dixon.	Jones, Ark.	Pugh,
Dubois,	Kyle,	Sawyer,
Faulkner,	Manderson,	Shoup,

Mr. TELLER. I wish to state that my colleague [Mr. WOLCOTT] is detained from the Senate by sickness.

Mr. MANDERSON. It must be quite evident that no quorum of the Senate can be had at this late hour of the afternoon, and I move that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will announce that 33 Senators have answered to their names.

Mr. ALLISON, Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. DAWES, and Mr. POWER entered the Chamber.

Mr. MANDERSON. I withdraw the motion for the present, in order that the Senators who have just come in may answer to their names.

Mr. ALLISON, Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. DAWES, and Mr. POWER responded to their names.

Mr. HARRIS. How many Senators have now answered to their names?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-seven.

Mr. MANDERSON. I renew my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska moves that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 43 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, January 27, 1893, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, January 26, 1893.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

THE JOURNAL.

The Clerk proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the Journal as read will be approved.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, I insist that the Clerk has not read the Journal as the proceedings appear. I must demand the reading of the Journal.

Mr. REED. That is right.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the parts of the Journal omitted.

Mr. KILGORE. On yesterday I wanted to go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of an appropriation bill, and the leading members of the Committee on Appropriations opposed it. They were not anxious to go into it yesterday, but to-day they are clamoring for it. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. DOCKERY. I beg to say that the gentleman is mistaken as to my opposing it. I am not, however, a "leading member."

Mr. KILGORE. The gentleman is an exception.

The Clerk proceeded to read the roll calls of the proceedings of yesterday.

Mr. KILGORE (interrupting the reading). Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the demand for the reading of the entire Journal. They can go along with the appropriation bill to-day if they want to. They did not want to go on with it yesterday.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Journal as read will be approved. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it so ordered.

COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 10010) establishing a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the House that this is a House bill amended by the Senate. The Senate asks for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

Mr. MCMILLIN. What is the title of the bill? I did not hear it.

The title was again reported.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the House nonconcur in the Senate amendment and agree to the request for a conference.

The SPEAKER. Without objection that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will announce the appointment as conferees on the part of the House of Mr. CULBERSON, Mr. OATES, and Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR.

REPORT OF COMMISSIONERS OF THE UNITED STATES TO THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following Senate resolution; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, etc., That in addition to the usual number there shall be printed 5,500 extra copies of the reports of the commissioners of the United States to the Paris Exposition of 1889, 1,500 copies for the use of the Senate, 3,000 copies for the use of the House, and 1,000 copies for the use of the Department of State.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. HARE, for ten days, on account of important business.

To Mr. MEREDITH, for four days, on account of death of his father.

To Mr. SNODGRASS, for one day, on account of sickness.

ORGANIZATION OF THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Mr. Speaker, I am instructed by the Committee on Rules to report back the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk with an amended resolution which the Clerk will also report. I ask him first to report the resolution introduced by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY].

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That a commission consisting of five members-elect to the House of Representatives of the Fifty-third Congress, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-second Congress, shall, prior to the first Monday of December next, inquire into and examine the status of the laws organizing the Executive Departments, bureaus, divisions, and other Government establishments at the national capital; the rules, regulations, and methods for the conduct of the same; the time and attention devoted to the operations thereof by the persons employed therein, and the degree of efficiency of all such employés; whether any modification of these laws can be made to secure greater efficiency and economy; and whether a reduction in the number or compensation of the persons authorized to be employed in said Executive Departments or bureaus can be made without injury to the public service. Said commission, or any subcommittee thereof, shall have power to send for persons and papers, and may report, by bill or otherwise, to the Fifty-third Congress. All necessary expenses of said commission shall be paid out of the appropriation for the miscellaneous items for the contingent fund of the House of Representatives, upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of said commission.

Mr. MCMILLIN. The Clerk will now report the amended resolution submitted by the Committee on Rules.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the resolution of Mr. DOCKERY be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and said committee is hereby authorized to insert in one of the general appropriation bills a provision authorizing the creation of a commission for the purpose indicated in said resolution.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the resolution.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the resolution was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now proceed to call the standing and select committee for reports.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, in order to save time I ask that the call of committees for reports be dispensed with, and that members having reports to make may hand them in to the Clerk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas asks unanimous consent that the call of committees for reports be dispensed with, and that members having reports to make may be permitted to hand them to the Clerk. Is there objection?

Mr. TRACEY. I object, Mr. Speaker.

CLAIM OF WILLIAM M'GARRAHAN.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona, from the Committee on Mines and Mining, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, a bill (H. R. 10268) to submit to the Court of Private Land Claims, established by an act of Congress approved March 3, 1891, the title of William McGarrahan to the Rancho Panoche Grande, in the State of California, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The call was completed.

FORT BRIDGER RESERVATION.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a privileged report from the Committee on Public Lands, viz, the bill which I send to the desk.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all public lands now remaining undisposed within the abandoned military reservation in the State of Wyoming known as the Fort Bridger military reservation, are hereby made subject to disposal under the homestead law only: Provided, That actual occupants thereon upon the 1st day of July, 1892, shall have the preference right to make one entry not exceeding one quarter section under existing laws if qualified, which shall include their respective improvements: Provided further, That any of such lands as are occupied for town-site purposes and any of the lands that may be shown to be valuable for coal or minerals shall be disposed of as now provided for lands subject to entry and sale under the town-site, coal, or mineral land laws, respectively.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, how is that privileged?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not informed.

Mr. McRAE. It is.

Mr. BURROWS. I understood the gentleman to present it as a privileged report.

Mr. McRAE. Under the rules of the House bills of this sort, opening reservations, have been uniformly held to be privileged.

Mr. BURROWS. In so far as it is a land-forfeiture bill it would be privileged, but in other respects——

Mr. McRAE. The committee has other privileges besides those attaching to land-forfeiture bills.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. This is a land-give-away bill instead of a land-forfeiture bill.

Mr. McRAE. During the last Congress and, I think, in prior Congresses such bills have been held to be privileged under Rule XI. paragraph 51.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask to have the bill read again, so that we may understand distinctly its provisions.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will first report the rule applicable to the matter.

The Clerk read as follows:

Rule XI. paragraph 51. The following named committees shall have leave to report at any time on the matters herein stated, viz: * * * The Committee on Public Lands, bills for the forfeiture of land grants to railroads and other corporations, bills preventing speculation in the public lands, and bills for the reservation of the public lands for the benefit of actual and bona fide settlers.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will again report the bill.

The bill was again read.

Mr. DINGLEY. Mr. Speaker, this seems to be a bill for the opening up of a military reservation. Does the Chair hold that the disposition of that kind of a reservation would come within the meaning of the rule?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. McRAE] on that point.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared just now to cite the decisions. They have been so uniform, so far as I remember heretofore, that I did not think it necessary to collect them. I remember that during the last Congress, upon a bill for the opening of a like reservation in the State of Montana, it was decided to be privileged under this rule. It can not mean anything else.

Mr. DINGLEY. A military reservation?

Mr. McRAE. Certainly, any kind of a reservation sought to be opened to actual settlers and reserved from speculators. This is not now a military reservation. It is an abandoned military reservation which is now a part of the public domain and subject to sale. This bill seeks to open the reservation to settlement under the homestead law and thus prevent it from being sold to speculators, and, under the clause of the rule just read by the Clerk, I think clearly privileged. So far as I am concerned I am perfectly indifferent about this particular reservation, but it is a matter of privilege and I insist upon it as such. I can not undertake just now to refer to the Journal or the RECORD containing the precedents, but I know that such has been the practice in reference to bills for the opening of reservations of this kind.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Arkansas that decisions ought to be cited, because the rule, as the Chair understands it, grants to the Committee on Public Lands the right to report at any time certain matters, amongst others, "bills for the reservation of the public lands for the benefit of actual and bona fide settlers"——

Mr. McRAE. That is what this bill is. These lands are now subject to sale and actual settlers can not enter them. This bill proposes to prevent the sale and reserve them for entry under the homestead law only as far as applicable.

The SPEAKER. The lands are now subject to sale?

Mr. McRAE. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. What does the gentleman from Ohio say to that?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. The lands are, subject to sale under an act passed in 1884, July 5, I think, providing that abandoned military reservations should, under the directions of the Secretary of the Interior, be surveyed, platted, and sold to the highest bidder, and this bill, as I understand it, makes a similar provision with regard to the town sites and with regard to the subdivision of this land. Is not one of the provisions of this bill very much like that of the law to which I have alluded? I do not think that the term "reservation" as used in the rule applies to land which has been already reserved for military purposes and has been abandoned as a military reservation and transferred to the Interior Department under a general law providing for the manner in which such lands shall be disposed of.

I think that the term "reservation" applies to such portions of the public domain as have never been withdrawn from it, never appropriated to any other uses.

Mr. McRAE. The gentleman will allow me to say that it applies to all the public domain, and does not exclude abandoned military reservations. Hence, any measure which seeks to reserve lands now subject to sale or other disposition and not subject to homestead for the benefit of actual settlers is, as I understand it, privileged under this rule. All bills looking in that direction have been heretofore held to be privileged.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. There is another objection to this bill which takes it out of the clause of the rule just read by the Speaker. It actually donates the right of homestead to those persons who in violation of law have gone upon this land and settled there. There is a provision of existing law that no person shall be permitted to take advantage of settlement upon an abandoned military reservation after the date of the act containing that provision. This bill proposes to extend the date to the 1st of January, 1892. In other words, any person who may have gone upon this reservation in the face of the prohibition of the law, up to the 1st of January, 1892, is allowed to take advantage of such settlement. This is not a bill reserving land to homestead entry in the proper sense of the terms.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to examine the law to which reference has been made in this discussion; and he trusts it may be agreeable to the gentleman from Arkansas to allow this question to go over until to-morrow morning so as to allow such an examination.

Mr. McRAE. I have no objection to that course.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas withholds the report until to-morrow morning.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DOCKERY, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill (H. R. 10331) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

On January 13, 1893:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 166) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to cover back into the Treasury $48,800 of the appropriation to Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians.

On January 23, 1893:

An act (H. R. 9824) to amend "An act to promote the construction of a safe deep-water harbor on the coast of Texas," approved February 9, 1891;

An act (H. R. 4844) to authorize the Secretary of War to convey to school district numbered 12, of Kittery, Me., a portion of Fort McClary military reservation, in exchange for other lands; and

An act (H. R. 3676) for the relief of R. L. Jennings, late postmaster at Marshall, Tex.

On January 26, 1893:

An act (H. R. 10015) to authorize the construction of bridges across the Hiawassee, the Tennessee, and the Clinch Rivers, in the State of Tennessee; and

An act (H. R. 6969) for the relief of Elisha Brown.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the further consideration of general appropriation bills.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole (Mr. LESTER of Georgia in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10238) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes.

The pending paragraph was the following:

Fuel, lights, and water for public buildings: For fuel, lights, water, electric-light plants, including repairs thereto, in such buildings as may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury for electric-light wiring, and miscellaneous items required by the janitors and firemen in the proper care of the buildings, furniture, and heating apparatus, exclusive of personal services, for all public buildings, marine hospitals included, under the control of the Treasury Department, inclusive of new buildings, $800,000; and the appropriation herein made for gas in any of the public buildings in the District of Columbia, under the control of the Treasury Department, shall include the rental or use of any gas governor, gas purifier, or other device for reducing the expenses of gas, when first approved by the Secretary of the Treasury and ordered by him in writing: Provided, That no sum shall be paid for such rental or use of such gas governor, gas purifier, or device greater than the one-half part of the amount of money actually saved thereby.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the pending amendment, which was offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TAYLOR].

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 38, in lines 4 and 5, strike out "$800,000," and insert the following: "$850,000, and that $50,000 of said amount shall be used for repair and extension of the custom-house in Chicago, Ill."

Mr. HOLMAN. On this amendment, as will be remembered, a point of order was reserved. The amendment is not germane to the pending paragraph in any event; for the paragraph makes appropriation for fuel, lights, and water for public buildings, while the amendment proposes to appropriate money for repairs.

The gentleman from Illinois will find that on page 2 of the bill the subject of repairs of public buildings is provided for; and I suggest to him that if this item for repairs of the public building at Chicago is to go in at all it should be attached to that paragraph. I will say further to the gentleman that when the bill is otherwise finished I will not object to his going back to the provision in regard to repairs of public buildings, with the understanding, however, that I shall have the right to make a point of order upon the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has been unable to hear the gentleman.

Mr. TAYLOR of Illinois. I have no objection to the suggestion of the chairman of the committee [Mr. HOLMAN]. I will accept that suggestion, the understanding being that I shall have the opportunity when we get through the bill to recur to the paragraph he has indicated and offer my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not understand the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HOLMAN. I raised the question whether this amendment was germane to the pending paragraph, but I said to the gentleman from Illinois that if he thought proper to withhold the amendment until we have gone through the bill I would not object to his going back to the provision in regard to repairs of public buildings, to which this amendment is germane, with the understanding, however, that I shall have the right to make a point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous consent is asked that when the Committee of the Whole has gone through the bill we may go back to the paragraph on page 2——

Mr. SAYERS. Beginning with line 21.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The Clerk will proceed with the reading.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I move to add to the pending paragraph the following:

Provided, That not more than 75 cents per thousand feet shall be paid for the gas used in the Government buildings in the District.

Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HOLMAN. That is all right.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I suppose there will be no objection, then, to this amendment. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. OUTHWAITE. As the chairman of the committee says this is "all right," I do not wish to discuss anything in the direction of economy which he pronounces right.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. OUTHWAITE, it was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Enforcement of the Chinese exclusion act: To prevent unlawful entry of Chinese into the United States by the appointment of suitable officers to enforce the laws in relation thereto, and for expenses of returning to China all Chinese persons found to be unlawfully in the United States, including the cost of imprisonment and actual expense of conveyance of Chinese persons to the frontier or seaboard for deportation, and for enforcing the provisions of the act approved May 5, 1892, entitled "An act to prohibit the coming of Chinese persons into the United States," $50,000, together with the unexpended balance of the appropriation for this object for the fiscal year 1893.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out, in line 11, page 40, the word "fifty" and insert "five hundred;" so that it will read "$500,000."

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to delay the passage of this appropriation bill; and judging from past experience in this House I have little reason to believe that the amendment proposed, notwithstanding its importance, will receive the sanction of this body. But as a Representative from the State of California I can not help, in response to a sentiment of duty, at this time to enter my feeble protest against the proposition contained in this bill of endeavoring to nullify a law which was placed on the statute books, I presume, in good faith.

A law was passed at the last session of this Congress providing for the registration of Chinese, which up to this time has been inoperative; and it is safe to assume that the Chinese do not contemplate obeying the law enacted by the Congress of the United States. Then the only alternative left to the Government is to export these Chinamen, under the law, to the country from which they came. Now, there are in this country from one hundred to one hundred and sixty thousand of these Chinese. Any person can compute approximately how much it will cost to carry into execution the law of imprisoning and transporting them back to their own country——

Mr. BLOUNT. How much does the gentleman estimate it would cost?

Mr. LOUD. I would give, as a guess, $2,000,000. That, I think, is a fair estimate. But the law provides, the gentleman will observe, first for the imprisonment or punishment; and I think that the sum of $500,000, possibly, will carry us along until we can meet the balance that will become due at the next session of Congress.

This Congress has held out hopes to the people of the Pacific coast, and they carried the great State of California for the Democratic party largely on that issue. They have led these people up to within sight of the promised land; and now I do not believe, sir, that as a great party they can afford in the face of the condition of affairs that exists in that part of the country, to seek, in an appropriation bill, to nullify a law which, as I have said, was placed upon the statute books presumably in good faith.

I ask a vote on the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I hope the committee will not increase the amount.

The question was taken on the amendment of Mr. LOUD; and the Chairman announced that in his judgment the "noes" seemed to prevail.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Chairman, I call for a division. I want to see how many members of this body are in favor of complying with the law.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 11, noes 97.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

PREVENTION OF EPIDEMICS.

The President of the United States is hereby authorized, in case of threatened or actual epidemic of cholera, yellow fever, or smallpox, to use the unexpended balance of the sums appropriated and reappropriated by the sundry civil appropriation act approved August 5, 1892, or so much thereof as may be necessary, in aid of State and local boards, or otherwise, in his discretion, in preventing and suppressing the spread of the same; and the additional sum of $350,000 is hereby appropriated for the same, to be immediately available.

Mr. SAYERS. I have certain amendments to offer to this provision.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the amendments.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope my friend from Texas will withhold these amendments until we get through with the bill. I will then consent that we may go back to this paragraph with the understanding that the point of order is reserved.

Mr. SAYERS. Just allow the amendments to be pending.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask that the amendments be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 41, after line 17, insert:

"DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

"To enable the President to defray the United States share of the expenses and salaries of a joint commission to determine the questions affecting the water boundary between the United States and Mexico as provided for by the treaty of March 1, 1889, $25,000.

"For the United States moiety of the cost of marking the boundary line between the United States and Canada in Passamaquoddy Bay, opposite and adjacent to Eastport, Me., and for the compensation and expenses of a commission on the part of the United States, as provided for by the convention of July 22, 1892, with Great Britain, $5,000.

"To meet the share of the United States in annual expenses for the year ending April 1, 1894, of sustaining the international bureau at Brussels for the translation and publication of customs tariffs, $1,318.76."

Mr. HOLMAN. Now I suggest to the gentleman from Georgia that this paragraph, with the pending amendments, go over, to be recurred to after the bill is completed, with the point of order reserved. I want to look into these statutes, as I think the matter belongs to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. BLOUNT. This matter was up the other day, and the gentleman then wanted to look at the statutes. I suppose he has had no chance to do so.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have not.

Mr. BLOUNT. And I am willing to indulge him, with the understanding that there is no question raised as to the propriety of offering the amendments.

Mr. HOLMAN. They are pending, subject of course to the point of order.

Mr. BLOUNT. I am satisfied with that arrangement if the gentleman from Texas is.

Mr. SAYERS. I am satisfied with it.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Lighting the Capitol and grounds: For lighting the Capitol and grounds about the same, including the Botanic Garden, and the Senate and House stables; for gas and electric lighting; for use of electric lighting plants in Senate and House wings at not exceeding $200 per month during the sessions of Congress; pay of superintendent of meters, lamplighters, gas-fitters, and for materials and labor for gas and electric lighting, and for general repairs, $24,000.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk, to be inserted after line 14.

The amendment was read, as follows:

For purchase of the electric-lighting plant of the House wing and for repairs and extensions of the same to meet the present requirements of the service, 15,392.62.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I merely desire to state that, inasmuch as the whole character of this bill is in the line of economy, it should be consistent. The Architect of the Capitol went before the subcommittee and gave this testimony with reference to the electric lighting of the House:

Mr. SAYERS. For "Lighting the Capitol Grounds" you have asked for $24,000 each year ever since 1889.

Mr. CLARK. We can not get along without that.

Mr. SAYERS. Here is new language: "For electric lighting plant for House and Senate."

Mr. CLARK. These electric lighting plants are now private property. They have proved satisfactory, and we propose to purchase them. The price is reasonable.

Mr. SAYERS. You think it is in the interest of the public service to make these purchases?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

In March, 1887, permission was granted to the Sawyer-Man Electric Company (since consolidated with the Westinghouse Electric Company) to introduce an electric light plant, complete in every way, in the House wing of the Capitol, without any expense to the Government, such permission not to be in any way construed as obligating the Government to purchase the plant, but giving the Government an option to purchase the same for the sum of $10,392.62. This original plant included a 300-light dynamo with lamps, sockets, wiring, fixtures, etc., one 75 horse-power boiler and one standard 75 horse-power Westinghouse engine. The use of this plant was enjoyed by the Government without any compensation whatever, from 1887 to the beginning of the Fifty-first Congress.

The sundry civil bill, approved August 30, 1890, authorized the Architect of the Capitol to pay out of any unexpended balances for lighting the Capitol building a sum not to exceed $200 per month for the use of the electric-light plants in the House and Senate wings, from the beginning of the first session of the Fifty-first Congress to June 30, 1890, and at the same rate during the fiscal year 1891 when the plants were used. Like provision has been made in subsequent acts and is operative at present. The amount paid for such rental from time authorized (beginning of Fifty-first Congress, December 2, 1889) to December 31, 1892, is $4,600—twenty-three months at $200, which does not include the cost of engineer and labor services, coal, etc., which is paid by the Government. The cost of gas for the same number of lights would probably have been as much or more, to say nothing of the comfort and superiority of the electric lights.

The original 300-hundred light plant in the House wing has been increased to one of 750-light capacity, the difference in price only being charged for and credit given for the smaller machine returned. The House plant is now running 600 lights (all it will bear and no further additions possible), and the Senate plant 800 lights, so that the monthly rental of $200 is about equally chargeable to each wing.

The Architect of the Capitol, in his last annual report, says upon the subject:

The electric lighting has been extended to several additional rooms, including the law library. As the Government is paying rent for these plants—$200 per month during the sessions of Congress—I unhesitatingly advise their purchase by the Government, when the Senate plant shall have been changed from the alternating to the direct system, as has been recommended by the Committee on Rules of the Senate, which made some investigations into the subject of electric lighting. An additional dynamo and engine will be required for the House wing, for use in case of any disarrangement of the present dynamo and engine, now working to their fullest capacity. As fires have frequently occurred in the folding and store rooms, which have been attributed to inflammable matter being piled dangerously near the gas jets, a 100-light dynamo and 25 horse-power engine have been placed in the House wing, for special use of the folding and document room, near and under the old Hall of Representatives, as a further safeguard against loss by fire. This was done in compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives, and paid for out of the contingent fund of the House.

Let the House make provision for the purchase of its own plant as recommended and estimated for, and stop paying rent, which is not in the line of economy.

The item estimated for the purchase of the Senate plant can be left to be acted on by the Senate when the bill is under consideration there, as all the details relating to that plant are familiar to members of that body.

The House plant could not be replaced for the sum asked for, nor does that sum represent its cost to the company. This plant is of the "direct" system and is entirely satisfactory. The $5,000 asked for repairs and extension of the present plant should be granted, for, as stated by the Architect, there is no reserve force in case of any accident to the present dynamo and engine now working to their fullest capacity. With $15,000 appropriated the plant could be paid for and extensions made to meet constant demands for additional lights.

I therefore submit the amendment, indorsed as it is and recommended by the Architect of the Capitol, and it is in thorough accord with the spirit of the chairman of the committee [Mr. HOLMAN] in reporting this bill, which is certainly framed in the line of economy.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I think that sooner or later it will be proper to purchase both the Senate and House electric-lighting plants. As the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM] has said, we are now renting them at $100 a month each——

Mr. BINGHAM. Two hundred dollars a month.

Mr. HOLMAN. One hundred dollars a month for the House and $100 a month for the Senate, during the sessions of Congress. I think that for the present the existing arrangement should be allowed to stand. This is a matter that can be postponed, and I hope my friend will not press it now.

Mr. KEM. Let the amendment be reported again.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. HOLMAN. It will be seen that we will have to appropriate $30,000 at this session if that provision is adopted, because the same provision would have to apply to the Senate. It seems to me that for the present we had better pay the $200 a month rent while Congress is in session, than to make the expenditure at this time. Ultimately of course we will purchase these plants.

The amendment proposed by Mr. BINGHAM was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Depredations on public timber, protecting public lands, and settlement of claims for swamp lands and swamp-land indemnity: The Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized, during the fiscal year 1894, to detail from time to time clerks in his office for protecting timber on the public lands, and for the more efficient execution of the law and rules relating to the cutting thereof; of protecting public lands from illegal and fraudulent entry or appropriation, and of adjusting claims for swamp lands and indemnity for swamp lands, and for per diem subject to such rules and restrictions as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, in lieu of subsistence of clerks so detailed, at a rate not exceeding $3 per day each and actual necessary expenses for transportation, $40,000 is hereby appropriated, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall submit in his annual report a detailed statement of the expenditure under this provision.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to offer a substitute for that section.

Mr. McRAE. Before the substitute offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is read, I desire to propose an amendment to the original text.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. McRAE] will send up his amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the following words in lines 15 and 16:
"Detail from time to time clerks in his office" and insert in lieu thereof "appoint 23 inspectors at not exceeding $1,200 each."

Mr. DINGLEY. I reserve the point of order against that amendment. As I understood it from the reading it is new legislation, and increases the number.

Mr. McRAE. Does the gentleman from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY] make the point of order against the paragraph reported by the committee?

Mr. DINGLEY. I make the point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman state his point?

Mr. DINGLEY. I will reserve the point until I can hear a statement about it.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Chairman, the question as to whether the original section reported by the committee is in order I desire to reserve. Under the rule, I am inclined to think it is not. Passing that point, the amendment I suggest seeks to authorize the Commissioner of the General Land Office to appoint twenty-three inspectors, instead of detailing clerks from his office. In other words, it authorizes the appointment for this special purpose of the number of inspectors that the sum appropriated would pay for, at the same salary such inspectors are now receiving. This legislation proposed by the committee, as I understand it, is aimed to change existing law. These investigations are now made by inspectors, not by clerks detailed.

The purpose of this amendment is to continue the employment of the inspectors now authorized by law, and to allow the Land Office to retain in the office the force they have. These clerks are specially qualified to perform the duties they now perform, were selected for that purpose, and have experience in that direction. To detail them from the Land Office, as this amendment would require, would, I am advised by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, cripple his service, and put inexperienced men in the field. In this connection I will have read part of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office to a member of the Committee on Appropriations, which will, I think, show clearly why the committee's proposition should not prevail. I trust the committee will not cripple the General Land Office in the important work committed to it.

The Clerk read as follows:

My recommendation to the honorable Committee on Appropriations, made on the 21st instant, was, in substance, that the force of special agents employed upon the necessary field work under the different classifications should not be less than 40—or a reduction of 50 per cent of the force in the current fiscal year.

But the provisions of the act making the required service to be performed by clerks detailed from the regular clerical force of this office can not be followed without serious detriment and injury to the proper transaction of the current work.

In view of the reductions in the clerical force which I have recommended, the working force of the office will only be able by the utmost diligence of those clerks who are retained to perform the vast amount of labor which will devolve upon them, and even were there no reduction contemplated in the clerical force, it would be impracticable to detail for the field a class of clerks who would make competent and efficient agents, such as the nature of the work absolutely requires, and to detail clerks of the second, third, or fourth class who might be competent for the field work, if they could be spared, would involve the Government in much greater expense than to appoint the requisite number of special agents at the present rate of compensation.

The sum to be appropriated by the bill in question is $40,000, for per diem in lieu of subsistence, and for the necessary expenses of transportation of the clerks detailed.

It has been found that the average monthly expenses under these items for each of the special agents employed in the past year is $148 per month, or about $1,775 per annum, and the sum proposed by the bill would suffice for the expenses of not more than twenty-three persons under detail, whereas, as hereinbefore stated, the service requires not less than forty persons, and the regular office work could not be properly done if it were depleted of its best clerks who are competent for the duty.

I desire to make representation to your committee of the great and serious detriment to the service that would result from the provisions of the bill in question, and earnestly urge that the same may be so modified and amended as to provide for the appointment as well as the subsistence and transportation of such number of special agents as may be found absolutely necessary for the public interests.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I shall address the Chair for a few moments while the point of order is pending. The effect of the act of March 3, 1891, which abolished the timber-culture law and the preëmption law, and confirmed a greater body of the entries of land which were made in former years and certain other provisions, has very much reduced the business of the Land Office, so that there is an unnecessary force in that office; and the bill as prepared provided for simply a detail of the employés of the General Land Office in lieu of agents, believing that there was a sufficient force in the Land Office to justify the details necessary to make the investigations which are required in regard to the depredations and swamp lands and fraudulent entries, and all that.

The matter of looking to the fraudulent entries and swamp lands is substantially provided for in the act of 1891. The plan as authorized in the bill provides for making appropriations for the details for the purpose of making these investigations that are necessary. The substitute which I have submitted, and which has been adopted by the Committee on Appropriations, provides simply this: that it authorizes not only the details, but also the appointment of agents as well, for which appropriation is made, the appropriations being $60,000, which is an increase of $20,000 over the amount in the original provision.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman a question. Does the gentleman think such a detail made by the General Land Office would not affect the disposition of the current business of that office? The gentleman knows that the great clamor is for the issuance of patents to claimants by that department.

Mr. HOLMAN. But that is going on rapidly.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Does the gentleman think that he can take a detail out of the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office without injuriously affecting the business?

Mr. HOLMAN. I think we could. And the very reason why this amendment is proposed, to make detail, is for the reason that the committee, in the preparation of the legislative bill, provides for a reduction of the force, on the recommendation of the Land Office, to the extent of 68 clerks, with salaries of a little over $81,000. That provision was adopted after this original provision had been adopted; so that the Committee on Appropriations thinks that it is entirely proper to increase materially the amount in this appropriation, and to provide for several agents as well as for details.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask the gentleman from Indiana a question. Do I understand the gentleman from Indiana to state that in the sundry civil bill no money whatever is provided for the employment of special agents of the General Land Office to look after timber depredations and fraudulent land entries? Is that correct?

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, no. This substitute proposed not only applies to details but also to agents, and the appropriation is $60,000.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Chairman, I ask to have the amendment reported again; and thereafter I shall ask to be recognized for five minutes.

Mr. HEARD (to Mr. BLANCHARD). You mean the substitute offered by the gentleman from Indiana, and not the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MCRAE]?

Mr. BLANCHARD. Yes.

The Clerk read the amendment of Mr. MCRAE.

Mr. HEARD. That is the amendment of the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. DINGLEY. I ask that the other amendment be read.

The substitute offered by Mr. HOLMAN was read, as follows:

Depredations on public timber, protecting public lands, and settlement of claims for swamp lands and swamp-land indemnity: To meet the expenses of protecting timber on the public lands and for the more efficient execution of the law and rules relating to the cutting thereof; of protecting public lands from illegal and fraudulent entry or appropriation, and of adjusting claims for swamp lands, and indemnity for swamp lands, $60,000: Provided, That agents and others employed under this appropriation shall receive salaries at not exceeding the rate of $1,000 per annum, and shall be allowed per diem, subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, in lieu of subsistence at a rate not exceeding $3 per day each and actual necessary expenses for transportation: Provided further, That the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized during the fiscal year 1894, to detail from time to time clerks in his office for protecting timber on the public lands, and for the more efficient execution of the law and rules relating to the cutting thereof; of protecting public lands from illegal and fraudulent entry or appropriation, and of adjusting claims for swamp lands and indemnity for swamp lands, and per diem subject to such rules and restrictions as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, in lieu of subsistence of clerks so detailed, at a rate not exceeding $3 per day each and actual necessary expenses for transportation, shall be paid from the foregoing appropriation; and the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall submit in his annual report a detailed statement of the expenditures under this proviso.

Mr. DINGLEY. For what purpose is that being read?

The CHAIRMAN. That is the substitute proposed by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. DINGLEY. I reserve the point of order until I can know something about it. I reserve the points of order all around.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has reserved them three times. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Chairman, I understand from the gentleman from Indiana that the substitute offered by him in lieu of the paragraph on page 32 under the head of "Depredations on public timber," is substantially the law of the last session of Congress, with the appropriation reduced from about $80,000 to $60,000.

Mr. HOLMAN. No; from $120,000 to $60,000.

Mr. BLANCHARD. With the appropriation reduced from $120,000 to $60,000, I am informed by him.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to say here that this reduction of appropriations that are needed by the General Land Office to protect the public lands and the public timber is, in my judgment, of doubtful policy. I believe that the General Land Office should be provided with adequate funds to meet the expenses incident to the protection of the public domain.

Every gentleman who represents a Congressional district, as I do, in which there are large tracts of public lands knows the necessity for guardians of these lands, both in respect of preventing fraudulent land entries and depredations on the timber, and realizes that this constant reducing from year to year of the appropriations to provide for this service is not in the line of a sound public policy. For one, therefore, Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the proposition of the gentlemen from Indiana, which reduces the amount appropriated for this purpose from $120,000, as it was fixed in the bill of the last session, to $60,000, and I send up an amendment proposing to make it as it was in the last bill, $120,000.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. If the gentleman will pardon a suggestion in the line of his thought, I will state that in the Fifty-first Congress the amount appropriated for this purpose was $240,000; then they cut it down to $120,000, and now they propose to cut it down to $60,000. We are all the time talking about protecting the timber on the public lands, but how can we do it if we do not appropriate enough money to do it? The committee are making a continual cut from year to year.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Even with the $120,000 appropriated for this purpose in the last bill, I saw it stated in a newspaper some weeks ago that thirty of the fifty-nine special agents of the General Land Office had been retired because of the want of funds to pay them. Now, if we are going to maintain the public land system and preserve the public lands for bona fide homesteaders, we must prevent fraudulent land entries, and if we are going to protect the Government in its timber interests we must keep up this force of special agents of the General Land Office.

Mr. HEARD. I would suggest to the gentleman that I am advised that the estimate made by the General Land Office is for $120,000.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, I do not know much about the protection of the public timber in other States, but so far as the money expended for that purpose in the far West is concerned I do know something, and it strikes me that the committee has acted very wisely in reducing the amount of this appropriation. I have never seen a timber agent, I have never heard of one, who professed to have done $5 worth of actual good to the Government in this respect.

Mr. BOATNER. There is no timber in your country.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. We have more than there is in the country from which the gentleman himself hails. We have the finest growth of timber in the world. Whenever I take the floor the gentleman always distracts me from the direct question and leads me off into some glowing description of Arizona. [Laughter.] There is more timber there than in the gentleman's own State.

Now, the timber agent goes out into that country and he finds a man cutting a few sticks of wood to make a fire to cook with, or he finds a poor Mexican cutting timber from the mountain side and bringing it down to sell to the people in the towns who can not get it otherwise than by importing it from another State, and he arrests those men, and the Government spends thousands of dollars for the prosecution, and the juries fail to convict, as they ought to fail, and the whole business, instead of doing the Government any good, only harasses those poor people. Therefore, I repeat, that I think the committee were quite wise in reducing the amount of this appropriation, and if they will reduce it still further, so as to make any of these timber agents actually impossible in the Territory of Arizona, they will have the gratitude of at least one small part of this country.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, the Commissioner of the General Land Office thought that—the force of his Bureau being reduced to the extent of $80,000, involving some sixty odd clerks—there should be about thirty special agents. Gentlemen will see that the right to either detail clerks or appoint agents will naturally result in the appointment of agents. Now, the salary of these agents at $1,000 a year and the per diem and traveling expenses are supposed to amount to about $1,700. Therefore this appropriation of $60,000 will employ about thirty-five of these special agents, which is substantially the number suggested by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Gentlemen understand, of course, the impossibility of protecting completely the vast regions of forest that we have in this country. To do that would require not simply the eighty men that we have had during a part of the present year, or twice that number as we had in former years, but an enormous number. Look at that vast region in the northern portion of our country, stretching from the Mississippi River to the Pacific coast, how absolutely impossible it would be to give any complete protection to our forests in that region! The thing is a practical impossibility.

In former years, when large appropriations were made for these agents, the men were mainly employed in ferreting out frauds in entries and in looking into swamp-land matters. As I said awhile ago, the act of the 3d of March, 1891, confirmed substantially all the entries that had been made prior to that time, which, in prior years, during Mr. Cleveland's administration, had been the subject of very tedious and careful examination; and, that subject being disposed of, the number of these agents could, of course, be greatly reduced.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I can not agree entirely with my honorable friend from Arizona, because I think that the special agents for the protection of the timber lands have been of much benefit to my State, where we have a great amount of timber. I may say in passing that I have never had any of these appointments myself; but if we are going to cripple the present system of timber protection by cutting down these appropriations from year to year, why not abandon it altogether? Why not cut it out? Why not let us people of the West attend to our own business without interference? We will get all the land and all the timber, and will not bother you at all. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to say that the provision we have had heretofore on this subject has not been satisfactory to the Western Senators. At the last session, although the provision was retained by the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, there was a strong disposition to strike it out. Gentlemen can see how utterly impossible it is for these agents to protect the timber on the public lands. The Committee on Appropriations thought there was no occasion for appropriating more than $60,000 for this purpose.

Mr. BUSHNELL. Mr. Chairman, I do not know what the facts may be in Arizona. I do know what they are in Colorado and New Mexico and in some of the communities this side of that region, and I know what is the case in Wisconsin. I have had occasion to know that these timber agents have been very efficient there in the protection of Government lands. I do not sympathize at all with the idea that the appropriation should be cut down or the means of protecting our timber on the public lands curtailed or done away with. I know that in Southwestern Colorado, and generally in that section of country, it was the custom some eight or ten years ago to carry around portable sawmills; and wherever there was Government timber that could be cut, the sawmill was set up and the timber stolen for the purpose of being sold around the country.

In this way the public lands were in a great measure denuded of timber, and large amounts of money were made by timber companies. I know too that when the timber agents began to be sent out there by the Government this business of wholesale timber stealing was stopped, as it should be. In my own State of Wisconsin we have had some very good timber agents, reliable men, who could be depended upon every time with reference to ascertaining the facts about timber stealing to enable the facts to be proven and judgment recovered for the value of the timber taken.

Mr. HOLMAN. How much did the Government recover through their instrumentality?

Mr. BUSHNELL. To my personal knowledge the Government recovered a great many thousand dollars.

Mr. HOLMAN. But the information was furnished by persons having no connection with the Government.

Mr. BUSHNELL. Not at all; a good deal of it was furnished by a timber agent appointed from the gentleman's own State.

Mr. HOLMAN. And he was appointed after the whole information on the subject had been laid before the General Land Office.

Mr. BUSHNELL. The gentleman is mistaken. I happen to have personal knowledge in regard to this matter, for I was acting as United States attorney of the western district of Wisconsin; and under my specific direction this gentleman appointed from Indiana as special timber agent made investigations that were invaluable, and were the means of collecting many thousands of dollars for timber which had been stolen in my own State that never could have been recovered at all without the information he obtained.

Mr. HOLMAN. But the proceedings were based upon information previously obtained.

Mr. BUSHNELL. That information was useless without the further information furnished by the special agent. Mr. J. K. Speer was the agent from Indiana I refer to; I presume the gentleman from Indiana is personally acquainted with him. We had other agents too; some of them were not as efficient as they ought to have been; but the amount of money that was recovered through the instrumentality of these special timber agents was many times greater than the expense of keeping them in the field In fact, nothing could have been done without them.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Does the gentleman favor the present method of appointing special agents?

Mr. BUSHNELL. These were all appointed by the General Land Office.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. From what locality?

Mr. BUSHNELL. From all over the country. The agent of whom I have particularly spoken was from Indiana; he had never been in the State of Wisconsin before; yet he made the best agent we had there. He came there as a "tenderfoot;" but when he went out into the woods he beat the old timber agents. The trouble with timber agents appointed from the immediate localities where the investigations were to be made, was that perhaps they might sometimes have had some idea of favoring the timber thieves.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, experience has demonstrated that information in cases of this kind is generally furnished promptly by persons in the neighborhood without the aid of these timber agents. Under the practice heretofore, when special agents were sent out to investigate the facts, the district attorney, upon their reports, was instructed to bring suit against the parties who had committed depredations, provided the amount involved was large: for it has not been customary for the Commissioner to interfere with the mere neighborhood use of timber; that has never been done; it could not be done; it ought not to be done; it would not be a humane thing.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. But that is what these agents have been doing.

Mr. HOLMAN. But where large transactions occur, where large bodies of timber are sawed for exportation, there the subject is brought at once to the attention of the Commissioner and a special agent is sent out. For this purpose we have provided these thirty-five agents, and certainly the number is ample.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Certainly.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Chairman, this, far more than ever before in the history of our country, is the period of land grabbing. It is likewise the period of greatest activity in the timber business, sawing of lumber, etc. There is much of the lands yet remaining to the public domain that owes its principal value to the timber upon it. The temptation to depredate is constant and great.

Mr. Chairman, it is a fact that in the courts of the western Federal district of Louisiana three-fourths of the prosecutions grow out of depredations on the Government timber and from fraudulent land entries; and I know it to be a fact—and my colleague from the Fifth district, who with me practices before that court, knows it to be a fact—that it is impossible in nine cases out of ten for the United States district attorney to make out a a case of timber depredation or fraudulent land entry without the active assistance of the special agent of the General Land Office detailed for duty in that country, and a most efficient one is he required to be, at that.

This whole question may be resolved into a nutshell: Are we going to protect the public lands from depredation, or are we not? If we are to protect them we certainly ought to provide a sum of money adequate to do so. If we are not to protect them, we ought not to appropriate a single dollar of the public money.

But a few years ago the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] himself took the lead in this House in bringing about the repeal of all the land laws of the United States except the homestead law; and now when I rise here in behalf of those seeking homesteads, who do not want to settle on the public lands when these lands have been denuded of timber, I find in the gentleman from Indiana the most active opponent of an adequate appropriation which will preserve the rights of those persons who, in the contemplation of the law, are to be the beneficiaries of the humane provision of law allowing homestead entries.

If you take away from certain sections of the country the special agents of the General Land Office, who protect and guard the public lands and the timber upon them, why you open wide the door to depredators; you invite them to enter, and they will be quick to avail themselves of the chance offered. The lands in my own section of the country belonging to the Government of the United States are mainly desirable for the timber that is found upon them. Because of the good timber upon the lands, as well as their availability for cultivation, homesteaders are attracted to them. But you pursue a policy here which takes away the guardians of the public lands; the lands are then preyed upon by depredators; the timber is depleted; and thus one of the principal inducements to settle is gone.

I believe it is a bad policy which the Committee on Appropriations is pursuing. Niggardly appropriations fetter the arm of the Government. I repeat, if you are going to provide protection to the public domain, do it in a way adequate to the end you have in view.

I trust the Committee of the Whole will adopt the amendment to increase the appropriation from $60,000 to $120,000.

Mr. DINGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman from Indiana in charge of this bill as to the effect of the substitute which he proposes to offer to this part of it.

Mr. HOLMAN. The only substantial change is in two points. First, it authorizes the appointment of agents, and secondly, it increases the appropriation.

Mr. DINGLEY. But the bill as reported provides for the detail of clerks from the General Land Office.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, that alone; and it appropriates $40,000.

Mr. DINGLEY. And the substitute proposes instead of the detail of clerks the appointment of special agents.

Mr. HOLMAN. It provides for both the detail and appointment of these agents.

Mr. DINGLEY. The number of clerks in the Land Office is reduced, I believe, in the legislative appropriation bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. DINGLEY. So that having reduced the number of clerks it is now proposed, instead of detailing clerks, to have special agents appointed?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir; but it also provides for details.

Mr. DINGLEY. And is not the practical effect simply this, to take from under the operation of the civil-service law these agents when detailed, or these clerks, and make them special appointments outside?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes. These would not come within the classified service.

Mr. DINGLEY. But if there were clerks assigned to this duty they would be?

Mr. HOLMAN. They would. But let me say to the gentleman, I think from the statement of the Commissioner of the Land Office, and from my own personal acquaintance with that establishment, that the force will be more than sufficient even with the reduction of sixty odd clerks. I think we can still make details from this office if it is required, in addition to the agents provided here.

Mr. DINGLEY. But if there had been no reduction in the legislative appropriation bill, in your judgment there would have been a sufficient number of clerks to have performed the duty?

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, yes; the number would have been very ample.

Mr. DINGLEY. So that while reducing the number of clerks in the Land Office, you also provide a way for the appointment of an equal number of special agents, who will be outside of the civil-service law.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will say to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY] that this is in conformity with the recommendation of the Commissioner himself. That is to say, if we reduce the number of clerks, as he proposes, then he would want some special agents, to the number of about thirty, and we provide substantially for thirty-five.

I want to say to my friend from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD] that there are no lands in his State adapted for agriculture which are covered with timber. The timber lands of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Florida are not lands adapted for cultivation.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I beg the gentleman's pardon. If he will permit me to say so, the timber lands of Louisiana are well adapted for cultivation.

Mr. HOLMAN. I know that in Alabama the timber lands are almost entirely unadapted for the purposes of cultivation.

Mr. BLANCHARD. That is not true of the timber lands of Louisiana.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman talks about niggardly appropriations. If we do not blush our constituents will when they come to examine the "niggardly" appropriations of this bill—over $40,000,000—unexampled in a time of profound peace.

Mr. BUSHNELL. But the appropriation is over three millions of dollars less this year than it was for the same purpose last year.

Mr. STORER. I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] whether there has ever been any recommendation to the Committee on Appropriations from the Bureau of Forestry of the Agricultural Department on this subject?

Mr. HOLMAN. No; that would go the Committee on Public Lands. There have been a number of schemes suggested, and we carried a measure through the House, but it received no attention from the hands of the Senate.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Chairman, the amendment I offer and the substitute offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] differ, first, in the amount appropriated. The bill as it is would appropriate $40,000. This my amendment does not change. The amendment suggested by the gentleman from Indiana would increase it to $60,000. That much of his substitute I favor, because we get more inspectors. The other difference is that under his amendment the Commissioner may appoint inspectors, or he may detail clerks. Under mine he must appoint inspectors. I am willing to give him discretion in the matter of these appointed.

I agree to almost all that the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD] has said. If there is anything in this idea of protecting the public domain, we should give to the Commissioner of the General Land Office a sufficient force to do it. We should respect his recommendations and give him what he asks for. Since we began this policy we have appropriated over $2,000,000 for inspectors, a statement of which I will print in the RECORD. At times I have thought, when I have seen the character of investigations made in some sections of the country, that it cost us more than it was worth; but I think it is due to the character of particular inspectors and not to the policy. We should abandon it, or make it effectual by giving a reasonable sum.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office has said in the communication that I had read, that it is not practical without injury to the service to detail these men from his office. Men who are qualified to do duty in the office are not qualified to go into the field. It requires a special education and training in that direction, such as they can not get in the Land Office. The Land Office needs all the competent men it has for work in the office.

Now, we should do one of two things: Either increase this appropriation and make it what it ought to be, or abandon it and appropriate nothing; and so far as I am concerned I care but little which the House shall do. I do insist that the Land Office shall not be crippled, as the committee proposition will certainly do.

Mr. HOLMAN. In reply to the statement of my friend from Arkansas [Mr. MCRAE], I wish to say this: My friend has entire confidence in the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who is certainly a very able and efficient officer. Now, we have, as I understand, complied substantially with his views in the provisions of this substitute.

Mr. MCRAE. Except as to the amount. I understand that he suggested $120,000. I find that sum in the Book of Estimates.

Mr. HOLMAN. He did not mention any sum to us.

Mr. MCRAE. I am not going to press my amendment any further, because the substitute of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] increases the appropriation to $60,000. I will withdraw my amendment and point of order and let the vote come on the amendment offered to the substitute by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD]. This, I hope, will be adopted, and thus give the department what it wants.

The statement referred to is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE.
Washington, D. C., January 26, 1893.

SIR: Replying to your verbal request of this date, I have the honor to submit the following statement, showing the amounts expended under the various appropriations for each fiscal year by special agents of this office from the date of the first appropriation to December 31, 1892, viz:

Very respectfully,

M. M. ROSE,
Assistant Commissioner.

HON. THOMAS C. MCRAE,
Chairman Public Lands Committee, House of Representatives.

Mr. BOATNER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the committee and the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to the absolute necessity of continuing the same character of agents we have heretofore had if the intention or expectation is to protect the public domain from depredations. As stated by my colleague [Mr. BLANCHARD] the lumbering interest is growing very rapidly in the timber districts of the Southern States, at least in the State of Louisiana. The greatest frauds and depredations which have been committed on the public lands are by fraudulent homestead entries. Men who are the mere agents of mill companies pretend to homestead upon the public land. Men go on the land as if they were homestead settlers, and before the time to prove up their claims has expired, the mills have stripped the land of all the timber, and the Government has been defrauded of very valuable property.

Now, I know of an instance in the district of my colleague in which three sections of public lands were entered at $1.25 an acre. That was when it could be so entered, but it was land, however, which under the law was not subject to entry for less than $2.50 an acre. The timber on that land was worth $25 an acre. The gentleman who entered it stripped it of its timber. He had been previously informed that he could get no title to the land unless he paid $2.50 an acre. He refused to pay $2.50 an acre and demanded the return of what he had paid, and the result was that he had stripped three sections of valuable public land of the timber which stood on it and he got his money back.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. That statement sounds very strange to me. Does the timber-land law of June 30, 1878, apply to Louisiana?

Mr. HOLMAN. No; only to the Pacific coast.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I think under the law of last Congress it was applied all over the country.

Mr. MCRAE. There was a law of that general character passed.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. It applies to all the States of the Union. It came under the timber-culture bill of the Senate, which we amended, and which was passed, making it apply to all the States of the Union.

Mr. HOLMAN. I had overlooked that law.

Mr. BOATNER. The gentleman will excuse me, I have only five minutes.

I want to call attention to the fact that if the General Land Office is to rely upon information given by people who live in the immediate neighborhood where depredations are committed, it will never get that information.

If we are to rely upon the voluntary statements of witnesses as to the depredations that have been committed there will never be any convictions. In other words, the Government can not be put in possession of the evidence nor the facts upon which to institute prosecutions necessary to protect the public domain unless we have land agents whose special duty it will be to examine into and report upon these matters. Ordinarily they should come from other districts.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. BOATNER. Of course.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. How can you prevent the trouble of which you speak, when it becomes a necessity to cut the timber in order for the settler to make a homestead? How can you stop this fraud when the homesteader apparently in good faith cuts the timber to make him a homestead? Can you stop frauds by merely stopping the cutting of the timber?

Mr. BOATNER. The homestead law allows the homesteader to cut the timber off the land he desires to cultivate, and to cut enough timber for the purposes of improvement. The right is limited. So that where a man located upon a piece of land under the homestead law cuts down the timber on the land which he intends to cultivate and sells sufficient to build his houses, it is very easy to see that he is acting in good faith; but where he locates 160 acres and immediately a large force of men is put upon it to cut the timber down, why you know that man is not homesteading for the purpose of cultivation, but for the purpose of selling that timber; and you can very soon find out that this timber belongs to some mill company, and that this man is only receiving wages. When that is found to be the case it is conclusive that the entry was fraudulent, and I contend that the Government is not going to ascertain the facts unless it has a man whose business it is to investigate and report thereon.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is the reason why we make this provision.

Mr. BOATNER. And so, if the gentleman from Indiana is satisfied that public lands shall not be protected from depredations and if the gentleman from Arizona desires Mexicans in his State shall have the right to steal Government timber, why, perhaps they ought to be allowed to do it. I do not know, as I am not familiar with the conditions. The entire appropriation should be stricken out. But if it is the intention to protect the public domain and to hold this timber until the property is acquired and the title passed from the Government legally and lawfully, then we ought to appropriate enough money to accomplish the purpose.

If we do not we ought not to appropriate any at all. It is worse than a waste to appropriate less money than will be effectual. Now, if we are going to rely upon the Commissioner of the General Land Office sending a clerk from his office whenever he is informed and advised that depredations are being committed, we may just as well wipe out the entire appropriation, because he will only be so advised in cases where the advice is instigated by private malice.

Mr. WARNER. It seems to me, sir, we should take into consideration that the great end of appointing and paying these agents is not so much to recover whatever small amounts may be recovered for timber which has been stolen in spite of the precautions of the Government, as it is to prevent, by vigilance, these depredations upon Government timber. Therefore, it seems to me that there is no necessary proportion between the amount recovered by suits on the part of the Government, with the aid of the Government agents, and the amount which may and should be economically expended in employing agents for the purpose of preventing depredations.

It seems to me, sir, that the latter is the end to be subserved by the appointment of these agents, and therefore that an economical expenditure of money is not to be gauged by the extent to which the Government redresses its wrongs in court, but by the extent to which, as a result of such expenditure, this sort of depredation upon Government property can be prevented and suits in court thereby forestalled.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will ask the gentleman whether he thinks that thirty-five is not an ample number of these agents.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. Chairman, my experience in actually employing agents to look after timber lands, in which experience I have been fortunate enough to have paid my money with the result of preventing depredations and with the further result of not involving my clients in suits, my experience in that regard has been such that, although I do not wish my judgment to stand as a normal for the committee, my answer to the gentleman would be that the number he proposes and the number proposed by the most liberal estimate made in any of the amendments offered here is far too small for effectually guarding the timber lands of the Government, far too small for true economy, in case the Government proposes to guard these timber lands at all.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Chairman, is it in order to offer a substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana?

The CHAIRMAN. There is one amendment to the substitute already pending. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. McRAE] offered an amendment to the original paragraph, which he withdrew. The gentleman from Indiana offered a substitute, to which the gentleman from Louisiana offers an amendment. When that amendment is disposed of the amendment of the gentleman from Kansas will be in order. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD] to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], proposing to strike out "$60,000" and insert "$120,000."

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 63, noes 37.

Mr. BRETZ. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. BRETZ, and the gentleman from Louisiana, Mr. BLANCHARD.

Mr. BRETZ (during the count by tellers). Mr. Chairman, with the understanding that we may have a separate vote in the House upon this amendment, I will withdraw the point of no quorum.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I have not agreed to any such understanding.

The count was continued, and the tellers reported—ayes 108, noes 59.

So the amendment of Mr. BLANCHARD was agreed to.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to the substitute of the gentleman from Indiana.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "agent," in line 9, insert "who shall be appointed from the State in which they are to act as such agents."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair calls the gentleman's attention to the fact that the section to which this amendment would refer has been passed. The committee are now considering depredations on the public lands, commencing with section 10.

Mr. SIMPSON. I offer this as an amendment to the substitute of the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I make the point of order against that amendment that it changes existing law and does not come within the rule which requires that such an amendment, to be in order, must propose to reduce expenditures.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The gentleman prefers that the existing law shall remain as it is and that his State shall receive these appointments.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Not at all; but I prefer that the appointments shall not be made from the very men who are engaged in committing these depredations. I prefer that these officials shall be men who will investigate the depredations honestly and properly.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Almost all the special agents we have had in our State have come from the gentleman's State.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I had nothing to do with sending them, though.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I thought you had. Your party was in power during four years, and I supposed you might have controlled some of these agents.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Not one of them.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Well, your party sent them.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. They were not permitted to remain during the recent Administration.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Oh, no; and those who are there now will not be permitted to remain.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I trust not.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I hope not, myself. The gentleman and I agree on that point.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON] proposes to insert, as the Chair understands, in the pending substitute the words "who shall be appointed from the State in which they are to act as such agents."

Mr. SIMPSON. My amendment merely provides that the agent shall be appointed from the State where the cases arise on which he is to act. I have had some experience in regard to agents appointed by the Land Office——

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman speak first to the point of order?

Mr. SIMPSON. I do not wish to speak on the point of order. I will wait till the Chair decides it.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] indicate wherein the proposed amendment of the gentleman from Kansas is obnoxious to a point of order?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. It provides a method of appointment which is contrary to existing law. Under existing law these agents may be appointed from any State in the Union. They are, in fact, appointed from different parts of the Union. The proposed amendment would enact a restriction in this respect. It changes the law in that particular.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it conceded by the gentleman from Kansas that the law is now different from the provision contained in his amendment?

Mr. SIMPSON. I do not know of any law on the subject.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I do not agree with the gentleman that these agents are appointed from different parts of the Union. None have ever been appointed from my section of the country or from any part of the Pacific coast. Many of them are appointed, I believe, from the State of Kansas.

Mr. SIMPSON. I am not aware of any provision of law upon this subject. If the gentleman from Ohio can adduce any law regulating this matter, it would be well for him to submit it.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I think the Chair is aware of the fact that the present law permits the appointment of these agents from all over the Union.

The CHAIRMAN. There is, the Chair presumes, a law in existence at the present time authorizing the appointment of these agents. If the object of this amendment is to make further regulations on that subject, or to change the existing law in any way, of course the amendment is not in order. No new provision of law can be engrafted upon an appropriation bill in this way. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The question being taken on the substitute offered by Mr. HOLMAN, it was agreed to; there being—ayes 38, noes 27.

The Clerk read as follows:

SURVEYING THE PUBLIC LANDS.

For surveys and resurveys of public lands, $100,000, at rates not exceeding $9 per linear mile for standard and meander lines, $7 for township, and $5 for section lines: Provided, That in expending this appropriation preference shall be given in favor of surveying townships occupied, in whole or in part, by actual settlers and of lands granted to the States by the act approved February 22, 1889, and the acts approved July 3 and July 10, 1890, and other surveys shall be confined to lands adapted to agriculture, and lines of reservations, except that the Commissioner of the General Land Office may allow, for the survey of lands heavily timbered, mountainous, or covered with dense undergrowth, rates not exceeding $13 per linear mile for standard and meander lines, $11 for township, and $7 for section lines, and in cases of exceptional difficulties in the surveys, when the work can not be contracted for at these rates, compensation for surveys and resurveys may be made by the said Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, at rates not exceeding $18 per linear mile for standard and meander lines, $15 for township, and $12 for section lines: Provided further, That in the States of Montana, Washington, Idaho, and Oregon there may be allowed, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, for the survey of lands heavily timbered, mountainous, or covered with dense undergrowth, rates not exceeding $25 per linear mile for standard and meander lines, $23 for township, and $20 for section lines.

And of the sum hereby appropriated not exceeding $30,000 may be expended for examination of public surveys in the several surveying districts in order to test the accuracy of the work in the field, and to prevent payment for fraudulent and imperfect surveys returned by deputy surveyors, and for examinations of surveys heretofore made and reported to be defective or fraudulent; and inspecting mineral deposits, coal fields, and timber districts, and for making such other surveys or examinations as may be required for identification of lands for purposes of evidence in any suit or proceeding in behalf of the United States: Provided further, That the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, and Washington shall have a preference right over any person or corporation to select lands granted to said States by the act of Congress approved February 22, 1889, for a period of sixty days after lands have been surveyed and duly declared to be subject to selection and entry under the general land laws of the United States: And provided further, That such preference right shall not accrue against bona fide homestead or preëmption settlers on any of said lands at the date of filing of the plat of survey of any township in any local land office of said States.

For necessary expenses of survey, appraisal, and sale, and pay of custodians of abandoned military reservations transferred to the control of the Secretary of the Interior under the provisions of an act of Congress approved July 5, 1884, including a custodian of the ruin of Casa Grande, $5,000.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I move to amend by striking out in line 19, on page 44, the word "one," and inserting "two;" so as to make the amount read "$200,000."

Mr. HERMANN. I desire to move an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe we have passed the provision which it is proposed to amend; and, if so, the amendment is out of order.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Oh, no; we have not passed it.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment sent to the desk by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HERMANN] will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the amendment of Mr. WILSON of Washington, so as to strike out in line 19, page 44, the words "one hundred thousand dollars" and insert "$869,955."

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, in the last session of Congress the question of public surveys in the public-land States of the Union was thoroughly discussed, and by agreement with my friend, the gentleman from Indiana, the amount of the appropriation for that purpose was increased in this House from $100,000 to $200,000; and there was a still further increase in the Senate to $375,000. The amount proposed to be appropriated in this bill—$100,000 less $20,000 for examining the surveys after the work has been done in the field—is wholly inadequate, and I sincerely trust that this Committee of the Whole will agree to the increase asked for, which comforms to the amount agreed to in the House at the last session of Congress.

The necessity for surveys is as great now as it was then. The sum proposed in the bill would give to the State I have the honor to represent scarcely anything for these public surveys; and when the money is scattered over the immense area where these public-land surveys are to be made, the various States and Territories west of the Mississippi River would be left in practically the same condition in which we found them when we entered upon the work of the Fifty-first Congress. There can be no objection to my amendment other than a desire to keep the appropriations down; and as this is a work of great public necessity I hope the amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Chairman, the amount named in this bill and also the amount proposed in the amendment of the gentleman from Washington are both entirely inadequate. The bill recommends an appropriation of $100,000. My friend from Washington [Mr. WILSON], who is in full sympathy with the rest of us from the West, moves an amendment to insert $200,000.

On examining the Book of Estimates it will be found that the Commissioner of the General Land Office has recommended for this purpose an appropriation of $869,955. The House will therefore readily perceive how grossly inadequate is not only the sum named in the bill, but also the amount mentioned in the amendment of my friend from Washington [Mr. WILSON].

I remind the committee further of various estimates here which have been submitted by the Department for these surveys in the different States. For instance, take the State of Colorado; $185,000 is recommended for these surveys and $7,000 for resurveys. In the State of Montana $200,000 is recommended for the surveys, twice as much as is recommended by the Committee on Appropriations here, and an amount equal to the sum proposed by my friend from Washington, which is intended to cover the surveys in all of the States of the Union.

Looking further, sir, along the line I find in his own State of Washington the sum of $136,000 is recommended by the surveyor-general as an urgent and necessary amount of money for carrying on this work; in my own State of Oregon, $62,500 is recommended, and in the State of Idaho, $61,795. And to show, as to the necessities of my own State in particular, and to illustrate the urgent need for the increase of appropriations for this service, I may read from a letter to the honorable Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated June 22, 1892, from the surveyor-general of Oregon, in which he says:

Instead of the demand for surveys decreasing it is steadily increasing. There is a continuous immigration of homeseekers to this State, and they are rapidly settling the valleys and plateaus in the mountainous and timber regions. There are many townships on which settlements have been made and applications for survey received, but for want of funds no present action can be taken. In view of these facts it will be seen that the foregoing estimate is very conservative.

Mr. Chairman, it may be said that so far as this item of expenditure is concerned it is not intended for the future. It is a present necessity, it is a present and pressing emergency. There is a large number of settlers on these lands, which are agricultural in their character. These people have established their homes there; they have made themselves homes for life, made improvements upon the lands and effected a permanent settlement, and are now calling on the General Government for an extension of the system of public surveys in order that they may obtain titles to their homes. I ask, in view of these urgent appeals to the House of Representatives, whether such a meager sum, scarcely one-ninth of the sum recommended by the surveyors-general for this service, should be deemed sufficient by this House on the report of its Committee on Appropriations.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office, as well as the Secretary of the Interior, in the very intelligent and able reports before the Committee on Appropriations, have impressed on their attention the necessity of greater liberality in these matters.

I shall further on introduce an amendment in regard to what I consider an inadequate sum appropriated for inspection of surveys in the field, for the purpose of showing how urgent a necessity there is for increase in that regard. The sum of $20,000 is recommended by this Committee on Appropriations, while $75,000 is asked for by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, while a sum equal to three or four times that amount is recommended by the surveyors-general throughout the different States, and let it be understood further that this insignificant sum is to be deducted from the small sum of $100,000 in the bill for surveys. Would any gentleman, in his own private affairs, justify such an unreasonable disregard of pressing necessities? Inadequate expenditures are in one sense extravagant expenditures. Insufficiency in such matters signifies waste and damage. But whatever else it may mean, it is willful disregard of the public interests.

Mr. BOWERS. Mr. Chairman, this is the most indefensible specimen of "cheese paring" in this entire bill. One hundred thousand dollars only is proposed here for the surveys of all of the States of this Union, when it is estimated that $800,000 is required.

In California there are plenty of homes where pioneers have settled on the public lands, and some are within eight or nine miles of large towns that are as yet unsurveyed. They can not get titles to the lands, because they have not the money to make the surveys. If there is any place in this bill where an amendment should be adopted increasing the amount, it is in this appropriation for the survey of the homes of these men and these families that are building up the country and improving it on our public domain. It is indefensible, it is "cheese paring" and nothing else, and I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I desire to call the attention of the committee further to the fact that the committee has already placed an amendment on the bill increasing the compensation of special agents from $60,000 to $120,000, and it does seem to me that the committee might increase the appropriation for surveys to give the settlers their homes by the sum of $100,000, or somewhere in the same proportion as the increase of the special agents.

Mr. HOLMAN. We had this same controversy during the last session——

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Yes; and the gentleman from Indiana agreed to our view then.

Mr. HOLMAN. I thought then perhaps it was well enough to appropriate an increased sum, and so said to the Committee of the Whole. But on further examination I do not think that ought to be done, and I think the Committee on Appropriations ought to be sustained on this item.

We are appropriating vast sums of money for this purpose, while in our former experience we were much more moderate. In 1886-'87 we appropriated $50,000.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Right there, if the gentleman will allow me, that threw everything in the Western States into confusion, and made it impossible for hundreds of thousands of settlers on the public domain to get titles to their lands, and it has led to confusion ever since.

Mr. HERMANN. The amount appropriated has been expended.

Mr. HOLMAN. In reply to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. WILSON] I will say that Congress was very slow in learning of the confusion he speaks of, because I find that the next year they appropriated the same amount.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. And that led to confusion worse confounded.

Mr. HOLMAN. It did not reach the House, though.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Oh, yes, it did.

Mr. HOLMAN (continuing). In the next year, 1889, we appropriated $100,000. When the Fifty-first Congress came in the amount rose to $425,000, which showed that there was apparently great necessity for surveys at that time. In 1892 the the sum of $400,000 was appropriated, making $825,000 appropriated by the last Congress for these surveys, and at the last session of this Congress we finally compromised with the Senate on $375,000.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. But right there let me say to the gentleman that these amounts have already been expended.

Mr. HOLMAN. There has been nearly a million and a quarter of dollars appropriated for surveys of the public lands within the last three years.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. But let me remind the gentleman that the amount appropriated last year was not reported in the appropriation bills, but was increased as the result of amendments offered. The increase made in the House was to the same amount as that in the amendment which I have now offered.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, I know what the pressure is on this subject.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. It is terrific.

Mr. HERMANN. It simply shows the great necessity for it.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have a statement before me which shows that the land surveyed and undisposed of amounts to 150,338,352 acres. When I saw that statement——

Mr. CASTLE. I would like to ask the gentleman a question right there.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let me finish my sentence. When I saw that statement it seemed to me incredible that there were still surveyed and undisposed of 150,338,352 acres, for the reason that the everlasting pressure upon the House for appropriations for surveys seems to render it necessary that further surveys should be made. On that account the clerk of the Committee on Appropriations telegraphed these figures to the Assistant Commissioner of the Land Office, asking him if they were correct, and he telegraphed back as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, January 23, 1893.

J. C. COURTS,
Clerk Appropriations Committee:
Figures given in your telegram of to-day correct.

M. M. ROSE,
Assistant Commissioner.

Now, the clerk of the committee telegraphed these figures, and this is the response. I said to the gentleman who called my attention to this statement some days ago——

Mr. PICKLER. What figures were telegraphed?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Oh, the gentleman from Indiana includes railroad land surveyed, and the arid lands, and everything else. We understand all about that.

Mr. HOLMAN. In reply to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER], I will say the figures I referred to show that there are lands surveyed and undisposed of to the amount of over 150,000,000 acres.

Mr. PICKLER. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] would not want a settler to leave a place which he had improved, and where the land was valuable, and go off to some mountainous waste, to take up worthless land, simply because it was surveyed, would he?

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, certainly not. The most remarkable feature of the whole matter is that millions of money have been spent, in the last twenty years in surveying deserts. I do not mean what have been called deserts in former years, lands capable of supporting cattle, pasture lands, etc., but absolute deserts.

Mr. HERMANN. Is it not a fact that a large portion of the lands which are represented there as being surveyed but vacant, are embraced within railroad land grants, wagon-road land grants and various selections, and grants to the different States, Indian reservations, etc.?

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly, to some extent.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. The figures given undoubtedly include all the worthless land in the country which happens to have been surveyed.

Mr. HOLMAN. A large portion of the railroad land grants are still unsurveyed. Besides, we do not pay for the surveys of railroad lands. The railroad companies pay for those surveys.

Mr. HERMANN. I wish to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that, of the amount last appropriated a large portion went to the four or five new States of the Union, in order that they might survey lands so as to make their selections.

Mr. HOLMAN. But the fact remains as I have stated, that in the last three years we have appropriated the enormous sum of nearly a million and a quarter of dollars for this purpose. And now you have the startling fact before you that over 150,000,000 of acres of land which have been surveyed are still undisposed of. I am conceding now, gentlemen, that large sums of the money appropriated have been absolutely squandered.

I am not calling in question the integrity of any Commissioner of the General Land Office especially. I am not criticising the present administration of the General Land Office. All men who are acquainted with the present Commissioner, Governor Stone, recognize his ability and integrity and devotion to public duty. I am only stating the result of the expenditures in the surveys and the present state of the public land surveys. Contractors have been employed in surveying the lands that were said to be lands fit for cultivation that were worth nothing.

Mr. HERMANN. Upon that point I want to ask the gentleman one question.

Mr. HOLMAN. We have largely increased the cost of surveying the public lands in recent years, and I have before me a proposition to reduce the charges for surveying the lands very largely, going back to the old law; and you gentlemen who are interested in these surveys of the public lands will find that if that provision is adopted by Congress, if only a fair profit is charged for these surveys, you will not hear this clamor for Congress to make these excessive appropriations for the surveys.

Mr. HERMANN. Does not the gentleman from Indiana know as a fact that under the rules of the Interior Department for the last three or four years, and the severe restrictions made in the appropriation acts, that no lands can be surveyed, and that no land has been surveyed except such as is of an agricultural quality, and upon which settlement has been made for bona fide purposes?

Mr. HOLMAN. Excuse me right there. If there has been a proper application of the money—and I see that these great appropriations have been $425,000, $400,000, and $375,000 for the last three years—if there has been a proper carrying out of the law, being only the survey of lands applicable to agriculture, and in portions of the country where surveys for settlement were required, I tell you, gentlemen, it is impossible that there should be any great reason for very large appropriations of money.

Mr. HERMANN. The surveyor-general says that the appropriations have been expended.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not blame you gentlemen for desiring to get all the money appropriated you can for your section of country; that is natural. We all do that, as a rule [laughter], if Congress will yield to our requests.

Mr. HERMANN. The appropriations that have been made for this purpose have been expended for a bona fide purpose.

Mr. HOLMAN. The contractors for making surveys make handsome sums of money. They make twice as much money as they should.

Mr. PICKLER. Then why do you not remedy that by reducing the amount paid?

Mr. HOLMAN. They get much more than they ought to receive. This large amount of money appropriated is largely from the clamor that is made in the lobby.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. But where does this clamor come from? What is it for? Is it not for the settlement of the public domain?

Mr. HOLMAN. You can easily see how this clamor should come from these men who are making fortunes out of surveying contracts.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have order, so that we can hear what is being said.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say in reply to my friend from Indiana, that no survey can be made, as stated by the gentleman from Oregon, except it is of agricultural lands, and unless it is shown to be adapted for bona fide settlers in the townships in which the survey is to be made. I desire to say to him further that the large appropriations made, commencing with the Fifty-first Congress, were necessitated by the lack of appropriation made by the Congresses that preceded the Fifty-first Congress. I desire to say to him further that of my own knowledge these appropriations have been wisely, honestly, and economically administered for the benefit of settlers upon the public domain.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will my friend allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. With pleasure.

Mr. HOLMAN. Does not the gentleman know that 153,000,000 acres of land have been surveyed which are adapted to cultivation which are not occupied? That is the report of the Land Office.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I know there are 150,000,000 acres of surveyed lands unoccupied, but those surveys were made under the old deposit system, on lands for railroads and wagon roads, etc., but did not apply to the bona fide settler, who now has to pay the money.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon. The gentleman from Washington offered an amendment to which the gentleman from Oregon offered an amendment, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend line 19, page 44, by striking out the word "one," and inserting the word "two;" so as to read "two hundred thousand."

The CHAIRMAN. To which the gentleman from Oregon has offered the amendment, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out "one hundred thousand" and insert "eight hundred and sixty-nine thousand nine hundred and fifty-five dollars."

The CHAIRMAN. The question will first be taken on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs on the amendment of the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Chairman, just one word in regard to that, if it be in order. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] has paraded the same figures here to-day that he paraded at the last session—that there were 150,000,000 acres of land surveyed that were unoccupied. I asked him a question then, and I sought to ask him the question to-day, and he dodged it, if he did not know as a matter of fact that there was not a single acre of that whole 150,000,000 acres of land that was fit for settlement; and he admitted that that was true. But yet, notwithstanding that, our friend parades these figures here to-day. He is familiar with the condition of the public lands, and knows very well that in my own State, within the last two years, more than 2,000,000 acres of land have been opened up to settlement as part of the public domain by securing the titles of the Indians in the reservation.

The surveyor-general in my own State says that it will require $100,000 to make the necessary surveys in those reservations for the benefit of actual settlers, men who desire to go there and make homes, and yet the gentleman from Indiana quibbles at an increase of but $100,000, when according to the statement of the Surveyor-General, and I have no doubt it is true, for he is a man above reproach, it will require $100,000 at least to carry out what ought to be done in the State of Minnesota alone.

Mr. HOLMAN. Just a word, Mr. Chairman. My friend seems to think that these are all worthless lands that have been surveyed, but I find that some of them have been disposed of. At the end of the fiscal year 1891 the lands surveyed and undisposed of amounted to 153,981,307 acres, while in 1892 the amount was only 150,338,352 acres. So it appears that some of those surveyed lands have been disposed of during the past year. But gentlemen can see readily that we have got to put a stop to these unnecessary surveys. Nobody pretends that there is any 150,000,000 of acres of cultivable public lands properly surveyed and undisposed of——

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Were not those lands surveyed under the deposit system in years gone by?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes; some of them were. They have been surveyed through successive years under all administrations.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Those lands were surveyed under the deposit system, which does not apply now. We have to have the cold, silent cash now in order to get them surveyed.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is true. But, Mr. Chairman, I heard no clamor in former years when we reduced this item $50,000 and then to $100,000. The Senate agreed to those reductions.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Does the gentleman desire the committee to understand that when the Commissioner of the General Land Office says that $800,000 is required to make surveys of lands upon which actual settlers now exist, the gentleman himself is in favor of stopping the settlement of these lands by cutting down the appropriation?

Mr. HOLMAN. No, sir; but I am in favor of appropriating a sum of money which will be honestly spent, and just so long as you appropriate large sums for the survey of these lands at high prices, just so long will these frauds continue, no matter what party is in power. But when you appropriate a modest sum, about the amount necessary to survey the lands required for actual settlement, then you will promote purity in the administration of that branch of the service, and I propose this amendment not entirely in the interest of economy as in the interest of common honesty.

Mr. PICKLER. Does not the gentleman have faith in the incoming Administration? [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. Human nature is wonderfully alike everywhere [laughter], and I do not wish to lead anybody into temptation. [Laughter.]

The question was taken on the amendment of Mr. WILSON of Washington, and the Chairman declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I ask for a division.

The committee divided, and there were—ayes 54, noes 68.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Washington [Mr. WILSON] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 48, noes 75.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Is there a quorum, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. No quorum has voted.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I insist upon a quorum.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 62, noes 105.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Page 47, line 2, before the word "thousand," strike out "five" and insert "ten."

Mr. BRODERICK. This paragraph provides for the survey and sale of the above-named military reservation and for the pay of custodian. There are a number of these reservations in the hands of custodians, and if the appropriations in this bill are not increased they will be paid only from $30 to $40 a month. These custodians are responsible for a large amount of property and they have to devote the whole of their time to the care and protection of it. I shall follow this amendment with another, providing that they shall be paid $60 a month, which I think is a small enough amount. I trust this House will not vote that one who is intrusted with and responsible for this amount of property shall receive less than $60 per month.

The question was taken; and the amendment was rejected—ayes 26, noes 91.

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read as follows:

Page 47, after the word "dollars," in line 2, add: "Provided that there shall be paid to each custodian of a military reservation the sum of $60 per month."

The question was taken; and the amendment was rejected—ayes 26, noes 88.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read as follows: Amend by adding after line 21, page 48, the following:

That section 1 of an act entitled "An act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, be, and hereby is, amended by adding the following words to the fourth proviso thereof:

"And provided further, That if trees, seeds, or cuttings were in good faith planted as provided by law and the same and the land upon which so planted were thereafter in good faith cultivated as provided by law for at least eight years at the date of this act by a person qualified to make entry and who has a subsisting entry under the timber-culture laws, final proof may be made without regard to the number of trees that may have been then growing on the land."

SEC. 2. That all persons who were residents of the State or Territory in which the land is situated at the time of entry shall be entitled to the provisions of this act.

Provided further, That there be added to section 7 of "An act to repeal the timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, the following proviso:

Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed to apply in its provisions to or affect any case where a contest was pending in the Land Department prior to the date of the passage of said act, or to in any manner impair rights which had been acquired under the preemption, desert land, or timber-culture laws prior to March 3, 1891.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise for the purpose of reserving a point of order on the amendment, my object being that this matter may be distinctly understood by the Committee of the Whole, so that there may be no claim hereafter that any mistake was made. I hope that my friend from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER] will make an explanation of the matter, the point of order being reserved.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Chairman, as I understand, the gentleman from Indiana has no objection to this amendment. In support of it I wish to say in the first place that it does not increase the appropriation. This question was before the House some time ago and was discussed for some time. The last provision contained in the amendment is a proposition which came from the gentleman from Indiana and was adopted at that time. The first provision when it was heretofore under consideration applied to nonresidents of these States and Territories as well as residents. The House upon consideration of the matter thought that the provision ought to be restricted to residents of the States or Territories in which the claims are situated. The matter is now presented in that form.

Mr. Chairman, if there is any bill or any amendment of substantial merit which will come before the House during this session of Congress, this is such a proposition. Let me explain it briefly. When the division of the Territory of Dakota into the States of North and South Dakota was made, it was found that quite a number of settlers living in North Dakota had taken tree claims in what is now South Dakota, and vice versa. Now, in the case of a man living in North Dakota who has a tree claim a mile across the line in South Dakota, that claim having been taken before the Territory was divided into two States, the effect of the present law of Congress is that at the end of thirteen years, unless that man has 675 trees upon every acre of land, he absolutely loses the land. There is no law under which he can make proof, hence absolute confiscation takes place.

Now, this amendment, in the part in which I am specially interested, provides that when the settler (not the nonresident) comes to prove up his claim at the end of thirteen years, if he has only 500 trees, or 400 trees, or 300 trees, he may still prove up his claim. In other words, if after eight years it appears that he has assiduously and in good faith taken care of his trees and complied with the law, being a resident as here provided, and these lands being in a semiarid belt, where trees are frequently destroyed by drought or by freezing, the effect of this amendment is to say to the actual settler, "If at the end of thirteen years you fail to have 675 trees per acre you may still go on and prove up your claim, if you have otherwise complied with the law."

Now, gentlemen, this is the whole effect of the amendment which I have offered. It is in the interest of bona fide settlers. It is on the side of right and justice. These men have worked faithfully, they have tried to raise trees, and nearly all of them have a greater or less number of trees upon their claims, but numbers of them have not the required number of 675 to the acre.

Mr. HERMANN. Is the amendment confined in its operation to the Dakotas?

Mr. PICKLER. No, sir; it is general in its operation. It will apply to actual settlers in some four or five of the States or Territories wherever three claims exist; but there is a comparatively small amount involved, basing my judgment upon an estimate I have received from the Land Office. But the persons in whose behalf the amendment is offered are deserving citizens. I desire to state seven reasons why this provision should be adopted.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the gentleman from South Dakota will be allowed to speak a little longer, the subject is very interesting.

There was no objection.

Mr. PICKLER. In the first place this amendment should pass, because it is in the interest of the settler who has in good faith complied with the law and who has failed to raise the full number of trees on account of drought and freezing.

Second. He can not have the benefit of the law unless he has complied with it for at least eight years. The amendment does not operate in favor of any man who has not been striving faithfully for eight years to raise trees in compliance with the law.

Third. It costs the Government nothing.

Fourth. The settler in North Dakota whose timber-culture claim is in South Dakota, or vice versa, if he has failed to raise 675 trees to the acre, loses absolutely his land, as the law now is, at the end of thirteen years.

Yesterday I had a letter from a man living at Huron, S. Dak., saying, in effect, "My thirteen years will expire during this year; I have faithfully tried to comply with the law; but I have not quite the required number of trees. I pray that such a law may be passed as will save to me this land upon which I have expended so much money." Allow me to say further that any man who has complied for eight years with the timber-culture law has in a great many instances expended more in time and labor than the amount which the land would sell for to-day.

Mark this, gentlemen: It is the report of the Committee on the Public Lands of the House; it is recommended by the Commissioner of the General Land Office; it is recommended by the Secretary of the Interior, and there is a unanimous report of the Senate committee on a similar bill, which bill is now on the Senate Calendar.

Mr. Chairman, I ask the adoption of this amendment in all fairness and justice to these Western settlers. It takes no money from the public Treasury. It is fair, just, equitable, and right; and is a proposition on the side of humanity. These poor men and women, or many of them, will lose their lands absolutely unless this privilege is granted them.

Mr. KEM. I would like to have the amendment again reported.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope my friend will not insist on having the amendment read until I can be heard for a moment.

Mr. PICKLER. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to say a word only.

The matter involved, Mr. Chairman, in this amendment contains two distinct propositions, both of which are of very considerable interest and importance; and while I propose or think I ought to withdraw the point of order, so as to get a vote on the proposition directly, I reserved it for the purpose of having an opportunity to get an explanation in advance as to the meaning of the amendment.

Now, the act of March 3, 1891, repealing the timber-culture law, together with other important legislation, is well known, and also the manner in which it passed. This is a provision changing that law, which requires that the persons who have taken up these lands shall comply with the law during a period of eight years—that is the settlers on the timber-culture lands—that they shall plant a given number of trees, and if, at the expiration of eight years, they have accomplished what the law requires in that regard, they may prove up and get their titles. Now, the provision of the pending amendment is this:

And provided further, That if trees, seeds, or cuttings were in good faith planted as provided by law and the same and the land upon which so planted were thereafter in good faith cultivated as provided by law for at least eight years at the date of this act by a person qualified to make entry and who has a subsisting entry under the timber-culture laws, final proof may be made without regard to the number of trees that may have been then growing on the land.

The change, it will be seen, is this: The act of 1891 required distinct compliance with the law, and then the settler acquired title by the payment of, I think certain fees, amounting to about $1.25 an acre; that is, a person qualified to make a settlement could prove up and get his title, if he had a certain number of trees growing on each acre.

Mr. PICKLER. But a nonresident could not do even that.

Mr. HOLMAN. A nonresident could not do that. This is a change of the law to the extent of providing that if the trees, seeds, or cuttings are planted, in good faith, and after eight years of cultivating the lands, in good faith, whether the number of trees then growing upon the land is the number required by the law or not, the party may get his title on compliance with the other provisions relating to it.

Now, the other clause, I hope, will be understood clearly also before the vote is taken. It is proposed to add to section 7 of the act of 1891 the following provision:

Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed to apply in its provisions to or effect any case where a contest was pending in the Land Department prior to the passage of said act, or to in any manner impair rights which had been acquired under the preemption, desert-land, or timber-culture laws prior to March 3, 1891.

I was a member of the committee of conference when that act was passed, but did not suppose that the provision referred to in section 7 could be so construed as to cut off appeals then pending. It has been interpreted, however, to apply to appeals then pending; but of course it should not be so applied.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana if he believes that the amendment ought to be adopted?

Mr. HOLMAN. The last provision I have read?

Mr. SAYERS. I mean the whole amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. The last provision is clearly right, for it corrects a misapprehension of the original act, and I think it ought to be corrected. That bill was prepared on the 3d, or agreed to on the 3d day of March, 1891, and there was no understanding, at least there was no understanding on my part, and that is true of some other gentlemen with whom I talked on the conference, that appeals then pending would be impaired. We always reserve existing rights. That provision of the amendment is therefore manifestly correct.

As to the other provision gentlemen can understand that as well as I. As the law now stands the timber-culture entryman must plant his seed or shrubs and raise a given number of trees by proper cultivation, and that number of trees shall be on the land——

Mr. PICKLER (interrupting). Absolutely that number.

Mr. HOLMAN. Absolutely, some six or seven hundred on each acre at the time the eight years expired. Now that is the present law. The law must have been complied with, and the given number of trees secured, and then he can take title. Now that provision was amended somewhat by this act of 1891, and if he had cultivated his land in good faith and produced certain results within four years, I believe then he was entitled to enter the land at $1.25 an acre.

Mr. PICKLER. Provided he was a resident.

Mr. HOLMAN. Provided he was a resident. Now this provides that if he planted his seed or trees——

Mr. PICKLER. If he complied with the old law exactly——

Mr. HOLMAN. If he complied with the law for eight years, and yet failed to produce trees, he should still be entitled to his patents without paying anything.

Mr. SAYERS. This amendment does not do away with the necessity for actual residence, does it?

Mr. PICKLER. There is no residence required on a tree claim. It does not change that at all.

Mr. HOLMAN. As I understand, it does not change the law in that particular.

Mr. PICKLER. Does not the gentleman think this is fair to the settlers who have in good faith complied with the law; does he think it anything more than fair?

Mr. HOLMAN. I have tried to explain my views, so that I think they are distinctly understood by the committee.

Mr. PICKLER. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] does not object to it?

Mr. KEM. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], having read the proposed amendment, it is not necessary to have it read again; but I desire to offer a few remarks pertaining thereto before action is taken upon the amendment. This is the same bill that was before this body for action in the last session, and it was acted upon by this body and rejected after having been amended by striking out the section pertaining to desert lands. I went before my people in the last campaign and the fight against me in my district was made principally upon my opposition to this bill.

A large number of my constituents are individuals who are deeply interested in the provisions of this bill. The bill as it then came up affected the desert-land laws as they now are, but in the action of the House that was stricken out. The fight was made against me in the last campaign, as I have already stated, because I opposed the bill. I opposed it first because it was not fair, for the reason that it did not give the actual settler in my district an opportunity to receive the benefits granted under the law to nonresidents. In other words, it discriminates against actual settlers and in favor of speculators.

I desire to call the attention of the committee at this time specially to the first clause of the proposed amendment, which provides that in order for the settler to receive the benefits of this law he must have planted and cultivated his trees and his land for a period of eight years at the date of the act—at the time of its passage. Now, suppose we should pass this amendment and this bill should become a law, what would be the result? Go into the western end of my district and you will find that a majority of the settlers of that country are men who ought to be entitled to the benefits of this law, but who will be cut out under this provision, because they filed on their tree claims at a later period than eight years ago, and they must have filed eight years prior to its passage in order to be benefited by the act.

Now, I want to say that as the clause relating to the desert-land laws was eliminated from the original bill, if the gentleman will amend this so that these men, notwithstanding they may have filed on their claims less than eight years ago, may be entitled to its benefits, I will have no objection to its becoming a law. But I want to say to the committee that I will fight this proposition in its present form, that I must do it in the interest of my constituents, the men and women who are the ones that have developed Nebraska and are justly entitled to the benefits of the act, but who, if it is passed in its present form, will be cut out entirely.

What are the facts relative to this matter? We find in going back to the settlement of Western Nebraska that the first claims were filed prior to eight years ago by nonresidents; in other words, that the country was opened to settlement just prior to that period. The first rush into the country was by these nonresidents, who filed upon timber claims because they were not compelled to live upon them or to remain on the land. Afterward came the actual settlers, the men and the women who by their industry, their frugality, and their labor have developed that country and made it what it is.

They have lived there upon their claims, and have, as I said before, made the country what it is; but because they filed at a period a little later than eight years ago—say seven or seven and a half years ago—they are cut out from receiving the benefits of this act, while the men who went in there and filed upon tree claims a year prior to that, who were not residents then, have not been since, and never intend to be, can come in and acquire title to these lands.

I want to say to the House that that is the objection which I have to offer to its consideration, and I hope the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER] will agree to an amendment to it.

Mr. PICKLER. What is the amendment?

Mr. KEM. The amendment which I offer is to provide that a settler who has complied with the law for the period of eight years, not at the date of this act, but for a period of eight years, regardless of the act, shall have the benefits of the act.

Mr. PICKLER. I will gladly accept that, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. KEM. The House will very readily see what effect this will have if passed in its present shape. Therefore, I ask to have this proviso put in the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER] that the following words be stricken out:

That all persons who are residents of the State or Territory in which the land is situated at the time of entry shall be entitled to the provisions of this act.

I think those words go a little further than we ought to go.

Mr. PICKLER. I have no objection to that.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then I move to strike out those words.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Chairman, I have had no desire to take any part in this debate, and only do so for the purpose of correcting what I believe to be a misstatement made by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER]. This measure, in some form or other, has been before this House repeatedly. Upon a former occasion I gave reasons which seemed to me good for its defeat. I entertain the same views now. I happen to be one of the members of the Committee on Public Lands, and the statement to the effect that this measure has the approval of all the members of that committee is incorrect. I never approved it, as one of the members. There are two gentlemen sitting before me, also members of the committee, who tell me that they are opposed to this measure. I do not wish to take the time of the House in its discussion.

Mr. PICKLER. There was no minority report.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Not that I know of, but this bill has appeared so often and in so many forms that the man who would undertake to write minority reports upon it would be kept tolorably busy. The real question is whether or not the Government shall donate these lands to these people, or whether they shall be left to the contract which they made. They made a contract with the Government, under the law, by which they were to do certain things, in consideration for which they were to obtain the lands. The simple question now is, whether the Government will release them from the performance of the contract on their part, and take some loose, shadowy, and probably incorrect proof of their attempt, intention, or purpose to comply with the law, and then grant them the land. I am opposed to doing it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. KEM. I want to move to strike out of the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota the words "at the date of this act."

Mr. PICKLER. I have no objection to that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska proposes to amend the amendment of the gentleman from South Dakota by striking out the words, commencing at line 10, "at the date of this act."

Mr. PICKLER. I accept that amendment, Mr. Chairman.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment of the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to have struck out the following words, which are not necessary in the bill, and may not produce good results:

That all persons who are residents of the State or Territory in which the land is situated at the time of entry shall be entitled to the provisions of this act.

That seems to come rather in conflict with the act of 1891; and I move to strike out those words.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows;

That all persons who are residents of the State or Territory in which the land is situated at the time of entry shall be entitled to the provisions of this act.

Mr. PICKLER. I accept that. With the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. KEM] and this one by the gentleman from Indiana the bill will be exactly as I first introduced it, and is just and fair to all timber-culture claimants wherever residing.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to be informed of the status of this amendment. The amendment just adopted was to strike out certain words from the substitute by striking out of lines 10 and 11, the words, "at the date of this act."

Mr. PICKLER. And I accepted that.

The CHAIRMAN. That amendment has been agreed to.

Mr. PICKLER. The gentleman from Indiana now proposes to strike out certain other words.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana will send up his amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let the Clerk read the words in italics.

The Clerk read as follows:

That all persons who are residents of the State or Territory in which the land is situated at the time of the entry shall be entitled to the provisions of this act.

Mr. PICKLER. Question on the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. My motion is to strike out those words.

Mr. PICKLER. Which amendment I accept.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment of Mr. PICKLER as amended was then adopted.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out "twenty thousand dollars" in line 24, page 45, and in line 1, page 46, and insert "forty thousand dollars."

Mr. HOLMAN. I reserve the point of order on that amendment.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to increase the compensation proposed for the inspectors of surveys, and in order that the object and necessity of the amendment may be better understood by the House, I will read the portion of the bill to which it applies:

And of the sum hereby appropriated not exceeding $20,000 may be expended for examination of public surveys in the several surveying districts in order to test the accuracy of the work in the field, and to prevent payment for fraudulent and imperfect surveys returned by deputy surveyors and for examinations of surveys heretofore made and reported to be defective or fraudulent; and inspecting mineral deposits, coal fields, and timber districts, and for making such other surveys or examinations as may be required for identification of lands for purposes of evidence in any suit or proceeding in behalf of the United States.

Now, it will be observed that the sum of $20,000 only is provided in the bill for these purposes, and that that amount is to be deducted from the $100,000 which has just been voted for the public surveys.

Mr. HOLMAN. What amount does the gentleman propose to make it?

Mr. HERMANN. Forty thousand dollars; an increase of only $20,000 above the amount proposed by the committee. The Commissioner recommends $75,000, and I had $75,000 in my amendment until the committee awhile ago voted $100,000 instead of $200,000, whereupon I reduced the amount from $75,000 to $40,000, hoping and believing that that would meet the good judgment of the committee.

I desire to say this further, that if there is anything of importance connected with public surveys, it is this matter of the proper inspection of the surveys in the field. It is well known that for years and years great frauds have been committed, and also many mistakes, in these surveys—frauds and mistakes that have gone on down in the titles which have been given to the assignees under the public-land laws and have resulted in the greatest confusion. It is very necessary that this work shall be carefully inspected by experts who are competent to examine and supervise the surveys made by the contractors. In that way we may hope to get accurate surveys, but in no other way.

Now, I ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] in charge of this bill whether he candidly believes that $20,000 will suffice to pay for the inspection of the surveys made over the vast body of the public lands contracted for in the last two years under the large appropriation by Congress, over half a million dollars, and also to pay for supervising the surveys which will be made under the sum of $100,000 appropriated in this bill? I submit that question to the gentleman's usual good judgment, as well as to his candor as a legislator. I believe the gentleman will accept my amendment, which is merely a small increase over the amount which his committee reports.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, this item does not enter into the matter of the surveys, nor does it benefit the settlers at all; it is intended simply as a protection to the Government.

Mr. HERMANN. Yes, and also to the people who derive titles from the Government. They also are entitled to protection.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suppose there has been a vast amount of fraudulent surveying.

Mr. HERMANN. There has.

Mr. HOLMAN. And that there have been a great many fraudulent approvals in cases where no surveys have been made at all. But I do not think that such a sum as the gentleman suggests is required now for this purpose.

Mr. HERMANN. I have it from the officials of the General Land Office that probably one-half of the surveys made under the large appropriation made last year by Congress have yet to be inspected, and when the gentleman adds to those the surveys to be made under the $80,000 appropriated here, because this $20,000 is to be deducted from the $100,000 which we have just voted for the surveys, I think he will undoubtedly perceive how grossly inadequate this amount in the bill, $20,000, is.

Mr. HOLMAN. Well, I suggest that we make the amount $30,000.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Do I understand that if we increase the amount for inspecting and examining the surveys made in the field to $30,000 the additional $10,000 is to be deducted from the amount appropriated to make surveys?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir; from the $100,000.

Mr. HERMANN. Well, Mr. Chairman, I will say this. I have the utmost confidence that in another branch of this Congress the amount in this bill for surveys (which will now be $70,000) will be increased so as to meet the demands of the public service, and therefore I agree to the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana, $30,000 for the inspection of surveys. I will take what I can get, even if it is not what I desire. I modify my amendment so as to conform to the suggestion of the gentleman from Indiana; I move to strike out "twenty thousand" and insert "thirty thousand."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOSEPH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Page 47, line 2, after the word "dollars," insert the following: "For the survey of private land claims approved by the United States Court of Private Land Claims in the Territory of New Mexico and Arizona, $40,000."

Mr. DINGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on that amendment.

Mr. JOSEPH. This is in pursuance of existing law. Mr. Chairman, in connection with the amendment, I desire to have read a communication addressed to me by the Court of Private Land Claims.

The communication was read as follows:

UNITED STATES COURT OF PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS,
Santa Fe, N. Mex., December 10, 1892.

SIR: The whole number of causes brought in this court up to this date is fifty-three; of them forty-eight involve lands in this Territory, and our information is that many additional causes will be instituted between this and March 4, 1893. It is safe to say that causes involving more than 2,000,000 acres will have made such progress that surveys ought to be made during the next fiscal year. In our judgment not less than $40,000 ought to be appropriated to enable the surveyor-general to make these surveys.

Very respectfully,

JOSEPH R. REED,
Chief Justice.
WILBUR F. STONE,
Associate Justice.
THOMAS C. FULLER,
Associate Justice.
H. C. SLUSS,
Associate Justice.
W. W. MURRAY,
Associate Justice.

HON. ANTONIO JOSEPH,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. JOSEPH. Mr. Chairman, the object of this amendment is to carry out the provisions of the act of the Fifty-first Congress' creating what is commonly known as the United States Private Land Court. Before the claims which have been approved by that court can be confirmed and go to patent, it is necessary that the surveys be made. The act to which I have referred provides that the court shall approve the surveys, hence the urgent necessity that Congress should appropriate sufficient money to pay for these surveys as provided by section 10 of the act. I hope that the amendment will be agreed to, and that Congress will thus provide the means for carrying out the provisions of the law, which otherwise will be nugatory and inoperative.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, on the 21st of December last—only a month ago—the Commissioner of the General Land Office reported to the Committee on Appropriations, as follows:

No surveys under confirmations of the court have so far been reported to this office.

Mr. JOSEPH. There can not be any surveys until this money is appropriated to pay for them.

Mr. HOLMAN (continuing to read):

This bureau has no official knowledge as to any claim or claims so far confirmed by said court.

This is the statement made by the Land Office only a month ago.

Mr. JOSEPH. But the court can not confirm any of these claims until they are surveyed.

Mr. HOLMAN. But they are required to report the confirmations to the proper department at Washington.

Mr. JOSEPH. If the gentleman will read section 10 of the law he will see that a survey must be ordered before a decree of confirmation can be issued by the court. There can be no survey of the boundaries of these claims until Congress provides the means of paying for such surveys.

Mr. HOLMAN. Well, the provision of the law is that the claimants of these lands shall pay one-half of the cost of the survey, while the Government pays the other half. I think it ought have been provided that the whole expense of the survey should be paid by the claimants. But I believe that, in view of the statement of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, $40,000 will cover the whole expense of these surveys; therefore I suggest that this amendment, which proposes to fix the amount to be paid by the Government, should appropriate $20,000 instead of $40,000.

Mr. JOSEPH. I accept the gentleman's suggestion and modify my amendment by striking out "$40,000" and inserting "$20,000."

Mr. HOLMAN. This amendment ought to come in as a separate paragraph, not as an addition to the one now pending.

The amendment of Mr. JOSEPH as modified was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For topographic surveys in various portions of the United States, $200,000; $60,000 of which shall be expended west of the ninety-seventh meridian in the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, and the Territory of Oklahoma, and at least one-half of the remainder shall be expended west of the one hundred and third meridian.

Mr. SAYERS and Mr. LONG addressed the Chair.

Mr. SAYERS. I move to amend the paragraph just read by inserting after the word "Kansas" the word "Texas."

A MEMBER. What is the reason for that?

Mr. SAYERS. Because we are now excluded altogether from this survey.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will now read the amendment sent to the desk by the other gentleman from Texas [Mr. LONG].

Mr. LONG. The amendment I had proposed to offer is the same which my colleague [Mr. SAYERS] has just offered and which has been adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

In all, $389,100.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to amend by adding after the paragraph just read the following:

That the unexpended balances of appropriations made for the fiscal year 1891 for the Geological Survey may be applied to the liquidation of outstanding liabilities on account of any of said appropriations for said fiscal year.

This amendment is recommended by the Secretary of the Interior. It simply provides for the use of certain unexpended balances.

I ask that two letters on this subject may be published in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. In the absence of objection the letters referred to by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] will be published.

The letters are as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 25, 1893.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith a communication from the Director of the Geological Survey showing certain unexpended balances in appropriations for the Geological Survey for the fiscal year 1891, and asking that he be granted authority to use said balances in the liquidation of outstanding liabilities under other appropriations named.

I repectfully request that you cause an amendment to be made to one of the pending appropriation bills embodying the Director's request.

Very respectfully,

JOHN W. NOBLE, Secretary.

Hon. W. S. HOLMAN,
Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations,
House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES GEOLOGICAL SURVEY,
Washington, D. C., January 23, 1893.

SIR: I have the honor to report that there exists an unexpended balance pertaining to the appropriation for the Geological Survey for the year 1890–1891 on account of the following items:

Chemistry	$30.51
Illustrations	613.49
Mineral Resources	445.34
Library	296.28
Irrigation	3,491.37
Total	4,876.99

There are certain outstanding liabilities pertaining to the appropriation for the Geological Survey for the year named on account of items for topography and paleontology. I have the honor to recommend that Congress be requested to grant authority to expend so much of the above residue of appropriations as may be necessary to liquidate these liabilities on items of topography and paleontology.

I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

J. W. POWELL, Director.

The honorable the SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. HOLMAN, it was agreed to.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations why these items are omitted from the appropriations for this service: "Engraving illustrations for the Director's report, $5,000; engraving illustrations for monographs, $10,000; printing and binding monographs, $20,000." These seem to be omitted from the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. That matter is under the Public Printer, and the arrangement of this appropriation is just according to the suggestion of the Director of the Survey.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Are these items appropriated for under the Public Printer?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. If so I have no further question. I saw they were omitted here, and I knew that these sums had heretofore been appropriated.

Mr. SAYERS. They will be found on page 88 of the bill.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to place in the RECORD the increase in the appropriations for the last three years for this service, and I do it in view of the fact that the statement has been made that while there have been some slight reductions made in the amounts appropriated for some of the soldiers' homes, and reductions made in the appropriations for the support of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, there have been none in this branch of the service.

Now, the appropriations for 1892 for the Geological Survey were $596,400; for the present year $376,100, or a reduction of more than $200,000, a heavier reduction than for any corresponding Bureau of the Government; and the appropriations recommended by the present bill are substantially the same as those for the current year, and yet the value of the geological surveys and the value of the services of Maj. Powell, the Director of those surveys, are acknowledged and appreciated by all, but we have not the money for full appropriation. I withdraw the pro forma amendment if it is pending.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

COLUMBIA INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

Current Expenses of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb: For support of the institution, including salaries and incidental expenses, for books and illustrative apparatus, and for general repairs and improvements, $50,500, $3,000 of which to be expended in the employment of instructors of articulation.

For completion of inclosure of grounds, $1,000.

Mr. COGSWELL. Mr. Chairman, under the head of current expenses of the Columbian Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, I desire to move to strike out the word "fifty" and insert the words "fifty-two."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 16, on page 50, strike out "fifty" and insert "fifty-two;" so that it will read "$52,500," etc.

Mr. COGSWELL. Mr. Chairman, I make the motion for this reason: The members of Congress, as the law provides, have the right to send to this institution, under certain conditions, pupils who are among their own constituents. This right has been availed of by members to such an extent that the number of pupils in that institution has been increased thirty-nine this year. This addition has necessarily increased the expenses of the establishment. But that institution is so carefully administered that the officer in charge only asks an increase of $2,000 over the amount heretofore allowed.

This increase of $2,000, occasioned by the added pupils which you gentlemen have sent to that institution from the various States, has been denied by the Committee on Appropriations, and my amendment simply proposes to allow this small increase so as to make provision for these additional pupils. I hope the committee will agree to the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. I believe the law provides that sixty pupils may be sent from the different States to this institution, not more than two from any one State; so that members of Congress have not much patronage there.

Mr. COGSWELL. Does the gentleman deny my statement that thirty-nine additional pupils have been recently added?

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, no; but I am putting the question to my friend whether or not it is the law that the Government supports sixty pupils at that institution, not to exceed two from any one State? Is that not the law? Has the law been modified or changed in any particular?

Mr. COGSWELL. It has been modified or changed to the extent of adding to the number of pupils thirty-nine new ones, and yet you have not given a single dollar increase over what you gave before they were admitted.

Mr. HOLMAN. But then we have sixty pupils there all the time—the same number that is authorized by law.

Mr. COGSWELL. I do not know what number you had before or what number you have now, but I do know that the statement is made by Dr. Gallaudet that he has thirty-nine pupils more than he had before, and I say that you have not given a dollar of increase to enable the institution to support that additional number of pupils.

Mr. HOLMAN. I know. That I suppose is true. I have no doubt that is the truth.

Mr. COGSWELL. If that is true, that makes out my case.

Mr. HOLMAN. We have appropriated heretofore, I presume, on the basis of sixty pupils. This simply changes the limit. The item is small, and I have so much respect for the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COGSWELL] that I would not like to make war upon his little item. Of course I shall not make any objection.

Mr. COGSWELL. All right, if the gentleman accepts it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DINGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of making a statement with regard to this institution that it may perhaps be desirable to make.

The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] and myself have been appointed by the Speaker members of the Board of Directors of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb in this city, and there are associated with us Senators HAWLEY and DAWES, Hon. Randolph Tucker, Hon. William E. Niblack, Rev. Dr. Sunderland, and others.

This institution was established in 1857, through the munificence of the Hon. Amos Kendall, formerly Postmaster-General, who made a donation for that purpose of a certain amount of land and a certain amount of money. Immediately after the establishment of the institution Congress began to make appropriations for the maintenance of it with reference to instruction for the deaf and dumb in this District. That went on until 1864, when by act of Congress there was added to the institution a collegiate department, and it became the only collegiate institution in the United States for the instruction of the deaf and dumb, and as such it received students from nearly all the State institutions for the deaf and dumb in the country.

In 1872, by act of Congress, this institution was assumed by the General Government, and all its property was conveyed to the United States in trust, which property it holds to-day; and an appropriation was made at that time for the purchase of 80 acres of land in addition. The institution now has something over 100 acres of land, and probably not half of that land is required for the purposes of the institution. Probably 50 acres, or half of this land, could be sold to-day for $700,000; and it is estimated that within five years that portion of the land belonging to this institution which is held by the United States, and which can be disposed of, will be worth in the neighborhood of a million dollars.

Now, the time will come within a very few years when Congress should authorize the sale of at least 50 acres of this land, and invest the proceeds for the benefit of the institution. If there shall be realized from the sale of this land, within five years, a million dollars, which I believe will be the fact, the interest on that sum will in large part maintain this institution thereafter. It is well, therefore, that we should keep in mind this situation, and the value of this property which the Government holds in trust, which can be used by and by in the way that I have indicated, for the future support of the institution.

Mr. BLOUNT. Why not direct the sale now?

Mr. DINGLEY. My own judgment is that the land is increasing in value so rapidly that it is advisable for the United States to retain it for several years longer. Judging from the sales of land in that vicinity within the past year, indicating a rapidly increasing market value, within from three to five years the time may arrive when the land can be sold to the highest advantage.

Mr. BLOUNT. I will venture to say that the disposition of it will not be made according to the business method which my friend has suggested.

Mr. DINGLEY. It will be the fault of Congress if it is not managed in this way. It will be the fault of Congress if within five years there is not a sale of a sufficient amount of this land upon such terms as to furnish a fund that will go far to support this institution in future years.

And I might add in this connection, as my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. COGSWELL] has referred to this point, that from time to time Congress has authorized the Secretary of the Interior—not members of Congress—to appoint from the several States, not to exceed three from each State, indigent deaf and dumb persons to become students in this institution.

Mr. COGSWELL. But they are appointed upon our recommendation.

Mr. DINGLEY. That is true. The Secretary of the Interior defers to the recommendation of members of Congress; and when these indigent deaf mutes are appointed, not being able to support themselves, not only is the tuition fee remitted in all cases, but the board also, and in a few cases even the clothing, have been supplied where the beneficiaries were extremely indigent.

I wish to say in this connection, and it is but appropriate that I should do so as your representative in the management of this institution, that I am satisfied by an examination of its methods of business and its curriculum and an inspection of the work it is doing, that there probably is not an institution under the patronage of the Government more deserving and accomplishing more in promoting the interests of a large and deserving class than this collegiate institution for the deaf and dumb. It should be borne in mind that the States support schools simply for the primary education of deaf mutes. This institution, while it has a primary department for deaf mutes in this District, is mainly a collegiate institution, receiving students from the several State institutions for the deaf and dumb. I think there are about seventy students in the collegiate department.

Mr. BRYAN. What would be the objection to renting this land for a long period of time, so that the income could inure to the benefit of this institution?

Mr. DINGLEY. That is a matter which could be taken into consideration. The view of the directors, after some inquiry into the matter, has been that it is undesirable to sell this land at present, as within a few years the value of the land in that locality has been increasing rapidly, and it is believed that the increase in value is so large that it is better that the Government should retain the land at present.

Mr. BRYAN. Some of the States have tried renting their school lands instead of selling them, and have found it worked to great advantage.

Mr. BERGEN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Maine how many students are in the primary department?

Mr. DINGLEY. There are about fifty students in the primary department, mainly from the District of Columbia, although I believe that one or two States have sent about fifteen primary pupils to this institution, paying for their instruction. Under the direction of President Edward N. Gallaudet, who has been at the head of this institution since it was established in 1857, this college, the only collegiate institution for deaf mutes in this country, has attained a rank and done a work which reflects credit on the faculty and the nation.

The Clerk read as follows:

Lighting the Executive Mansion and public grounds: For gas, pay of lamplighters, gas-fitters, and laborers; purchase, erection, and repair of lamps and lamp-posts; purchase of matches, and for repairs of all kinds; fuel and lights for office, office stables, watchmen's lodges, and for the greenhouses at the nursery, $14,000: Provided, That for each 6-foot burner not connected with a meter in the lamps on the public grounds no more than $21.50 shall be paid per lamp for gas, including lighting, cleaning, and keeping in repair the lamps, under any expenditure provided for in this act; and said lamps shall burn not less than three thousand hours per annum; and authority is hereby given to substitute other illuminating material for the same or less price, and to use so much of the sum hereby appropriated as may be necessary for that purpose: Provided, That before any expenditures are made from the appropriations herein provided for, the contracting gas company shall equip each lamp with a self-regulating burner and tip, so combined and adjusted as to secure under all ordinary variations of pressure and density a consumption of 6 cubic feet of gas per hour.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment. In line 11, I move to strike out the words "twenty-one" and insert the word "fifteen."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 11, strike out the words "twenty-one" and insert the word "fifteen."

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Now, Mr. Chairman, my reason for doing this is that I desire some reform in the kind of gas that is supplied to the residents of this District, including the Government. The gas furnished in this city, according to my best observation and information—and I have gathered considerable information on the subject, and have had the benefit of the observations of a great number of people here—is about worth 75 cents a thousand feet, or less.

Mr. DICKERSON. Much less.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. It is not worth more than half as much as we are paying for it, and I want first to begin with those items in which the Government is directly interested, and then I want to see legislation enacted which will permit the people of this District to receive value for the money they pay to the gas company. I have, as I said, some experience and observation in regard to this gas, and I have observed one thing, and the people who live in the District state it also, and that is that the gas is poorer in quality when Congress is not in session than when it is in session.

Mr. DICKERSON. I do not know how it could be.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. There seems to be something in the assembling of Congress which causes this corporation to provide better lighting than they did before.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Maybe it is the additional gas furnished by Congressmen. [Laughter.]

Mr. OUTHWAITE. It is claimed that they furnish as much gas as at other times, but the flame is not so good.

Mr. DICKERSON. What is the amendment you propose?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. To pay them $15.50 instead of $20.50 a post.

Mr. DICKERSON. Making it less than they get now. You can get good gas for 90 cents.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. We are paying $1.10.

Mr. DICKERSON. The gas now furnished is not worth more than 15 cents a thousand.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. If you desire to offer an amendment to my amendment you can do so.

The amendment of Mr. OUTHWAITE was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Military posts: For the construction of buildings at and the enlargement of such military posts as, in the judgment of the Secretary of War, may be necessary, $200,000.

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 58, line 10, strike out the word "two," and insert the word "five."

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Chairman, it has been the policy of the Government for a number of years to abandon military posts that are unnecessary and to improve those that are necessary. In pursuance of this policy Congress has been appropriating money from year to year, and the Government has entered upon improvements of twenty-three or twenty-four military posts. The improvements are commenced in many instances, and are valuable and necessary improvements.

Now, the proposition is to reduce the appropriation to $200,000. If this is done the Government will be unable to carry out the improvements that are already commenced; and in many cases the Government will lose by pursuing that policy. At Fort Leavenworth, in the State I represent in part, valuable improvements have been entered upon, and it will require a greater sum than can be given under the committee appropriation to complete the same. The appropriation made at the last session was $400,000, and the Secretary of War has recommended that a larger appropriation be made this session. This proposed amendment provides less than the Department has said was necessary to have this year. I hope the amendment will prevail.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Chairman, it seems that the amount of the appropriation mentioned here ought to be increased. These works have already been commenced under the present Administration, and it is false economy to appropriate less money than is necessary to carry on the work.

It would be all right if we refused to begin new works until the existing ones were completed, but when a work has been begun, it seems to me that to fail to appropriate sufficient money to carry it on properly is to lose to a large extent the money already put into it.

These posts have been planned, the foundations in some cases are in, and the Department has recommended an appropriation for this purpose of something over $1,700,000. The amount in this bill is only $200,000, and is certainly far less than is absolutely necessary for the proper carrying on of the work. I hope, therefore, that the amendment will be adopted, and that the appropriation will be so increased that the Department can proceed properly with these works.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I wish to add a few words to what has been said on this subject. I live near one of the largest posts in the United States. A large amount of work has been planned there; buildings have been begun and not finished; other buildings are not repaired because they are scarcely worth repairing and new ones are contemplated in their places, and I am quite sure that during the cold weather of this winter both men and horses at that post have suffered greatly for want of proper shelter. I hope, therefore, that the amendment of my colleague will be adopted.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, it is a well-known fact that at the last session of Congress an act was passed establishing a new military post in the State of Vermont, and it is equally well known that in case of any trouble with Great Britain, the way of entry into this country of a hostile land force would naturally be on the line which would be covered by that new post. The people of our State, in pursuance of the requirements of the act, have donated a large tract of land, valued, I think, at about $300,000, which will be available for the purposes of the Government if it sets about the work of erecting the necessary buildings at some time in the near future.

Now, as has been well said, the appropriation in this bill of only $200,000 for the entire range of military posts on the frontier is altogether too small. It will be a matter of economy, I have no doubt, if we at once appropriate $500,000, as proposed by this amendment, and let these public works be started and carried along in an economical, business-like manner.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Will the gentleman inform the House how he knows that $200,000 is too small an amount?

Mr. POWERS. I know it from the best information I can get from sources that I deem reliable. From such sources I learn that there are several posts in different parts of the country each of which will require the full amount of this appropriation.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Will the gentleman please remember that less than a year ago, when a bill was before this House to establish a military post in Vermont, he and his friends said that they did not wish an appropriation and would not ask for one?

Mr. POWERS. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I did not say any such thing. I understood, and I supposed everyone else understood, that an appropriation for that purpose would be called for at some time. How could we get the post without making an appropriation?

Mr. LIVINGSTON. The Committee on Appropriations have ascertained that in their judgment the $200,000 is sufficient for these military posts; now, if the gentleman has any additional information they will be glad to get it.

Mr. POWERS. I call the gentleman's attention to the hearing before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations. In the statement of Gen. Batchelder, Quartermaster-General, under the head of "Vermont post," I find the following:

> Under authority of the act making appropriations for military posts for the fiscal year ending 1892, a site for the new post has been selected near Essex Junction, Vt. One hundred thousand dollars of the appropriation has been set aside for the purpose of beginning its construction as soon as complete title is obtained to the land. To complete the post for four companies $200,000 additional will be required, and to continue the work for the next fiscal year $100,000 is necessary.

I make that my answer to the gentleman's question.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Are the titles to those lands completed?

Mr. POWERS. I understand that they are about completed.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. It is not usual to appropriate for such works where the title is not perfected or completed.

Mr. POWERS. I will say to the gentleman that according to my information the district attorney of our State has made a careful examination of the titles and is prepared to report that they are all correct. Of course the appropriation will not be available unless the Government gets a good title.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. My recollection is that there was no evidence before the committee that the titles were completed or perfected.

Mr. POWERS. No doubt the gentleman is correct in his recollection, for it is only within a very few days that the district attorney has completed his examination.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Chairman, I hope this amendment will not prevail. I am opposed to any large appropriation for building military posts. I do not think any such appropriation is necessary at this time. We are at peace, as I understand, with all the world, and I do not see any necessity for building up military posts. It is especially true that in view of the condition of our Treasury at the present time, we are not warranted in spending money for purposes of this kind. Not many days ago there came up in this House a bill proposing to appropriate some millions of dollars for the purpose of buying a large tract of land to provide homes for the homeless people of the country. The plea was then made in opposition to the bill that because of the lack of funds in the Treasury the money could not be appropriated.

Now, I think we ought in the first place to take all necessary and proper measures for the purpose of securing homes for our homeless people, before we provide for building up expensive military posts throughout the country. It seems to me that the sum of $200,000 proposed by the committee to be appropriated in this item will be ample. Hence, I am opposed to the amendment. I have no military post in my district; but if I had, I do not think it would affect my vote on this subject. I believe we should legislate for the benefit of all the people, and not be too much guided by the fact that some of the money to be appropriated will be spent in our immediate district, and that by voting and working for the appropriation we may secure the votes of some of our constituents.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I hope the Committee of the Whole will not increase this appropriation.

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. What is the probable comparison of the receipts and expenditures of the Government at the present time? I ask the question for the purpose of information; for, as the statement of the Secretary of the Treasury makes the receipts and the expenditures so very nearly equal, it seems to me that if there ever was a time when we should appropriate money carefully it is just now.

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly we are running the risk of going beyond $500,000,000 in our appropriations this year for next year on the basis of appropriations now in progress, and the revenues of the Government can not reach for the next fiscal year $475,000,000, including the postal receipts. We must reduce appropriations or confront our people with increased taxation. Can the Democratic party afford that?

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Do I understand the gentleman to say that this is to be a "billion-dollar Congress"?

Mr. HOLMAN. You understand me to say that the way these bills are running, and with the appropriations we are piling up, the chances are that unless our method of proceeding be arrested the appropriations this year will exceed $500,000,000 and will vastly overrun the revenues of the Government.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Well, I am in favor of cutting down expenditures for military posts and all that sort of thing.

Mr. HOLMAN. I am with you.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. And giving the money for surveys. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Chairman, the War Department has submitted an estimate of the amount required to conduct the necessary improvements at the several military posts of the country. That estimate is $1,700,000. The Quartermaster-General, who has charge of this particular branch of improvement, was called before the committee and was examined thoroughly.

On pages 140 and 141 of the hearings before the committee he makes statements as to the necessity for improvements in certain posts; he makes statements also as to the advisability of omitting expenditures at certain posts; he also shows that there are some posts at which it is not necessary to make any expenditure. But if any member will take the trouble to glance over this testimony carefully he will see that the Committee on Appropriations has allowed about one-fourth as much as is necessary to continue the absolutely necessary improvements at the different posts.

Now, sir, any one in private business, starting to erect any kind of building or buildings for any business purpose, would not recognize it as good economy, when a building has been partially erected, to stop the work and let it stand for two years. This Government is not so poor that it can not do what good business instincts would prompt a private citizen to do; that is to finish buildings which are in course of construction.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will the gentleman answer me a question?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Certainly.

Mr. HOLMAN. How much is carried by the Army appropriation bill for repairs of forts?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I do not recollect the exact amount; but the money carried for repairs can not be appropriated for these purposes.

Mr. HOLMAN. I know that; but is not the amount of appropriation nearly $600,000 for repairs alone?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. That may be so; but I will state that there is not a cent of it but what is necessary, whatever the amount appropriated by the Committee on Military Affairs for that purpose may be. It is necessary to promote the object for which the appropriation was made.

Now, I did not hear the pending amendment read; but suppose it was to appropriate the same amount that was appropriated last year, making it $400,000. We appropriated $400,000 last year, and I do not think it ought to be any less now. As a business proposition to refuse to permit the Government to go on and complete buildings now in course of construction, that will be injured by being allowed to stand in their unfinished state, does not commend itself to my judgment from any point of view.

I do not ask that the Committee on Appropriations should give the $1,700,000 estimated by the War Department; because I think on an examination it was not sustained. But I do ask that committee to do a businesslike thing and appropriate at least $400,000, which is necessary for this purpose.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] is insisting on the increase of the amount appropriated for this particular purpose, on a statement, I believe, made by the Quartermaster-General.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Who was examined before the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BLOUNT. Who was examined before the committee, as the gentleman says.

But, Mr. Chairman, I wish to say that the Quartermaster-General in all probability did not take so broad a view of the question as necessarily devolves on the members of this House. Doubtless if there was no question as to the amount of money in the Treasury of the United States; if there were ample funds on hand to meet all of these various estimates, taking it from that standpoint (and that possibly is the idea on which the Quartermaster-General proceeds); if the condition of the Treasury were different, the amount of the estimate asked by him and the appropriation itself might be justifiable. But, sir, this House is charged with the consideration of this question in a very much broader sense.

The Committee on Appropriations of the House is charged with the duty, in recommending to the House the amount of money which shall be expended in any fiscal year, to consider carefully the amount of our receipts, and determine whether the appropriations are entirely within these limits or not. If it is urged that the appropriations shall exceed the amount of the receipts, then it becomes their duty to consider whether such expenditures will not involve additional taxation upon the people. It becomes the duty of the Committee on Appropriations and of the House to consider whether the Committee on Ways and Means of this House have made provision for obtaining these additional sums of money to meet such increased expenditures; and if they have not done so, whether an appropriation beyond what we have in the Treasury, or beyond what the Treasury can meet, does not necessarily bring the country at once face to face with the question of an insolvent Treasury or increased taxation.

Mr. Chairman, we can not afford to put the Government of the United States in any such attitude; and for one, sir, I think it is far better that we should restrain the tendency to increased expenditures on all of these items, rather than incur the risk of bringing the Government to such a humiliating condition.

There are eleven millions and over of deficit in the last fiscal year in the amounts due to the sinking fund, and during this fiscal year it has been estimated, I understand, that this will reach the sum of forty odd million dollars.

The Secretary of the Treasury in his report does not claim, confining ourselves within the estimates, that there will be more than $2,000,000 of receipts over the estimated expenditures in the next fiscal year. Now, I ask if that is not coming quite too near the verge, and if we should not pause and consider carefully before putting this Government in the attitude of coming within $2,000,000 of insolvency?

I do not care so much about the matter of military posts, but as we go into this or that object all along the line of appropriations, we should keep steadily in view the higher consideration whether the majority side of this House should not stand steadily in the path of such expenditures and restrain them rather than to be forced to the point of imposing additional taxation upon the people or the borrowing of money to meet our liabilities.

Surely, Mr. Chairman, it is time that these suggestions should make us pause in relation to all matters of appropriation, and admonish us to caution and economy in public expenditures.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I think it is the duty of this House to pause for a moment and take into consideration the probable appropriations of the present session and our ability to meet the expenditures thus involved. I understand that there is a proposition now pending to increase the amount reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

The Secretary of the Treasury in his annual report estimated the surplus in the Treasury on the 30th day of June next at $20,992,377.03. He also estimated, as just stated by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT], that the surplus of current receipts over current expenditures for the present fiscal year will be $2,000,000. That is the statement in his annual report submitted, I believe, on the 22d of November. In the report recently submitted to the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the Secretary estimates the same surplus ($20,992,377.03), although since the date of his annual report a pension deficency of $3,335,000 has been submitted.

Upon an examination of the report submitted to the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means I find that the deficiency on account of pensions is made good by an increase in the estimated receipts from internal revenue, and, by a strange coincidence, by exactly the same amount, $3,335,000.

A MEMBER. Exactly the same amount?

Mr. DOCKERY. Yes, sir; there is not a deviation to the extent of a hair's breadth. The increase in the pension deficiency is made good, to the cent, by the estimated increase of receipts from internal revenue.

Now, then, this so-called surplus of $20,000,000, which the Secretary estimates at the close of the fiscal year, is only reached, as just stated in part by the gentleman from Georgia, by a default on account of the amounts due the sinking fund for the fiscal year 1892 of $11,307,825.36, by an admitted delinquency of $40,893,862.50 for the current fiscal year, and by covering into the Treasury the national bank redemption fund, amounting, as estimated (July 1, 1893), to $19,763,473.25.

So that when you add together these items of default, and this forced loan, the surplus of $20,992,377.03 would give place, if these liabilities had been met, to an actual deficiency of $50,972,784.08.

Mr. Chairman, it is well to understand that the appropriations of the present session, in spite of the most exacting scrutiny, will exceed $530,000,000. Of course this total includes the requirements of the sinking-fund act.

Mr. DINGLEY. They were $507,000,000 at the last session.

Mr. DOCKERY. Certainly.

Mr. SAYERS. The gentleman does not mean by that to say that the actual appropriations by the present Congress will amount to that; but that amount includes the permanent appropriations, as well as the appropriations made by the present Congress.

Mr. DOCKERY. That includes permanent appropriations, and the permanent appropriations include $48,700,000, which is the estimated requirement of the sinking fund for the ensuing fiscal year.

But, Mr. Chairman, whether you class the appropriations as permanent, annual, or indefinite, the obligations that will be imposed upon the taxpayers of the country by the appropriations of this session will amount, as I have it estimated, to $531,226,522.68. That is a conservative estimate. It includes the estimated annual appropriations of $505,961,335.33; the river and harbor contract liabilities of $16,115,750; the pension deficiency, now pending before this body, of $14,149,437.35; ordinary deficiencies, estimated at $9,000,000, and miscellaneous appropriations of $2,500,000, or a total of $547,726,522.68. Now, then, if these estimates shall be reduced in the sum of $16,500,000 by the action of Congress, the net liabilities imposed at this session of Congress will aggregate, as before stated, $531,226,522.68.

Mr. Chairman, in view of this extraordinary aggregate of liabilities from which there seems to be no escape, because they are made in pursuance of existing law, I submit whether the motion now pending to increase the appropriations, or any other motions that may be offered hereafter in the same direction, should prevail.

I will not at this time make any reference in detail to the liabilities of the next fiscal year. I could do so, but I shall defer comment or statement inasmuch as that subject is now under consideration by the Committee on Ways and Means. In my judgment, however, without stopping to give details—as we will have them shortly from the committee of the House charged with that responsibility—a conservative estimate of the expenditures of the next fiscal year, eliminating the contemplated default on the sinking fund account of $43,700,000, will involve a deficiency of probably $15,000,000.

It is impossible, of course, to say whether the deficiency will be greater or less, because the amount will be more or less influenced by the administration of the Departments; but if all the liabilities of the Government for which appropriations are made and to be made were met, there would certainly be a deficiency of perhaps $15,000,000. Now, I submit to gentlemen, especially on this side of the Chamber, with this exhibit of the condition of our fiscal affairs, which can not be successfully controverted, whether we can afford to continue, as has been done in one instance this afternoon, to increase appropriations over the amount reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say but a word. The appropriations of the present year for fortifications and quarters amounts to $700,000.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman who is chairman of the Military Committee [Mr. OUTHWAITE] has, it seems to me, presented an argument which ought to influence the decision of this committee. If there is any place where it is unwise to stint your appropriations, it is in carrying on works already commenced. If these works are not needed, if our military posts are too numerous, let us strike off those which are unnecessary; but to appropriate a little over 10 per cent of the amount recommended by the Department for carrying on works already commenced, where if we do not carry them on we lose to some extent the value of the money invested, is practising economy in the wrong place. You have not done it in other places——

Mr. SIMPSON. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. BRYAN. Certainly.

Mr. SIMPSON. Do you consider, where the people donate to the Government a certain amount of land for a military post, that that is a case of work commenced?

Mr. BRYAN. No, sir.

Mr. SIMPSON. And that then we should go on and build a military post there simply because the Government has received the land?

Mr. BRYAN. No, sir.

Mr. SIMPSON. Many of these posts are constructed on the theory that the Government has received the land, and for that reason ought to go on and put up the buildings. This is the same argument that is made on the river and harbor bill.

Mr. BRYAN. I am not speaking of cases where no work has been begun; but I do believe that in the instances cited by the chairman of the Military Committee, where money has been appropriated and work commenced, the foundations laid, or the walls partly up, it is not economy for us to refuse the necessary appropriations for carrying on the work. There are places where reductions may be proper, but this is not one.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. BRYAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLOUNT. Would the gentleman apply that rule to the rivers and harbors of the country and the public buildings of the country; and when he shall have done that, what will be the amount of the increase of the expenditures?

Mr. BRYAN. Well, Mr. Chairman, a case ought to be decided upon its merits, and if the gentleman has any cases where the appropriations are not sufficient he should present them to the House. In this case it is not sufficient.

Mr. BLOUNT. But I will ask the gentleman if he is laying down a rule of action which when it shall be applied in every case which shall arise, notably in the improvement of rivers and harbors and the erection of public buildings, will not the amount aggregate a great many millions of dollars; and, therefore, I ask him whether or not it is good to invoke a rule on a single item unless he proposes to apply it all along the line?

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Chairman, the rule I have laid down can be applied anywhere. Appropriations should be made where we have commenced work and would lose money by not carrying it on. It is wiser to make appropriations for work that has been commenced than to make them for works that have not been commenced.

Mr. HOLMAN. How will you get the money, my friend?

Mr. BRYAN. We will have to raise the money if necessary. We must raise the necessary amount to meet the requirements of the Government. It is probable that expenditures can be cut down in some quarters where it will not cause an actual loss to the Government.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think the party that goes into debt and increases taxation for the erection of unnecessary buildings will hardly receive popular approval.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to say one word. My experience and observation are in connection with a post where the work has been laid out for many years and is largely done. It is not a post to be begun. It is a matter of economy and business that we should go on with these works; and, besides being a matter of business, it is a matter of humanity. That post at Fort Riley is in the center of the continent. It is the headquarters of the police force of the entire western half of this continent, including the frontier of Mexico, with smuggling and other troubles.

It is very necessary that this work should go on, in order that the men and horses should have comfortable quarters. During a large part of the year they are compelled to live in tents. During the present winter they have been living in buildings that leak and are too old, probably, to be repaired. They should have been living in buildings the erection of which was authorized years ago. There is nothing new at all about this post except what has been authorized for several years. To carry out the improvements that are authorized at that single post will require $300,000, and it ought to be completed as soon as possible.

The amendment was again reported.

The question was taken on the adoption of the amendment, and the Chairman announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. WEVER. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 40, noes 81.

Mr. WEVER and Mr. DAVIS. No quorum, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. COGSWELL. Let us rise.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let us finish this.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will appoint the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. DAVIS] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] to act as tellers.

Mr. BURROWS. There is not a quorum here.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LESTER of Georgia reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 10238) making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending July 30, 1894, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1303) to increase the pension of Mrs. S. A. Farquharson, asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. DAVIS, Mr. TURPIE, and Mr. PALMER as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

It also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 5597) for the relief of William Smith and others; and

A bill (H. R. 10062) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Osage River, between the mouths of Pomme de Terre River and Buffalo Creek, in Benton County, Mo.

It also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, the bill (H. R. 5049) to remove the charge of desertion against Lucius L. Dyer, in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

It also announced that the Senate had passed bills and joint resolution of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 88) for the relief of Hiram Somerville;

A bill (S. 2657) granting right of way to the Watertown, Sioux City and Duluth Railway Company through the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indian Reservation;

A bill (S. 2869) to provide for the reservation of certain timber lands upon the Siletz Indian Reservation for the benefit of the Indians;

A bill (S. 3568) providing for the establishment and enforcement of rules and regulations for the use and navigation of United States canals and similar works of navigation, and for other purposes; and Joint resolution (S. R. 140) authorizing the Secretaries of War and of the Navy to loan to the committee on inaugural ceremonies flags, etc.

It also announced that the Senate had passed, without amendment, House concurrent resolution providing for joint session of the Senate and House of Representatives relative to declaring the vote for President and Vice-President of the United States.

It also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 985) to provide for the enlargement of the military post at Fort Wayne, Mich.

It also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 1678) for the relief of William Smith and others.

It also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the President be requested to return to the Senate the bill (S. 2625) to provide for the punishment of offenses on the high seas.

PUNISHMENT FOR OFFENSES ON THE HIGH SEAS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will lay before the House a resolution of the Senate requesting the recall of a bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the President be requested to return to the Senate the bill (S. 2625) to provide for the punishment of offenses on the high seas.

The resolution was agreed to.

WILLIAM SMITH AND OTHERS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will also lay before the House a resolution of the Senate requesting the return of a bill from the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 1678) for the relief of William Smith and others.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. What is the purpose of having it returned?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will again report the resolution.

The resolution was again reported.

The SPEAKER. Without objection the request of the Senate will be complied with, and the bill returned.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. OATES. Will the gentleman withhold that motion for a moment so that I may ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD remarks on the subject of the bankruptcy bill?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent for leave to print in the RECORD remarks on the subject of the bankruptcy bill. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The motion of Mr. HOLMAN was then agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, January 27, 1893.

Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D., the Chaplain of the Senate, offered the following prayer:

We thank Thee, our Father, for the stone rolled away from the door of the sepulcher. Blessed be God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Who according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again to a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away. We thank Thee for the power of this faith in molding life, for its sustaining power in the hour of death, for the comfort that comes to the mourning in the time of bereavement.

We bless Thee, O God, for the life that is now gone out, for its faith in God, for its labor, for its love of country, for its usefulness. We thank Thee that amid all this great trial in the furnace of affliction Thy presence has not been withheld; that Thou dost sustain and sanctify and make even the bitter things of life to work together for good.

O Thou who didst comfort the home at Bethany in the time of death, be very near to this family in its hour of bereavement. Grant the support and consolation of Thy grace. And whilst we stand before Thee with heads and hearts bowed, teach us heavenly wisdom, so to walk before God in the faith of Christ, serving our fellow-men, valiant for truth and for right, keeping consciences void of offense towards God and towards men, that when the end of labor and toil and tears shall come we may be prepared to enter into rest.

We thank Thee for the rest in Abraham's bosom, for the Father's house where the good are gathered. Blot out our transgressions. Guide us by Thy divine counsel. Multiply to us mercy and grace and peace all through our pilgrim way, and keep us by Thine own power in the faith of Christ unto eternal life. And to the Father and Son and ever blessed Spirit we will give all the praise, world without end. Amen.

THE JOURNAL.

DEATH OF HON. JAMES G. BLAINE.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, we are again summoned into the presence of death. A very great man has passed from this earth. Hon. James G. Blaine died in his house in this city at 11 o'clock this morning. His long illness had in some measure prepared us for this, but the dread event will carry sadness and mourning throughout all the United States and will awaken interest and sorrow wherever civilized man lives on the face of the globe.

Mr. Blaine's career was so remarkable and his public services were so great, that in all the histories which may be written of his times he will stand as a central figure, not only as to his own country but upon policies and subjects that affected other great nations.

He belonged, Mr. President, not to any one State, but to all the country. Pennsylvania, which gave him birthplace and nurtured him, and Maine, where he made his home and where he became her first citizen and who filled his lap with all the honors she could bestow, mourn him no more to-day than the dwellers by the shores of the great Gulf and in the cabins of the far Sierras.

It is no time or place for me to speak in detail of his distinguished public life. He was for years a leading member upon the floor in the House of Representatives, and six years presided there as its Speaker. His service in this Chamber covered years. He was twice Secretary of State, and until of late a member of the present Administration.

I do not think there is one Senator here who will not deem it fitting, in view of this, and that he died where his last eastward look from his chamber window might embrace this Capitol where his voice had been so many times heard, that we make a precedent at this time, if there is none already, and that, notwithstanding Mr. Blaine at the time of his death was a private citizen, this body take an immediate adjournment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, in view of the announcement by the Senator from Maine of the very sad event which has just occurred under the shadow of our nation's Capitol, and as a further mark of respect to the memory of the illustrious dead, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 18 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, January 28, 1893, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, January 27, 1893.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. The Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Eternal God, we stand before Thee profoundly moved as the news comes to the Capitol and flies through the land that a great man, a prince among the people, has ended his earthly career. Rich in the manifold gifts with which Thou didst endow him, tireless in energy, devoting himself for a generation to the service of the land, holding men to him by bonds stronger than hooks of steel, winning for himself, in the regard, affection, and confidence of millions of his fellow-citizens, such a place as has rarely been held by any man, he passes from us mourned, honored, loved, his memory a fragrance in this House and throughout the capital and throughout the nation.

O Lord God, who hast promised to be a husband to the widow and a father to the fatherless, we commend to Thee the stricken wife and children who have lost their staff. Bring home to the hearts of all his associates and friends the solemn truth that we, too, are fast passing to the grave. Grant us grace to walk before Thee in all reverence and humility, cultivating the spirit of brotherly kindness and charity, serving God meekly and humbly, so that in the end we may come to the home which Thou hast prepared for those who love Thee. We pray through Jesus Christ, our Saviour. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

A bill (S. 2869) to provide for the reservation of certain timber lands upon the Siletz Indian Reservation for the benefit of the Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

A bill (S. 2657) granting right of way to the Watertown, Sioux City, and Duluth Railway Company through the Sisseton and Wahpetai Indian Reservation—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

A bill (S. 3568) providing for the establishment and enforcement of rules and regulations for the use and navigation of United States canals and similar works of navigation, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Railways and Canals; and

A joint resolution (S. R. 140) authorizing the Secretaries of War and of the Navy to loan to the committee on inaugural ceremonies flags, etc.—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

LUCIUS L. DYER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a bill (H. R. 5049) to remove the charge of desertion against Lucius L. Dyer, with an amendment by the Senate thereto.

Mr. ROCKWELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the amendment of the Senate be concurred in.

The Senate amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That the Secretary of War be, and hereby is, authorized to revoke and set aside special orders numbered 66, dated February 10, 1864, War Department, dismissing Lucius L. Dyer, late second lieutenant of Company C, Fourteenth Regiment of Connecticut Volunteers, to date January 11, 1864, and to correct his military record accordingly, and to issue to him a certificate of discharge as of date January 11, 1864: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or emoluments of any kind shall become due or payable by reason of the passage of this act."

The amendment was concurred in.

The title of the bill was changed to conform to the bill as amended.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled the bill (H. R. 5597) for the relief of William Smith and others; when the Speaker signed the same.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. WINN, for ten days from January 8, 1893.

SUPERVISION OF ELECTIONS IN NEW YORK.

Mr. GEISSENHAINER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a report of the committee appointed to inquire into the supervision, etc., of the election laws, etc., in the city, county, and State of New York, so far as the same relate to members of Congress, together with the evidence taken by the committee; and also to present a bill for the repeal of all laws relating to the supervision of such elections, etc., and I give notice that I will call up the same at an early day.

The bill (H. R. 10344) was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. RAY. I ask consent that the minority of the select committee be permitted to file and have printed their views respecting the matter embraced in the report just filed by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. GEISSENHAINER].

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection leave will be granted to the minority to file their views and to have them printed when filed.

There was no objection.

PENSIONS.

Mr. MUTCHLER, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill (H. R. 10345) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. ATKINSON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to reserve all points of order.

OKLAHOMA MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. LESTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 10146) to authorize the Oklahoma Midland Railway Company to construct and operate a railway, telegraph, and telephone lines through the Indian and Oklahoma Territories, and for other purposes.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I called up this bill a few days ago and it was then read at length to the House. Objection was then made to its consideration by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON], but he is now satisfied that the bill is correct. It contains all the safeguards usually embodied in grants of rights of way through the Indian Territory, and, the bill having been once read, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of it be now dispensed with.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LESTER of Virginia moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

F. Y. RAMSEY.

Mr. BUNN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 2850) for the relief of F. Y. Ramsey, the heir at law and distributee of Joseph Ramsey.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to F. Y. Ramsey, son and heir at law of the late Joseph Ramsey, late collector of customs and superintendent of lights, district of Plymouth, N. C., the sum of $430.42, balance due said Joseph Ramsey, as per records of the Treasury, according to final settlement therein recorded April 30, 1861, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, which sum is hereby appropriated and made immediately available therefor.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. KILGORE. I should like to hear some explanation of it.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the report can be read, the right to object being reserved.

Mr. BUNN. I can explain the matter in a few words. In this case an account was made up and a balance struck, and according to the report of the Secretary of the Treasury the balance found due is $430.42, payable to the heir of Joseph Ramsey.

Mr. KILGORE. Was this amount due the collector after he went out of office?

Mr. BUNN. It was due him before he went out of office; but the account was not balanced until afterward.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BUNN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

CLEMENT REEVES.

Mr. ATKINSON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3115) for relief of Clement Reeves.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to pay to Clement Reeves, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $627.85, in payment for earth deposited by him on the battery near Delaware City, Del., in 1876.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. KILGORE. I would like to have the report read or to hear some explanation which may show the liability of the Government for this claim.

Mr. ATKINSON. The entire facts of the case are covered, I believe, by the letter of Maj. Raymond, which will be found appended to the report. I ask the Clerk to read the letter.

The Clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES ENGINEER OFFICE,
Philadelphia, Pa., May 17, 1892.

GENERAL: In compliance with instructions contained in Department letter dated May 13, 1892, I have the honor to return herewith Senate bill No. 3115, Fifty-second Congress, first session, "for the relief of Clement Reeves," and to submit the following report:

The records of this office show that in the year 1876 Mr. Clement Reeves deposited 9654½ cubic yards of earth in the terreplein embankment of the gun battery at the "new fort opposite Fort Delaware." This material was deposited under an informal agreement made with Mr. Reeves by John J. Lee, assistant engineer, and approved by the late Lieut. Col. J. D. Kurtz, Corps of Engineers, then in charge of the work.

It was agreed that Mr. Reeves should be paid 65 cents per cubic yard for this material. Said material was to be purchased from Mr. Reeves when funds were appropriated for the work, and in the mean time the material was to remain the property of Mr. Reeves. No appropriation has been made for this work since 1876. No payment from this office has ever been made to Mr. Reeves for this material, and he is in equity entitled to receive for it $627.85, as provided in the bill.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. RAYMOND,
Major, Corps of Engineers.

Brig. Gen. THOMAS L. CASEY,
Chief of Engineers, United States Army, Washington D. C.

Mr. KILGORE. From what has been read, I do not understand this case well enough to let it go through without further explanation.

Mr. ATKINSON. I wish to say to the gentleman from Texas and to the House, that this is a bill to pay for a lot of earth which was used in the construction of a battery near Fort Delaware in 1876. The material was furnished under a contract made with the engineer officer who was engaged in the construction of the battery. It afterwards appeared, however, that the appropriations available for the construction of this earthwork were not sufficient to pay all the bills which had been contracted in its construction, and therefore the claim of Mr. Reeves remains unpaid.

Mr. KILGORE. Was there a contract to pay for the dirt which was furnished?

Mr. ATKINSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. At the price provided for in this bill?

Mr. ATKINSON. At the price provided for in the bill, being at the rate of 65 cents per cubic yard. The report states that if the earth had been obtained elsewhere it would have cost $1.30 per cubic yard.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. ATKINSON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

THOMAS J. MATLOCK.

Mr. SIMPSON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 509) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Matlock.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas J. Matlock, late of Company E, Nineteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension of $50 per month.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Invalid Pensions was read, as follows:

Strike out "50" and insert "36," so as to make the pension $36 per month

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON] for the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. HOAR. I should like to hear something about this case.

Mr. SIMPSON. The bill as amended proposes simply to pay this man, who is totally blind, a pension of $36 per month.

The SPEAKER. The report will be read, subject to objection.

The report (by Mr. JOLLEY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 509) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Matlock, submit the following report:

This bill passed the Senate, and was reported to the Senate by the Committee on Pensions as follows:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Matlock, have examined the same and report:

"Claimant served as a private in Company E, Nineteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, from August 12, 1862, to July 10, 1865. He has a record of ague, boil, diarrhea, and wound of left leg, and is receiving a pension of $6 per month on account of gunshot wound of right leg and rheumatism. Additional pension is claimed on account of resulting disease of eyes.

"Claim for increase was rejected November 20, 1890, on the ground that disease of eyes is not shown to be the result of rheumatism.

"On this point, however, the doctors disagree, the medical examiner rating him 27-30 for disease of eyes, but was overruled by the medical referee. Expert examination made by United States surgeon at Emporia, Kans., December 3, 1890, shows that rheumatism was at least the exciting if not the sole cause of disease of eyes.

"In affidavit filed October 4, 1887, Dr. John Roosa, of New York City, testifies that he examined claimant on April 13, 1887, and that the said claimant was then suffering from a disease of the eyes known as glaucoma, influenced and perhaps caused by rheumatism. This opinion is concurred in by Dr. J. T. Axtell, of Newton, Kans. It appears that claimant is totally blind and in a helpless condition.

"The facts seem to warrant favorable action, and your committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill."

Relying upon the above report, your committee recommend that the bill do pass, after the same is amended by striking out the word "fifty," in line 6 of the bill, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "thirty-six."

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Invalid Pensions was read and agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SIMPSON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, I think we had better pursue the regular order now for awhile.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas demands the regular order, which is the call of the standing and select committees for reports.

CONVENTION BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND CHILE.

Mr. CHIPMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported a bill (H. R. 10346) to carry into effect the convention signed at Santiago, August 7, 1892, between the United States and Chile; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, I ask unanimous consent that the committee may have leave during the day to submit the Post-Office appropriation bill, with the report thereon, and have it appropriately referred to the Calendar.

Mr. HOLMAN and Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Points of order are reserved, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. All points of order will be reserved; and if there be no objection the gentleman from North Carolina will have leave to file, during the day, the Post-Office appropriation bill; which will be printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. I ask further, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. KYLE], that he may be permitted to file some views on the part of the minority.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection the views of the minority will be printed, to accompany the report of the committee.

There was no objection.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina, from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, reported a bill (H. R. 10349) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

DEATH OF HON. JAMES G. BLAINE.

Mr. MILLIKEN. Mr. Speaker, it becomes my sad duty to announce the death of James G. Blaine.

Mr. Blaine was for fourteen years a prominent and leading member of this House, and for six years he was its most distinguished Speaker. In every position which he has held he has gilded it with the light of genius; and he has given to the public service for a generation such devotion, such industry, and such labor as has brought him to his death to-day.

I doubt not that every member of the House will be glad to pay him a tribute of respect by adjourning on the announcement of his decease. His public career is known to the country. It will become one of the brightest and grandest pages in its permanent history. I might elaborate upon it—upon his fine social qualities, his broad, generous nature, and his phenomenal hold upon the hearts of his countrymen. But the time will come for this hereafter.

The news of his death in what but for his great public labors would have been the prime of his life and health, will cause more genuine tears to be shed than have ever fallen upon the grave of any other American.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, the deaths of great citizens which have been announced in this Hall so recently may well recall to our minds the pathetic cry of the Hebrew king "How are the mighty fallen!"

The death of James G. Blaine will profoundly impress the sensibilities of our country. A great man is dead.

He laid the foundation of his fame in this Hall. Here were his early triumphs. Here his great powers first arrested the attention of his country and commanded the admiration of his countrymen. How often have we heard in this Hall the tones of his ringing eloquence. Great in statesmanship; known not only to our own country, but known and admired by the statesmen of the civilized world for his masterly powers. And not only great in statesmanship, not only one of the illustrious characters which have illustrated the value of free institutions, but beyond that he was great in the field of literature.

As the historian of the grandest epoch in the history of the world he did his work well. His history; covering a period of twenty years—a period which involved events of higher interest to mankind than ever known in a corresponding period in the history of the race—will go down to posterity as one of the brightest illustrations of the period in which he lived and of the great events of which he was a part.

It would seem, Mr. Speaker, to be eminently proper and fitting that with the announcement of his death here at the Capitol, on this theater of his greatest achievements, this House out of respect to his memory should adjourn.

I therefore move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 32 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. FAULKNER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6922) to amend section 452 of the Revised Statutes relating to the District of Columbia, concerning conveyance of real estate, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3080) supplementary to an act entitled "An act to provide a government for the District of Columbia," approved February 21, 1871, and also to an act entitled "An act for the government of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1874, reported it with amendments.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9825) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2782) to restore Eugene Wells to the Army, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3696) for the relief of Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CHANDLER, from the Committee on Immigration. I report back the bill (S. 3663) establishing additional regulations concerning immigration to the United States, with a substitute. I ask that the substitute be printed and not the original bill; and also that a thousand extra copies of the substitute be printed for the use of the Senate.

The bill (S. 3786) establishing additional regulations concerning immigration to the United States, was read twice by its title.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bills will be placed on the Calendar, and 1,000 extra copies of the substitute will be ordered printed, in the absence of objection.

Mr. DOLPH. By direction of the Committee on Public Lands I report favorably an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. 10331) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes. The amendment proposes to increase the amount of the appropriations for clerk hire in the office of the surveyor-general of Oregon. I move that the amendment be printed, and that, with the accompanying letter of the surveyor-general of Oregon, it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FRYE, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9176) relating to contracts of common carriers and to certain obligations, duties, and rights in connection with the carriage of property, reported it with amendments.

Mr. DAWES. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9923) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes, to report it with amendments, and to submit a written report thereon. I give notice that I shall call the bill up at an early day.

I am further instructed by the committee to report that two amendments intended to be proposed to the bill, one submitted by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] providing for the construction of a disappearing gun carriage after the pattern of Mr. A. H. Emery, and the other submitted by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON], providing for the making of 10-inch and 12-inch guns after the pattern of R. J. Gatling, have been under consideration by the committee, but they have not been able for want of time to come to any conclusion upon the same. They hope to be able to make a report upon them in the form of amendments to the bill before its consideration, which they will present if they are able to come to any conclusion upon the amendments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. COKE, from the Committee on Commerce, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. 9955) providing for sundry light-houses and other aids to navigation; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3660) for the establishment of a light-house, fog signal, and line lights at or near the mouth of the Brazos River, Texas, reported it without amendment.

Mr. PROCTOR, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2592) for the relief of Andrew B. Knapp, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

HARBOR OF CHICAGO.

Mr. CULLOM. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3753) relating to the anchorage and movement of vessels in the port at Chicago, to report it favorably, with amendments, and I ask that the bill be now considered.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 1, line 3, after the word "Treasury," to strike out "is" and insert "be;" in line 4, after the word "anchorage," to strike out "ground in Lake Michigan" and insert "grounds;" in line 5, after the word "the," to strike out "harbor" and insert "harbors;" and in the same line, after the word "Chicago," to insert "and waters of Lake Michigan adjacent thereto;" in line 6, after the word "relation," to strike out "thereto" and insert "to the same;" and in line 8, after the word "inshore," to strike out "channel ways" and insert "channels;" so as to make the section read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized and directed to define and establish anchorage grounds for vessels in the harbors of Chicago and waters of Lake Michigan adjacent thereto, to adopt suitable rules and regulations in relation to the same, and also to adopt suitable rules and regulations governing the use of marked inshore channels in Lake Michigan in front of the city of Chicago, and to take all necessary measures for the proper enforcement of such rules and regulations.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to strike out the last section of the bill, in the following words:

SEC. 3. That this act shall take effect immediately.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate requesting the President of the United States to return to the Senate the enrolled bill (S. 2625) to provide for the punishment of offenses on the high seas.

The message also returned to the Senate, in compliance with its request, the bill (S. 1678) for the relief of William Smith and others.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5049) to remove the charge of desertion against Lucius L. Dyer.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3115) for relief of Clement Reeves.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 509) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Matlock, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 2850) for the relief of F. Y. Ramsey, the heir at law and distributee of Joseph Ramsey; and

A bill (H. R. 10146) to authorize the Oklahoma Midland Railway Company to construct and operate a railway, telegraph, and telephone lines through the Indian and Oklahoma Territories, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 5597) for the relief of William Smith and others; and it was thereupon signed by the Vice-President.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. PASCO introduced a bill (S. 3787) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the St. Marys River, between the States of Florida and Georgia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HARRIS introduced a bill (S. 3789) to authorize the investigation by the Attorney-General of certain claims alleged to be due the late proprietors of the Knoxville Whig for advertising, and authorizing the payment therefor by the Secretary of the Treasury of any amounts found by the Attorney-General to be legally or equitably due; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CHANDLER introduced a bill (S. 3790) for the relief of William Dillon; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3791) to define and to provide for the execution of the provisions of sections 1390, 1476, and 1480, of the Revised Statutes of the United States relative to the commissions of naval officers; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. PROCTOR introduced a bill (S. 3792) to incorporate the American University; which was read twice by its title.

I ask that the bill be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. DOLPH. I should like to ask the Senator from Vermont if the bill should not go to the Select Committee to establish the University, of the United States, of which the Senator is chairman?

Mr. PROCTOR. This is not a bill concerning the National University, but the American University, an institution under the auspices of the Methodist Church. It is a mere act of incorporation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. DIXON (by request) introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 143) for the more effectual carrying out of a provision of the act approved March 3, 1891, entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for prior years, and for other purposes;" which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

R. 7136) to enable the people of New Mexico to form a constitution and State government and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; which were referred to the Committee on Territories, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 7028) to protect settlement rights where two or more persons settle upon the same subdivision of agricultural public lands before survey thereof; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

MEMORIAL OF C. C. MERRICK.

On motion of Mr. CULLOM, it was Ordered, That the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from the further consideration of the memorial of C. C. Merrick, to inquire into the legality of the disposition of the 2 per cent fund by the Legislature of the State of Alabama, and that he have leave to withdraw the same from the files of the Senate.

PREVENTION OF CONTAGIOUS OR INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to inform the Senate what rules and regulations, if any, are now in existence and in force at the port of New York for the prevention of the introduction into this country of contagious or infectious diseases; and to specifically state what precautions against such diseases are prescribed to be observed at the ports of departure, upon the vessels on their voyages and in the harbor of arrival; and also to inform the Senate by what authority of law such rules and regulations have been established.

INVESTIGATION BY COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE.

Mr. DOLPH submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That the Committee on Commerce be, and they are hereby, authorized to sit, by subcommittee or otherwise, during the recess of Congress, at such places in the United States as they may deem proper; and that they be, and they are hereby, authorized to inquire into the laws and regulations governing the expenditure of moneys appropriated for the improvement of rivers and harbors, and the supervision and auditing of the accounts for such expenditure, and the manner in which such expenditures are made and the accounts therefor audited, and the character, importance, and condition of the works in progress for the improvement of rivers and harbors, and all matters connected with the subject of the improvement of the water ways of the country, with power to administer oaths and take testimony, to employ a stenographer and a clerk, and to appoint a sergeant-at-arms from the messengers of the Senate; and that the actua necessary expenses of the said committee, properly incurred in the execution of this resolution, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate in the usual manner, upon the order of the chairman of the committee.

Capt. John B. Eaton, assistant quartermaster, to be captain of cavalry.

Capt. Guy Howard, commissary of subsistence, to be assistant quartermaster.

PROMOTION IN THE NAVY.

Capt. William T. Sampson, United States Navy, to be chief of the Bureau of Ordnance in the Department of the Navy.

POSTMASTER.

Harry H. Mitchell, to be postmaster at Clinton, in the county of Henry and State of Missouri.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, January 28, 1893.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

PUBLIC BUILDING, SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, submitting a statement relating to the United States custom-house and post-office building to be erected at Sheboygan, Wis., pursuant to House resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

WAR CLAIMS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a communication from the Attorney-General, pursuant to House resolution of January 16, 1892, in relation to claims growing out of the late war; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

GEORGE H. PRICE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Postmaster-General, transmitting the claim of George H. Price, postmaster at Perth Amboy, N. J., for credit on his postal and money order account for losses sustained by theft; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

MRS. S. A. FARQUHARSON.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 1303) to increase the pension of Mrs. F. A. Farquharson, with House amendment, disagreed to by the Senate.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist upon its amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. WILSON of Missouri, Mr. BARWIG, and Mr. HOUK of Tennessee, as conferees on the part of the House.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted:

To Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina, for four days, on account of important business;

To Mr. BRUNNER, for one week, on account of important business; and

To Mr. CADMUS, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

ST. JOSEPH'S CATHOLIC CHURCH, MARTINSBURG, W. VA.

Mr. WILSON of West Virginia. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 273.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Bishop J. J. Kain, trustee of St. Joseph's Catholic Church at Martinsburg, W. Va., out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,880, the same to be in full of rent and damages for the use and occupation of said church by the Army of the United States during the war of the rebellion.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

Mr. BURROWS. Is this a Senate bill?

Mr. WILSON of West Virginia. Yes, sir.

Mr. BURROWS. Has it been reported by a House committee?

Mr. WILSON of West Virginia. Yes.

Mr. BURROWS. What is the nature of it?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from West Virginia can explain the bill if desired.

Mr. BURROWS. I prefer to hear the report read, subject to the right of objection.

The report (by Mr. DOLLIVER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 273) for the relief of the trustees of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, of Martinsburg, W. Va., submit the following report:

The facts out of which this bill for relief arises will be found stated in a report made by the Committee on Claims of the Senate of the present Congress, which report is appended as a part of this report.

Your committee concur in the conclusions stated in that report and recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate Report No. 100, Fifty-second Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 273) for the relief of the trustees of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, of Martinsburg, W. Va., have carefully examined the same and respectfully report:

We adopt the report hereto annexed, made by this committee in the first session of the Fifty-first Congress, and recommend that the bill do pass.

That they have examined the evidence filed in this claim, and find the facts to be as follows: That the St. Joseph's Catholic Church, located at Martinsburg, W. Va., was a large building, the first story of which was built of cut limestone 10 feet high, the superstructure on which was constructed of brick. The size of the building was 100 feet long by 60 feet wide. The basement was occupied for secular and religious schools connected with the Catholic Church, and the upper building, or auditorium, was used exclusively for church purposes.

The church property was taken possession of on the 4th of March, 1862, by the Federal Army, the basement being occupied as a stable and the upper part of the building being used for a hospital.

The evidence filed in the case shows that the building was used for the purposes stated from the time possession was taken in 1862 until the close of the war, when it was turned over to the church authorities. The witnesses that prove the use and occupation are respectable citizens of the town of Martinsburg, the priest in charge of the building, and the soldiers who occupied the basement for a stable, all of whom fix a fair rent value for this property at $80 per month.

The correctness of the facts set forth in the petition and proof furnished is further certified to by a letter addressed by Charles Bowman, commodore, United States Navy, from his personal knowledge, to Quartermaster-General Meigs, dated May 30, 1874.

All of the men who are witnesses in the case are men whose loyalty to the Federal Government was unquestioned.

The following account was filed in the War Department in 1874, certified to the Third Auditor of the Treasury on April 9, 1875.

No action seems to have been taken, and the acting depot quartermaster at Washington, to whom it had been referred for report and recommendation, was subsequently instructed to return the papers to the Quartermaster-General, under the theory, we suppose, held by the Department at that time, that it could not pass upon and allow claims for rent and occupation in the States declared in rebellion, although the county of Berkeley was within the Federal lines from the opening to the close of the war, with exception of the advance during the summer of the Army of Northern Virginia down the valley and when passing through its territory to Maryland.

The account as filed is—

For rent of church building for three years	$2,880
For repairs to same	570
For repairs to fence inclosing cemetery	500
Aggregating	3,950

It has not been customary for the committee to allow the cost of repairs when the rent has been allowed, and for this reason the item of $570 must be disallowed; and the repair of the fence inclosing cemetery, costing $500, must also be disallowed, under the former rulings of the committee; and there is not sufficient proof in the papers to show for what purpose and use the fence was taken by the Federal Army, nor is the proof conclusive that it was entirely consumed in any way by the Federal troops.

Your committee is of the opinion, however, that the item for rent of said building is a proper charge against the Government, and should be allowed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WILSON]?

Mr. WEVER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. KILGORE. I demand the regular order. I think we ought to get on with the appropriations.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of the standing and select committees for reports.

The roll of committees was called, when bills of the following titles were severally reported, and with the accompanying reports, ordered to be printed and referred to the Calendars stated below.

BRIDGE OVER BAY OF BILOXI, MISSISSIPPI.

By Mr. MALLORY, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce: A bill (H. R. 236) to authorize the Biloxi and Back Bay Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge over that portion of the Bay of Biloxi, in the State of Mississippi, known as Back Bay—to the House Calendar.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA RAILWAY COMPANY.

By Mr. RICHARDSON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia: A bill (H. R. 10285) to amend the charter of the District of Columbia Railway Company—to the House Calendar.

BIG HORN SOUTHERN RAILROAD.

By Mr. PEEL, from the Committee on Indian Affairs: A bill (H. R. 3317) extending the time for the construction of the Big Horn Southern Railroad through the Crow Indian Reservation—to the House Calendar.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. BUSHNELL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 7790) be withdrawn from the consideration of the Judiciary Committee, to which it was referred, and that it be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. The chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary [Mr. CULBERSON] informs me that he thinks that is the proper reference.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7790) to provide for the proper defense of Michel Thomas, a Chippewa Indian, convicted of murder and sentenced to be hung by the United States circuit court for the western district of Wisconsin, and certified up to the United States Supreme Court upon a divided opinion between the United States circuit and district judges.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BUSHNELL] asks that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from the further consideration of this bill, and that it be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, stating that that is the suggestion of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee. Is there objection to this change of reference?

There was no objection.

INVESTIGATION OF TRUSTS.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Mr. Speaker, I am instructed by the Committee on Rules to report back a resolution offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS] with a substitute, which I ask the Clerk to report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the resolution of Mr. BURROWS, respecting the whisky trust, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and the said committee is hereby authorized and empowered to investigate the charges contained in said resolution and report to the House thereon by bill or otherwise. Said committee is also authorized and empowered to investigate what, if any, other trusts or combinations in restraint of trade exist in the United States or have been fostered by Congressional legislation which control markets or raise prices; and what, if any, additional legislation is necessary to remedy the evils; that said committee have power to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, the expenses of this investigation to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Mr. McMILLIN. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. BYNUM. I want to make a suggestion before the previous question is ordered, that it would probably be better to allow this investigation to be made either by the full committee or by a subcommittee. It is generally very expensive to conduct an investigation by a full committee. I suggest that amendment.

Mr. McMILLIN. I am entirely willing to accept the gentleman's suggestion, and I move to amend so that the investigation may be made either by the full committee or by a subcommittee.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Tennessee.

The Clerk read as follows:

On line 4, after the word "committee," insert the words "or any subcommittee thereof."

So as to read:

And said committee or any subcommittee thereof is hereby authorized and empowered to investigate, etc.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. McMILLIN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Rules to report back the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk and to ask for its present consideration; and I demand the previous question.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Rules, to whom were referred the accompanying resolutions, heretofore introduced by Mr. FELLOWS and Mr. GEARY respectively, report the same back with the recommendation that the resolution herewith submitted be adopted in lieu thereof, viz:

Resolved, That a special committee of five be appointed by the Speaker to investigate and report as to what sums of money, if any, were expended by the Panama Canal Company or its promoters, directly or indirectly, for the purpose of preventing opposition in this country to the plans of said company or securing acquiescence in America thereto, and what disposition was made of such sums; and generally as to the situation of affairs upon the Isthmus so far as American commerce seeking transit across the same may be concerned; and also as to the contracts and relations between the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Transcontinental Railroad Association, and other railroads, and as to what contracts or other collusive arrangements have been made by said companies whereby the traffic by way of the Isthmus of Panama has been suppressed or diminished; and as to whether said steamship company, by virtue of said contracts or otherwise, has been practically absorbed by or subjected to the control of said railroad companies; and as to whether the business which it was the design of this Government to foster by the sums granted to said steamship company, through mail contracts or otherwise, has been thereby diverted from the Isthmus of Panama and the Panama Railroad Company to such transcontinental companies; and as to whether such acts are detrimental to the interest of American maritime commerce, and the producers, manufacturers, and merchants of the United States; and if such abuses are found to exist by what means the same can or should be supressed, and as to whether the further grant of said sums to said steamship company should be withdrawn. Said committee shall have the power to send for persons and papers and administer oaths, and the expenses incurred in said investigation shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House; and said committee shall have leave to sit during the sessions of the House, in Washington or elsewhere.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CATCHINGS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

VIEWS OF THE MINORITY ON POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. KYLE, from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, submitted the views of the minority on the bill (H. R. 10349) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894; which were ordered to be printed.

HOUR OF MEETING ON MONDAY NEXT.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, in view of the funeral of a distinguished citizen, which occurs on Monday, and the fact that many gentlemen desire to attend that funeral, I move that when the House adjourns to-day it be to meet at 2 o'clock on Monday.

The motion was agreed to.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of general appropriation bills.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. LESTER of Georgia in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of appropriation bills, and the Clerk will report the title of the bill under consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10238) making appropriations for sunday civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. When the committee rose on Thursday last it was considering an amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. DAVIS], which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 58, line 10, strike out the word "two" and insert the word "five."

Mr. HOLMAN. The committee was dividing at the time the committee rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee was dividing upon the question when the committee rose, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. DAVIS] will please take their places and act as tellers.

Mr. DAVIS. I desire to withdraw the point of no quorum.

Mr. WEVER. I renew the point. I made it at the time, and the RECORD so shows.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope this will not be insisted upon. It is not indispensable, and $200,000 is certainly enough, in view of the fact that we appropriate several hundred thousand dollars for barracks and so on, and we have not got the money. Gentlemen will remember that we are not appropriating for public buildings, and why go on and appropriate for this purpose?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEVER] will please take their places as tellers.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the House will not vote for this amendment.

The committee again divided; and tellers reported—ayes 41, noes 100.

Mr. WEVER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of no quorum.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I move to strike out the words "two hundred" and insert the words "four hundred and ninety."

The amendment was read, as follows:

In lines 10 and 11, page 58, strike out the words "two hundred" and insert the words "four hundred and ninety;" so as to make it read, "four hundred and ninety thousand."

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Chairman, the War Department sent to this House estimates as to the amount that would be necessary to continue necessary improvements in the military establishments at posts. The estimate was $1,700,000. The Quartermaster-General, who has this matter in charge, was before the Committee on Appropriations and examined. His examination appears in the hearings published by the subcommittee. This recommendation was made in pursuance of a policy which the Government has adopted of reducing the number of posts, dispensing with small posts remote from transportation, scattered over the country far and wide and concentrating the military force of the United States at larger posts, thus saving to the country each year hundreds of thousands of dollars in the cost of transportation alone.

These improvements have been entered upon. They are necessary; at least a portion of them are. I am not here insisting that they are all necessary, but I am here insisting that it is necessary, wise, prudent, and economical to give this Department of the Government a reasonable portion of that which they have estimated they will require. Members of the Committee on Appropriations have seen fit to hold up before this House the dangers of an empty Treasury. I find a little further on in this bill some items that are not at all objected to by the Appropriations Committee; that is, for improving the harbor at Galveston, for which this same War Department sent an estimate of $1,000,000, $1,000,000 is appropriated. There is no reduction on that as there is on this item. You reduced this item from $1,700,000 to $200,000; but the appropriation for the harbor of Galveston is equal to the estimate, and remains at $1,000,000.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman state to the House if this is not a matter of contract?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Some of these improvements are matters of contract, and there is some obligation as to them; but as the gentleman responds to me, I will give him an item at the same time, and that is for Savannah Harbor. For improving the harbor at Savannah, Ga.—continuing improvement, $1,000,000.

Mr. SAYERS. Why does not the gentleman refer to Northern improvements as well as Southern improvements?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I am coming to Northern improvements also. The gentleman from Missouri, a member of the committee, rose and presented to the House the dangers of an empty Treasury. The estimates for the improvement of the Missouri River were $750,000 and the appropriation is $750,000, so that there is no reduction there.

Mr. DOCKERY. Will the gentleman deny the accuracy of the statement I made? I challenge him to do so.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. You did not make any reduction in this appropriation of $750,000 for Missouri River; you gave 100 per cent on the estimate there.

Mr. DOCKERY. I voted against the bill authorizing contracts on river and harbor improvements.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I am asking you that you shall make the same statement with regard to river and harbor improvements you do against the improvements throughout the whole country for the military establishment.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. But one is much more important than the other.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I have no doubt the gentleman from Georgia thinks it more important to spend $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Savannah River than it is to expend $490,000 for the improvement of seventeen military posts.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. You are right about that.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I want to appeal from the judgment of the gentleman from Georgia to the judgment of this committee, and I make the appeal now for a reasonable increase in this item, or I will make an appeal later for a reasonable deduction in the other.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. All right; we are not afraid of it.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I have nothing to add to what has already been stated in relation to the condition of the Treasury, and the suggestion, based upon that condition, that wherever we may, exercising a sound discretion, reduce the expenditures of the Government, it is our duty to do so. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE], with immense zeal, brings before the committee in another form the proposition for an increase in the pending item, a proposition which has been almost overwhelmingly voted down here, and he seeks to enforce it by the argument that the War Department has made this and that recommendation.

Sir, I have long since learned that this House of Representatives regards the estimates submitted by the Departments of the Government as a fit subject for the exercise of legislative discretion, so I am not concerned lest we sin by not executing the decrees of the War Department as embodied in its estimates. But the gentleman further seeks to enforce his proposition by the statement that there are in this bill certain items of appropriation for rivers and harbors, and he singles out one for the harbor at the city of Savannah, in my own State, and suggests that my attention ought to be directed to a reduction of that appropriation. Sufficient is it if at this point in the bill, before we reach that item, we apply the just rule; but I say to the gentleman now that if when we reach the item for Savannah or any other item the appropriation is found to be excessive I will unite with him in reducing it.

At the same time, Mr. Chairman, I wish to say further that if there is any item in this bill, or in any bill, as to which the honor of the Government is bound for the payment of a judgment, or the execution of a contract with any citizen of the United States, whether he be in Georgia or in Ohio, or anywhere on earth, I shall insist upon the Government preserving its honor by meeting that obligation. Now, I understand that the items in this bill in reference to Galveston Harbor and the harbor at Savannah have been included in pursuance of contracts entered into by the War Department by virtue of an act of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. In pursuance of law.

Mr. BLOUNT. Well, I do not know any difference between "in pursuance of law" and "by virtue of an act of Congress." Mr. Chairman, that is all I have to say in relation to this matter. The gentleman from Ohio does not disturb me by any suggestion he may make as to anything in this bill that concerns my State. I am willing anywhere, on any item, to unite with him or with any other gentleman here in attempting to prevent this Government from being launched into a possible state of bankruptcy.

Mr. BOATNER. Will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. BLOUNT. In a moment. Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that at any time in twenty-five years past, even during the period between the panic of 1873 and 1880, the condition of the Treasury was as alarming as it is to-day. At a time when the country is prosperous, by reason of the legislation of the past Congress, by reason of the administration of public affairs, we are brought to this grave condition, and this Democratic majority owe it to their friends who are to come into power, in the Executive, in the Senate, and in the House, in the next Congress, not to embarrass them with serious questions in relation to taxation or the borrowing of money.

The question was taken on the amendment of Mr. OUTHWAITE, and the Chairman declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and the ayes were 51; noes 77.

Mr. WEVER made the point of no quorum, but at Mr. OUTHWAITE'S suggestion immediately withdrew it.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out "two" and insert "four;" so that the provision will read "four hundred thousand dollars;" and upon that I desire to say a word.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the committee to the fact that by the action of the present Congress we have already appropriated $700,000, I believe, for barracks, etc. The gentleman's bill, I believe, contains about $700,000 for such purposes.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. No; I think it contains only about $600,000, but that is not for this purpose.

Mr. HOLMAN. I understand it, and the House understands it.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. That has nothing to do with this case.

Mr. HOLMAN. It has got all to do with it. It means——

Mr. OUTHWAITE. However, Mr. Chairman, I do not want this taken out of my time.

Mr. HOLMAN. I thought the gentleman had got through.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I had not even commenced. [Laughter.] Now, Mr. Chairman, I desire to be recognized for a moment on this amendment. I have in my hand the hearings had before the subcommittee, showing the necessity for this appropriation. The posts are specified here. Fort Sheridan is mentioned as one of them, and in relation to it this statement is made:

Seventy-three thousand dollars is absolutely necessary for buildings.

Fort Crook is another, in regard to which the statement is made that "$100,000 is actually necessary at this post for the coming year." Fort Riley, Kans., is another, in regard to which the expression is used, "for the coming year $50,000 is necessary to properly accommodate the garrison now at this point." With regard to Plattsburg, N. Y., the statement is made, "to complete the post after the work now under way is finished will cost $350,000." I do not ask for such an amount as that; but for the next fiscal year $100,000 is absolutely necessary to complete the work now under way—just as much under contract and with just as solemn an obligation of the Government to complete the work as in the case of rivers and harbors.

I pass over Little Rock and Helena and Highgate, new posts, where nothing has yet been done.

Madison Barracks; to continue this work $50,000 is absolutely necessary for the coming fiscal year.

Jefferson Barracks; for continuing this work during the next fiscal year $36,800 is absolutely necessary.

Fort Thomas, Ky.; at least $80,000 is necessary during the next fiscal year to accommodate properly the present garrison.

I omit what is said about the barracks at Columbus, Ohio, because I want this discussion, so far as I am concerned and so far as these amounts are concerned, to be entirely apart from any personal influence I may be supposed to have. I am pressing this amendment in the interest of the military establishment, and of the posts at which the proper authorities say these amounts are absolutely necessary to accommodate the present garrisons or to complete works now under process of construction.

Presidio, Cal.; the barracks at this post are old wooden buildings of little value. To commence this work $36,000 is necessary in the coming fiscal year.

I am informed by gentlemen conversant with the situation that the quarters in which some of these garrisons are stationed are unfit for the habitation of human beings. This amendment is made necessary to comply with the necessary requirements of the service. I appeal to this House——

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman overlooks the appropriation for repairs.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. The gentleman from Indiana knows that not a cent of that appropriation can be used for these purposes. I want this House to do that which I believe is business-like policy, and that is to stand by the appropriation it makes, and not let one farthing be added to it by the Senate. I want this House to make the proper appropriation, and not send this bill over to the Senate with the hope and expectation that that body will do the business which the House of Representatives ought to have done.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I do not blame my friend from Ohio or other gentlemen who have public buildings to be erected in their neighborhood, for advocating this increase; it is the most natural thing in the world.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. The gentleman will allow me to interrupt him in order to say that I omit from the consideration of this question Columbus Barracks or any building at that point.

Mr. HOLMAN. You strike out that part of the estimates entirely?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Yes; I strike it out.

Mr. HOLMAN. And it will not go on in the Senate?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I do not strike anything out in the House to follow it up and have it inserted in the Senate.

Mr. HOLMAN. My friend from Ohio must understand that his suggestion is misleading when he says, "Let the House fix the amount of the appropriation and stand by it." The House will not stand by it; the House has never done so. This item has always been put up by the Senate.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Because unjustifiably cut down by the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. No matter at what you fix the amount, it is put up by the Senate.

Mr. Chairman, there is no branch of your service which begins to compare with your Army and Navy in the tendency to extravagance. In these two branches of the service, neither of which is popular with the country, you are now reaching a grade of expenditure approaching the entire expenses of this Government thirty-two years ago.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. And yet there is a reduction in the Army bill this year, and there was a reduction last year.

Mr. HOLMAN. The fine public buildings at Fort Custer we abandoned for social reasons. I do not complain of the officers of the Army in regard to that.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. That fort was not abandoned for social reasons, but because the transportation was so expensive.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not object to gentlemen of the Army wanting to abandon these old forts; that is natural enough. Many of these gentlemen have wives and children, and of course they want the benefit of social life; of course they want to go to the vicinity of the great cities. I am not complaining about that. And it is natural enough that gentlemen here should feel an interest in having erected in their neighborhood public buildings upon a grand scale for the benefit of our troops. That is natural enough. But is the House to yield to such influences?

I repeat, sir, are gentlemen prepared, with an almost empty Treasury confronting us, to throw on the next Administration the burden of meeting expenditures which it can not bear except by additional taxation or by issuing bonds? And is my friend from Ohio prepared to stand in the face of the American people in a time of profound peace, with this proposition confronting him, that a Democratic House has so unnecessarily and lavishly increased the expenditures of this Government as to make it necessary, during a time of peace, to increase the public debt of this country, and that, too, in the first year of a Democratic Administration? Has my friend no concern at all for the great party with which he stands and which is pledged to reform in all these matters of extravagant expenditures?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Let me make a proposition to the gentleman from Indiana that we take off $100,000 from the amount appropriated to the Savannah Harbor, and another hundred thousand from the Galveston Harbor, and put it on the Army bill for this necessary and important purpose.

Mr. HOLMAN. Why does my friend mention this to me? Am I responsible for that condition of affairs?

Mr. SAYERS. Why does not the gentleman from Ohio ask to take from the appropriations from other points? Why does he make so violent and vigorous an assault upon Galveston and Savannah?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I am willing to cut the whole appropriations along the line evenly.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I want to say to my friend from Ohio that 78 per cent of all the appropriations contained in this bill are for objects north of Mason and Dixon's line.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I am not saying anything as to sectional appropriations. I am calling attention only to the necessities of the service. I am trying to show that it is much more important to appropriate money for these military posts than for many of the expenditures embodied in this bill.

Mr. BINGHAM. It is not a question of locality?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Not at all.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. But the gentleman from Ohio seemed to try to draw that conclusion.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I must insist on my appeal that the committee will vote down the increase proposed by this amendment. It is unwarranted and unnecessary.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Chairman, before the question is submitted to the House I would like to make a few remarks upon this subject.

I have listened with patient attention to hear a single argument presented by the gentleman from Ohio in favor of this largely increased appropriation. The gentleman makes his claim in support of the amendment because of the fact, as he asserts, that a correspondingly large or a larger sum has been appropriated in the bill to make deep-water navigation at Galveston and in the harbor of Savannah. He bases his argument mainly on that ground, and that because of that fact the appropriations for these harbors should be reduced and the amount given to the military establishment.

I can readily understand how a Democratic committee particularly would make such appropriations to deepen the harbors of the country, because the Democratic party is in favor of removing all restrictions to commerce between the States and the world. But why a Democrat, claiming to be in favor of commercial intercourse with all the world, would want to appropriate the surplus revenues of the Government to build up a great military institution at the expense of the people rather than to increase the facilities for carrying on trade and commerce, I am at a loss to understand.

Mr. ROCKWELL. Does not the gentleman agree that we want a military establishment to make provision against the county-seat wars in his own State of Kansas? [Laughter.]

Mr. SIMPSON. I can readily understand why such should be the established policy of a plutocracy to build up a large military establishment. I can readily understand how the Secretary of War should recommend the establishment of a regiment of the regular Army in every big city of the country. I can readily understand, also, that that party, which has been in favor of putting a Chinese wall around the country and cutting off all trade or commerce with the rest of the world, should be still desirous of carrying out the same line of policy which has heretofore been pursued, of robbing the people to build up a rich aristocracy, a policy which in the last twenty years has ruined 80 per cent of the people, and left them living on rented farms and in rented homes.

But why should we wish to build up a strong military establishment in this country I can not understand. I can not conceive, Mr. Chairman, how a Democrat claiming to be such, a Democrat in favor of commercial intercourse, and peace and prosperity throughout the world, should consent to the building up of such an establishment.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the members of this House will, when they have an opportunity, vote to cut down these appropriations. I repeat, I have not heard a single argument from the gentleman from Ohio proving that there is any necessity for the barracks and quarters which he proposes to erect. With only 25,000 men in the Army, and scattered as they are throughout the country, I do not see any necessity for such a large appropriation to house and feed them.

He complains that many of the barracks are not fit for human beings to live in.

I can find this condition of affairs in every city of the country; and it is these people in the great cities and the people throughout the country, who live in hovels and huts and garrets and cellars, who are the ones that are paying out the money to build up the barracks when the money extorted from them should be applied to their own comfort.

Mr. BOWERS. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON] says these people pay all these taxes. They must be pretty well fixed if they pay all this money.

Mr. SIMPSON. The trouble is they have to pay so much money in taxes that they have not any left.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I am not thoroughly informed as to the basis of the estimates by the War Department, by which they ask for $1,700,000 in the way of these appropriations; but there is one item in the estimate which, it occurs to me, was brought up during the last session. When the question of establishing a military post at Highgate, Vt., was up, it came before this House three times, and was fought vigorously. The statement was made by those opposed to the Highgate post that there was a post at Plattsburg, just across Lake Champlain, and a little south, which would make it really unnecessary to have the Highgate post. The answer was then made that by establishing the post at Highgate the one at Plattsburg might eventually be abandoned.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Oh, no, I beg the gentleman's pardon. No such statement appears in the RECORD, from anbody who talked at that time. The gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. BUTLER. I am absolutely correct in what I say about this matter. We were told then that the Highgate post might render the Plattsburg post eventually unnecessary; and yet, in the estimates we find $300,000 for this Plattsburg post, the one that they represented to us then might be vacated, as an excuse for establishing the one at Highgate.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I challenge the RECORD. There was no statement that it could be vacated, or would be vacated.

Mr. BUTLER. You may challenge the RECORD, but you can not successfully challenge me on that. I know it is correct. I know it was in the RECORD. It is a fact, as I have stated. Now, if the estimates are made upon that basis, for things that we are told in one session may eventually be vacated, and yet those same things be estimated for in the next session, it seems to me we ought to be a little careful about making such appropriations.

Mr. ROCKWELL. Mr. Chairman, the mention of the United States Army or the military establishment of this country seems to act upon the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON] like the shaking of a red flag before a bull. If he had his way he would wipe out the entire military establishment and never spend another dollar upon it. And yet I desire to say that the constituency represented in part by that gentleman, the constituency of the State of Kansas, have caused the United States Army more trouble and occasioned more loss of life than any other community in this country.

Mr. SIMPSON. That was when it was under Republican rule.

Mr. ROCKWELL. One of my earliest recollections was that the people of Kansas had agents all through this country asking donations of Bibles and Sharp's rifles for the people of Kansas. [Laughter.] And from that day to this, whenever a Kansas community had an overplus of hay or oats or forage of any kind that they did not know how to dispose of, they went to work and stirred up an Indian war, so as to get the Army out there and make a market for the sale of their produce. [Laughter.] Why, sir, it is only about ten years since the land-grant railroads, with their immigration bureaus, had run into the State of Kansas more people than they could support, and they had not money enough to get back over the same railroads they went there by, and the people gathered along the frontier and tried to break out of the State, and it was necessary to call on the United States Army to keep them in. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. That was at the time of the attempted settlement of Oklahoma.

Mr. ROCKWELL. The United States Army has been repeatedly called on to quell riots and suppress county-seat wars and to put down Indian insurrections, fomented by the whites for the purpose of making a market for the sale of their forage, so that it comes with ill grace from any representative of the State of Kansas to rise on this floor and say anything about reducing the military establishment of the United States. Why, it will not be a year before you will have to have the Army out there to quell some internal disturbance that your people are unable to control by their own local authorities.

Mr. SIMPSON. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the event he speaks of occurred when Kansas was under Republican rule.

Mr. BURROWS. Oh, there was no politics in that.

Mr. ROCKWELL. Just one word more. The gentleman says he has heard no argument in favor of this appropriation. Why, there is a bill pending here, which will probably be passed, for the reorganization of the Army under the three-battalion system, by which the regiments will be increased in size and the number of regiments will be reduced. All the way through the western country, all through the western frontiers, they are abandoning the small military posts and making larger military organizations, and concentrating the Army at railroad centers, points where it can be more easily maintained and used more effectively than it is now.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. If the gentleman will allow me, I will say that there are half a dozen bills to give away to the settlers in Kansas, Nebraska, and South Dakota the lands of abandoned military reservations.

Mr. ROCKWELL. Precisely so. Now, sir, on this matter of concentration, when we shall have reorganized the Army into fewer regiments and larger organizations, when we shall have concentrated it at points where it can more easily be maintained, fed, transported, and used by the country, all this will necessitate and does necessitate that these military posts where the Army will be concentrated must be repaired, enlarged, and put into fit condition to quarter troops.

Mr. HOLMAM. And there are $700,000 appropriated for that purpose now.

Mr. ROCKWELL. Not for the military posts; but all the expense of that will be saved in one year if the increase proposed by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] is made. That amount will be saved in one single year in the matter of transportation of supplies and forage to posts that are inconvenient, where they have to be carried thirty, forty, fifty, a hundred, and more than a hundred miles to remote military posts, over bad roads, by mule trains, pack trains, and all that sort of thing. There is an argument, the best argument, in the interest of true economy, that this appropriation should be increased.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, Kansas needs no defense as to the patriotism of her citizens.

Mr. ROCKWELL. It always goes for the old flag and an appropriation.

Mr. SIMPSON. It was on Kansas soil that the first battle for civil liberty of all the people of this country was fought.

Mr. COGSWELL. The first! That is good.

Mr. SIMPSON. Kansas furnished more men in the war, in the late war of the rebellion, in proportion to population than any other State in the Union. I deny the assertion that the United States troops have ever been called upon to stop any difficulties among the people in Kansas. There were some county-seat troubles in Kansas, gotten up by money-lenders, land-grabbers, and town-boomers from Eastern States. [Laughter.] But, thank God, Kansas has gotten rid of them now [laughter], and we will have no more county-seat wars in Kansas. Through the United States troops neglecting their duty at one time a lot of Indians from the Indian Territory escaped and went through Kansas and Nebraska to their old home in the Northwest, and on their way they committed some depredations, but before the United States troops could come there to defend the people the people of Kansas themselves organized their militia and defended their homes.

Now, that has nothing to do with this appropriation. The gentleman failed to give any argument at all, as every gentleman has, why this appropriation should be made, and why there should be an increase of appropriation for these military posts, in face of the fact that there is now a depleted Treasury and that there is no pressing necessity for these military posts. There has not been one argument to prove the necessity for it; and in view of the fact that we are cutting down the appropriations in every direction, I say that this one ought certainly to be kept as low as possible.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope that we will now come to a vote.

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Chairman, this discussion——

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope that a vote will be taken. I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this section be limited to ten minutes.

Mr. WEVER. I object.

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Chairman, I think I have the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is made.

Mr. HOLMAN. As soon as the gentleman is through with his remarks I will move that the committee rise.

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Chairman, the discussion of the last fifteen or twenty minutes has had very little to do with the question before the committee. We are considering the question whether we shall increase the item in this bill for the improvement and enlargement of military posts. Whether or not the people of Kansas still have their Bibles that the gentleman from New York [Mr. ROCKWELL] says were sent there in an early day is not material. [Laughter.]

Mr. COGSWELL. It does not look much like it. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRODERICK. I assure you that some of them have, though I confess that those who have and read them appear just now to be in the minority out there. [Laughter.]

But, Mr. Chairman, there are two military posts in the State of Kansas where the Government has already entered upon the policy of improvement; one is Fort Leavenworth and the other Fort Riley. We desire that those improvements should be carried out, so that what the Government has already expended there shall not be lost. If this amendment proposed by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] carries, there is no doubt that the improvements which have been commenced can be completed under the apportionment that will be made for that purpose by the Secretary of War, and I hope the amendment will prevail. I want to say that the laboring people of this country are not opposed to public improvements, but, on the contrary, favor a liberal policy in this regard.

Mr. CURTIS was recognized.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I hope I shall be recognized to move that the committee rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. CURTIS] has the floor.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that debate upon this amendment continue only ten minutes longer.

Mr. POWERS. I object.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. CURTIS] has been recognized.

Mr. HOLMAN. Well, I will make that motion as soon as the gentleman surrenders the floor.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, the remark of my friend from Iowa [Mr. BUTLER] I listened to with much interest. He certainly must have heard what I did not hear when the subject of locating a military post at Highgate, Vt., was before the House. I live in the northern section of this Union, and I have some slight appreciation, I hope, of the manner in which the country would seek to defend itself in case of an invasion by a hostile force from the north. Therefore I was interested in the question of the location of this post at Highgate and listened attentively to the debate, but I heard nothing which I can recall in the way of a suggestion that the establishment of a post there would dispense with the establishment at Plattsburg.

If any such suggestion was made, it must have been without proper reflection on the part of the person who made it, because there is an obvious necessity for having a military post upon the line of approach to New England, a line which could not be so well guarded by a force located on the west side of the lake. Again, between Lake Champlain and Buffalo there is a post at Plattsburg, one in Jefferson County, Madison Barracks, and there is also the remnant of an old fort at Oswego. Now, at a time when he have little expectation of controversy with the Indian tribes upon the frontier, such as has existed in previous years, it can not be at all desirable to maintain our troops there, so that there is a disposition to redistribute the Army and establish it at points where it can be maintained more easily and cheaply.

That general view has been kept in mind by the committee in bringing forth the bill to which reference has been made by my friend from New York [Mr. ROCKWELL], and therefore this increased appropriation is really and truly in the interest of economy and greater efficiency of the Army. As these posts are increased to receive the troops for which they are intended to furnish accommodation, the War Department is abandoning posts on the frontier which can be maintained only at great expense and which are no longer necessary by reason of the changed condition of things there. I believe that there is no proposition respecting this bill that is more meritorious or that will reflect more credit upon the sagacity of the members who support it than the amendment proposed by the chairman of the Military Committee. I hope, therefore, that the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise.

Mr. PICKLER. I want only a minute.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that debate upon this amendment be closed in five minutes.

Mr. WEVER. I object.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then I move that the committee rise.

Mr. DINGLEY. Before that motion is put, Mr. Chairman, I understand that ten minutes will probably be accepted by gentlemen upon this side.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then I ask unanimous consent that debate be limited to ten minutes on this amendment and all other amendments on this paragraph.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I object to that.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I object. I have offered an amendment, and I believe that under the rules I am entitled to close the debate. I do not care to occupy much time, but I do wish to have about five minutes.

Mr. HOLMAN. How much time does the gentleman want altogether?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Fifteen minutes, I think.

Mr. HOLMAN. Well, I will agree to fifteen minutes.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Now, let us understand the proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The proposition of the gentleman from Indiana is that debate close in fifteen minutes, not only on the pending amendment but on the paragraph.

Mr. STOCKDALE. And on all amendments to the paragraph?

The CHAIRMAN. That debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto be closed in fifteen minutes.

Mr. HOLMAN. That will not cut off the offering of amendments.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I must object.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then I must move that the committee rise to close debate.

Mr. DOCKERY. I suggest that twenty minutes be allowed.

Mr. HOLMAN. To accommodate gentlemen and avoid consumption of time by having the committee rise, I will assent to a limitation of twenty minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendments and on all amendments to be offered to this paragraph be closed in twenty minutes. Is there objection? The Chair hears none; and it is so ordered.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise for the purpose merely of calling attention to a criticism of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] which I think was a little unfair to our Northwestern States. He undertook to criticize Kansas and Nebraska and South Dakota, on the ground that the representatives of these States come here from time to time with bills proposing to open military reservations to settlement. The gentleman would have the House understand that these measures are an accommodation to our people. Such measures are not urged on that ground. Our people have their homesteads; but our desire is that when a military reservation is no longer needed for the use of the Army it should be opened to homestead settlement, so that energetic, intelligent, worthy young men and young women, persons of nerve and grit, may come to our communities form Ohio and Indiana and Wisconsin and New York, and secure homesteads, which they can not secure in the East, and may thus assist in building up our country.

I wish to contradict the suggestion that the opening up of these military reservations is any particular accommodation to us; and we do not wish to be criticised for undertaking to turn over to homestead settlement abandoned military reservations no longer needed for the purposes of the Army. I submit that the criticism of the gentleman from Ohio was not well founded.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I very much regret that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] should have selected Southern harbors for the purpose of criticising the Committee on Appropriations. The gentleman when making his remarks had before him that portion of the sundry civil bill which contains the items of appropriation for rivers and harbors. Now, I desire to call the attention of this committee to the fact that of these appropriations for rivers and harbors nearly three-fourths go to the rivers and harbors of the North. They are:

For continuing improvement of harbor at Philadelphia, Pa.: Continuing improvement removal of Smiths Island and Windmill Island, Pennsylvania, and Pettys Island, New Jersey, and adjacent shoals, $500,000.

For improving Hay Lake Channel, St. Marys River, Michigan: Continuing improvement, $500,000.

For improving Hudson River, New York: Continuing improvement, $500,000.

For improving Mississippi River from the mouth of the Ohio River to the landing on the west bank below the Washington avenue bridge, Minneapolis, Minn.: Continuing improvement from the mouth of the Ohio River to the mouth of the Missouri River, $758,333.33; continuing improvement from the mouth of the Missouri River to Minneapolis, $866,666.67 cents; in all, $1,625,000.

For improving St. Marys River at the Falls, Michigan: Continuing improvement, $2,000,000.

For improving channel connecting the waters of the Great Lakes between Chicago, Duluth, and Buffalo, $1,000,000.

For improving canal at the Cascades of the Columbia River, Oregon: Continuing improvement, $1,419,250.

For harbor of refuge at Point Judith, Rhode Island: Continuing improvement, $100,000.

For improving harbor and bay at Humboldt, Cal.: Continuing improvement, $522,000.

Under Mississippi River Commission: For improving Mississippi River from head of the passes to the mouth of the Ohio River, including salaries, clerical, office, traveling, and miscellaneous expenses of the Mississippi River Commission, $2,665,000.

Under Missouri River Commission: For improving Missouri River from its mouth to Sioux City, Iowa, including salaries, clerical, office, traveling, and miscellaneous expenses of the Missouri River Commission, surveys, permanent bench marks, and gauges, $750,000.

The aggregate of appropriations for rivers and harbors amounts to $16,115,750, while the items that are distinctly Southern aggregate but $4,534,500. The records of the previous session of the present Congress show that I opposed the placing of these works under contract, but the contracts having been subsequently made in pursuance of law, I have felt it my duty to assist in making provision to meet the contracts which have been made by the War Department under authority conferred by Congress.

In voting for these appropriations, Mr. Chairman, I have not been controlled by the consideration whether this or that improvement was in the East or in the West, in the North or in the South; and every member of the Committee on Appropriations will sustain me in this statement. The appropriations committee found that contracts had been made and that it was necessary to make these appropriations in order to meet the liabilities of the Government before the close of the next fiscal year.

I have no apologies to make to the gentleman from Ohio or anyone else for the fact that this bill contains an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the harbor of Galveston, because that appropriation is recommended by the Chief of Engineers, and because, too, nearly all, if not all, the States and Territories between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains have demanded of Congress that this particular work should be accomplished at the earliest moment practicable, believing such a policy to be to their interest, as well as to the interest of the people of Texas.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Chairman, I certainly had no purpose to insinuate in the remotest manner that gentlemen upon the committee were influenced in their action by the location of any of these public works. I merely glanced at the estimates sent here from the War Department and found that the estimates pertaining to the military establishment had been cut down about 80 per cent, while the estimates sent in by the Chief of Engineers of the Army had not been cut down at all. It is true

I alluded to items which were large and which caught my eye. But I had no other intention. Now I will be perfectly willing to——

Mr. DOCKERY (interrupting). Withdraw the criticism. [Laughter].

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Yes, withdraw the criticism if necessary. But I say I will be perfectly willing to make this proposition——

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope the gentleman will be permitted to withdraw the criticism.

Mr. OUTHWAITE (continuing). That if the Committee on Appropriations will let me have for the military establishment 2 per cent, that is, just cut the appropriation they give on the estimate from the Chief of Engineers, 2 per cent of that sum, and add it to the 12 per cent they gave to the military establishment, then I will be satisfied with the appropriation; because taking 2 per cent on the $16,000,000 allowed on these estimates from the Chief of Engineers will make more than I have asked for for this increase in the military appropriation.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I understand the gentleman from Ohio will not withdraw the criticism on the Committee on Appropriations unless we make this cut in the Galveston and Savannah harbors.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Oh, no; I made no such proposition. I simply said that if the Committee on Appropriations would add to the military establishment just 2 per cent of the amount they have given on the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, I would be satisfied, for that would amount to a sum equal to or greater than the amount proposed in the amendment.

Mr. DOCKERY. Are contracts authorized by law on these works recommended by the Quartermaster's Department?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Yes, sir; some under contract, and work has begun on some that needs to be finished.

Mr. DOCKERY. Are there any continuing contracts?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. There is no necessity for discussing continuing contracts in this direction.

Mr. DOCKERY. It is very material, in order that the two propositions may stand on "all fours," that there should be an authorization for continuing contracts. The appropriations reported for rivers and harbors are in pursuance of contracts authorized by law.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I repeat there is no necessity to discuss that here.

I want to say one word further, Mr. Chairman, to gentlemen residing in the South, where these magnificent improvements are going on, that I was not assailing such improvements in particular. I simply used them as illustrations in the course of my remarks.

Mr. CRAIN. You spoke, in other words, in a Pickwickian sense.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Not exactly; but these items caught my eye, and I saw that in them the whole amount of the estimates had been given. For myself I am as desirous that these matters to promote and foster commerce should go on and be completed as any other man. But I can not yet see or understand why the Committee on Appropriations should insist that all of the reductions on the estimates should be made in the appropriations for the military establishment.

Now, as to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON] saying that I offered no reason for the increase, I do not know what he would call sufficient reasons, nor do I know what amount of reasoning it would take to reach his mind. I only made this statement that certain buildings, necessary for the habitation of the garrisons at these various posts, had been commenced and were under way, that money was needed to finish the buildings, that good business policy dictated that they should be completed and not be allowed to deteriorate, and that these buildings were necessary in order that the soldiers of the United States, men that are in her service, should be properly housed.

That is all I said, and if that be a reason in favor of the appropriation it might have some influence on the mind of the gentleman from Kansas, if he could see it. If any stronger reason could be given for an appropriation than that, I have yet to hear it urged on this floor.

Mr. SIMPSON. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. No; I have not time to answer questions. I did not interrupt the gentleman at all, except to say that it seemed a little early for him to undertake to read me out of the Democratic party. [Laughter.]

I have insisted on some amendment increasing this amount above the pitiful sum of $200,000 granted by the Committee on Appropriations to an amount that would be adequate to proceed with some of these improvements—at several posts, not all of them; not to begin any new work, but simply to complete work already in progress.

Mr. CRAIN. Why did you strike at the appropriation for Galveston, then?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I have not done so. I have not made a motion to strike out anything except in the immediate paragraph under consideration the word "two" and insert the word "four."

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio, to strike out "two," in line 10, on page 58, and insert "four."

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 46, noes 93.

Mr. WEVER. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN appointed as tellers Mr. WEVER and Mr. HOLMAN.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 60, noes 107.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Improvement of the Yellowstone National Park: For the improvement of the Yellowstone National Park, $40,000.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have some explanation from the committee as to the character of these improvements. Here the committee make an appropriation of $40,000 for the improvement of the Yellowstone National Park. I would like to know what the nature of that improvement is to be.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will say to my friend from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] that this $40,000 is for the purpose of building roads and bridges in the Yellowstone Park.

The appropriation in the last session of the Fifty-first Congress for this purpose was $75,000. At the first session of the present Congress we reduced the amount for the present fiscal year to $40,000, giving only a little more than half the amount appropriated at the last session of the Fifty-first Congress.

The bill now under discussion carries an appropriation for the coming fiscal year of the same amount, $40,000, for the construction of roads and bridges. These roads and bridges are constructed under the supervision of an engineer officer of the regular Army, and he makes a report, I presume, to the Secretary of the Interior or to the Secretary of War, I do not know which.

I think $40,000 is the full sum that ought to be appropriated for this purpose, and possibly it could be reduced to some extent. The principal roads have been already constructed.

When this work was entered upon, many years ago, we began with an appropriation of $40,000. That was to be expended to the extent of about $21,000 in the support of a body of watchmen and a supervisor, and the balance of about $19,000 was to be expended on roads. That continued until about fifteen or sixteen years ago, when a military force was put into the park and these watchmen or guards were dismissed, and yet we continue to keep up the $40,000 appropriation.

Finally, as I have said, this was increased to $75,000 at the first session of the Fifty-first Congress. I think those roads that are at all desirable, or indispensable at least, are in the main constructed. I think very likely we could get along with even less of an appropriation than $40,000. There is one road running toward the highest elevation in the park, which, I believe, is called Mount Sherman—I am not certain as to the name—that ought to be constructed in the course of time, but there is no hurry about it. All the main objects of interest, all the geysers and the points of interest on the Yellowstone River, are now readily reached by fairly good roads.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I have here the report of the commissioner of this park——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman make any motion?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; I move to strike out $40,000 and to insert $30,000.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I want to offer an amendment to that, to strike out the item altogether.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment proposed.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 14, page 58, strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will now report the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. STOCKDALE].

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 58, amend by striking out lines 12, 13, and 14.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I have here the report of the commissioner of the Yellowstone Park, dated August 15, 1892. He makes this report to the Secretary of the Interior, and he states that at the beginning of last spring, which I presume was in June, the entire appropriation for the past two years, a sum equal to $120,000, was on hand and unexpended.

Now, I take it for granted, Mr. Chairman, that that amount has not been expended—can not be expended under the circumstances during this year—and I can see no necessity, under the existing conditions, why this Congress should make an additional appropriation of $40,000 to continue this work. Therefore, I have offered an amendment to reduce the amount to $30,000; but I am perfectly willing to accept the amendment of my friend from Mississippi [Mr. STOCKDALE], striking out the entire appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi is to strike out, and is not an amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Very well, then, I withdraw my amendment until the vote is taken on the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Mr. Chairman, I want to say, with reference to this appropriation, that while it may be a good thing to make the mode of access to those great natural curiosities in the Yellowstone Park so that the American people may be able to see them, or anybody else who wants to see them, I take it that that is no reason why it is necessary to make these roads—in order that the people may see these wonders. It does not take a park seventy odd miles wide and ninety odd miles long to contain these curiosities, when 10 miles square will do it.

There is no danger of these curiosities being destroyed. They will keep. When there was a bill in this House to allow a railroad to go through that park, so that the people of the United States might go and see it, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations was himself its strongest opponent; and the purpose of building that railroad was not only that the people might enter that park and see it, but that a large number of miners who live beyond it might have an opportunity to bring to market the product of their labor and of their mines.

So sacred are the precincts of the Yellowstone Park that a poor man can not enter it. The boundaries of the Yellowstone Park, it seems, are as the walls of Mecca; and not the people of America, but the favored few with fortunes are permitted to enter and drink of the waters of the Zemzem. We are asked to spend $40,000 out of a depleted Treasury. For whom? Why only the man who can spend a part of a fortune can go there. I am told they had a rule, and perhaps still have, forbidding a narrow-tired wagon to travel these roads that the Government is making, but all visitors must ride on the broad-tired wagons that are only found in the possession of a monopoly of transportation and consequently a control of the great curiosities for which the people of the country are taxed to build roads to.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. How about bringing them to the Exposition?

Mr. STOCKDALE. I would rather bring the people who support the maintenance of roads to these curiosities and the preservation of game by imposing a tax upon our people and then talk of economy and a depleted Treasury. I say I would rather bring them to the Exposition as a greater curiosity to the honest people of America than any geyser.

Now, seriously, Mr. Chairman, I think that in view of the Exposition that is to be seen this year in Chicago if the cholera does not come, this appropriation of $40,000 can be dispensed with, and let the people who want to go to see the Yellowstone Park go to Chicago and be satisfied for one year, and next year we can appropriate what is necessary for the Yellowstone Park, if anything be necessary.

I have no faith in this appropriation being for the public good, for the reason that the very gentlemen who urge it most are those who oppose access by railroad communications to that park, so that the people might go and see it. Why is that particular piece of ground so sacred, I should like to be informed. Why should we not enter it by railroad?

Oh, they say it will disturb the game. It will startle the dear little animals that may now be in the park. [Laughter.] And therefore the American Government must hush the sound of the locomotive lest it may startle from slumber the coyote there. [Laughter.] Let us strike out this $40,000, when the Treasury is almost depleted.

A MEMBER. Quite so.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I am opposed to increasing the appropriations for military posts, but I would far rather see the soldier made comfortable in his barracks than see this $40,000 spent, as I believe, for the utmost folly.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, only a word.

I sympathize with my friend from Mississippi generally. [Laughter.] I do not like to appropriate money when it does not inure to the benefit of all the people. I admit that there is a very large portion of the population of the United States who will never see the Yellowstone Park; but there has been some sentiment about this matter. I am in favor of keeping up the Botanical Garden. I have spent very many pleasant hours in going through these trees and shrubs, and I never knew a gentleman on the floor of this House with a flower in his lapel that did not conduct himself properly. [Laughter.]

I never saw any one cavorting up and down the aisles with a flower in his coat. I say that there is some sentiment about this matter. I have often visited that park myself, along with other people, and it is necessary that we should have good roads in that park so that visitors can get through it.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana a question, if he will permit me.

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Is this appropriation of $40,000 a good sentiment?

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, I will come to that. I am coming to the sentiment of the proposition I am going to make. [Laughter.]

To enable people to visit those curiosities, the Upper Geyser, the Yellowstone Falls, and other objects of extraordinary interest, the roads have to be kept up. When we commenced the appropriations, as I remarked awhile ago, the whole amount expended for the roads was about $19,000 a year. Then we had a body of civilians, a superintendent and nineteen watchmen, to guard the park. Now we have the military there upon the ground with a company or two of cavalry. So that my friend misapprehends. This money is not for the purpose of protecting those objects of extraordinary interest, perhaps the most remarkable in the world, but for the purpose of constructing and keeping in repair the roads through the park.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Are the troops kept there for the purpose of virtually policing the park?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes; that is what they are there for.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Does not my friend think that that is rather an unsoldierly business?

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, it is a very pleasant duty. They are not there very long each year. And, Mr. Chairman, instead of this Zoölogical Park here in Washington buying elephants and other foreign animals, why should we not keep up this great natural park and preserve from utter extinction specimens of the animals, natives of this continent, that once roamed over the plains and hid themselves in the rocks and mountains? Instead of importing and trying to keep alive at great expense these animals from remote regions, let us have a collection of the American animals which are now rapidly disappearing—the bear, the buffalo, the elk——

Mr. SIMPSON. The mugwump. [Great laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. A place where these and other animals can be preserved. Let us have a park for that purpose, which shall be really national in its character. To that end I believe that an appropriation of $20,000 at this time will be sufficient. I therefore move to strike out "forty" and insert "twenty."

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman a question. I have no desire to destroy the beauties of this national park, but I will ask the gentleman whether he has any intimation as to what amount of money is now to the credit of the commissioner for the benefit of these improvements?

Mr. HOLMAN. I am very glad that the gentleman asked that question. Upon that point I will read the statement of the superintendent, Col. Anderson, who is a gentleman of fine attainments and admirably qualified for his place. He says this:

> Last spring found nearly the entire appropriation for two years, amounting to about $120,000, available for roads. All the existing roads were put in condition and an excellent new road cut from the cañon to the upper basin via the lake. This 52 miles of road is destined to become one of the most popular, as it is one of the most beautiful, drives in the park.
> There are places where it is not entirely completed, but I assume such will not long be the case. A road that urgently needs rebuilding is the one from below the Gibbon Falls to the lower basin. At present this is the worst, most tedious, and least interesting drive in the park. I also renew and emphasize my recommendation of last year, that a road be opened from the upper basin to the south line of the park, on Snake River. A road over Mount Washburn from the cañon to Yancey's is very desirable, but with the existing appropriations I can see no immediate chance for it.

A word further, and then I have done. During the two sessions of last Congress there was appropriated each year $75,000 for this purpose of constructing and repairing roads. We reduced the amount last session to $40,000, and, in view of the large appropriations heretofore made, I think I can say with confidence to the committee—being quite familiar with that region of country—that if you reduce the amount to $20,000 it will be found ample for all purposes that are really necessary to enable people to visit the objects of interest in that charming region. I am not in favor of a large appropriation, but I do not want to see the work entirely abandoned.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Mr. Chairman, we have now an additional reason, it occurs to me, for striking out this amount. Here is $75,000 expended at one time, $75,000 the next time, $40,000 last year—$190,000 to build roads in this Yellowstone Park. Now, I challenge the gentleman from Indiana to say that that number of vehicles have ever gone over those roads.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, the park is visited by thousands of people from all parts of the world.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Certainly, and we are legislating here for the benefit of those people from all parts of the world. "Here is a most beautiful mountain," says the superintendent. Of course it is, and of course he thinks this money ought to be expended to show it off. When I was a member of the Committee on Public Lands, these gentlemen connected with the park officially came before that committee with the utmost sang-froid and said: "We who are interested in the park want certain legislation." I asked them: "Whom do you mean by 'we'?" "Well," they said hesitatingly, "the people of the United States."

Of course the people who are in there want to remain there on good salaries, but I protest and protest earnestly against this expenditure. One hundred and ninety thousand dollars in the last three years and now $40,000 more to repair roads over which not one vehicle a month travels! Tax the people in order that some gentlemen may see these mountains and not be jolted as they drive over the roads! If people want to see mountains, let the sturdy, muscular American climb the mountains and not undertake to tax the poor people of this country to make smooth roads to save from jostling these over-rotund people who it is feared can not stand it. [Laughter.]

Here is a proposition to appropriate $40,000 more to make smooth roads through these western mountains for "people from all parts of the world" to see them. What do our tax-ridden people care whether "people from all parts of the world" see those mountains or not? I ask again, and I ask earnestly, why not extend a railroad into the park so that the American people may see it at small expense? You can not now enter that park from the nearest point on the railroad and travel over those roads that the people are taxed to make, for less than $40 a head.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, that is too high a figure.

Mr. STOCKDALE. The gentleman may say that that figure is too high; but as I understand he went there at the expense of the people of the United States. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, no.

Mr. STOCKDALE. When you went there, did you not go there as the head of a committee of Congress?

Mr. HOLMAN. Many years ago——

Mr. STOCKDALE. My time is nearly out.

Mr. HOLMAN. Twenty years ago I was there as a member of a committee; but my visits have generally been with my wife, at my own expense.

Mr. STOCKDALE. But the United States Government did wrong in giving you an appetite to go there.

Mr. HOLMAN. That may be true.

Mr. STOCKDALE. But how are other people to go there if they are not members of Congress traveling at public expense, or if they are not persons of fortune. There have been only two men in my district, so far as I know, who have been able to visit the Yellowstone Park.

A MEMBER. How did they get there?

Mr. STOCKDALE. They were men of fortune.

A MEMBER. Were you one of them?

Mr. STOCKDALE. No; I am sorry to say I was not able to go.

I say it is time for us to stop spending money in this way on roads for the accommodation of pleasure travel. With a depleted Treasury it is time for us to stop this folly. The amount of this particular appropriation may be small, and other appropriations asked may be small, and in the aggregate they make a large sum. Let gentlemen relent on this sentiment at $40,000 a year, and let us have a railroad in that park, so that the American people who are not persons of large means may be able to visit it at a reasonable expense, if they desire.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ought not to occupy any time, I admit, but I beg the attention of the committee for a moment. There is at present a railroad extending from Livingston, on the Northern Pacific, to the north line of this park. It was at one time proposed that a railroad should be extended up what is known as the eastern fork of the Yellowstone River to a place called Crook City, where there are some mining interests. We did pass two acts authorizing the construction of a road by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company through the lands of the Crow Agency up to Crook City. That route is said to be entirely practicable, but whether it is or not is unimportant.

Mr. STOCKDALE. It is now said not to be practicable at all.

Mr. HOLMAN. I was associated with my friend as a member of the Committee on Public Lands, and I opposed the proposition to extend a railroad into this park because the proposed route would run through the most interesting portion, a portion necessary to be maintained intact if the park is to be kept as a place for the preservation of the remnant of the fauna of this vast continent. Buffaloes and other animals, natural inhabitants of that region, have been gathered there and are being preserved. Such a road as that proposed would be fatal to the purposes to which that portion of the park is now devoted.

This was the opinion of the friends of the park in New England and Missouri; for the most enthusiastic organizations in behalf of the preservation of the park have been in the East and at St. Louis. There is, I admit, a good deal of sentiment about this matter; but it is genuine American sentiment.

Mr. STOCKDALE. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Is it not true that the proposed railroad would go up the bank of the Yellowstone River?

Mr. HOLMAN. The Eastern Fork.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Yes; and is it not also true that there is now a train of wagons running there to and from those mining regions; and are not the animals as liable to be frightened by those wagons as by the railroad trains?

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, no. It will readily be seen that if a railroad were constructed on the eastern side of the fork it would run right through what is called Buffalo Park, a very interesting region, where there are not only buffaloes to the number of perhaps eighty or one hundred, but elk and deer in large numbers.

I think that if Congress should decline to appropriate anything for the purpose now under consideration, it would be a disappointment to a great number of people who are by no means rich; for whenever I have been there the park has been thronged with persons from all parts of the country, North, South, East, and West, and many of them manifestly not persons of excessive wealth, for hundreds and thousands could be seen on foot.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Mr. Chairman, I will add a single word further to what I have said. If it be true, as stated by the gentleman from Indiana, that these people are swarming into the park, I ask if there would be any harm to let a few more go up by railway if they see proper to do so? I understand from the gentleman from Indiana that this railroad is regarded as obnoxious because it leads through what is known as Buffalo Park.

Now, I have been told by men who have gone through there time and again that they never saw a buffalo in that region in all their lives. It is not more than 15 or 20 miles from the Montana line; and if it be true that the railroad must be kept out of the park for fear it will disturb the buffalo, is it proper, I ask, that we should build these roads proposed here all through the park, and let travelers go up there and scare them and disturb their repose?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] offered an amendment to strike out "forty" and insert "thirty," which he withdrew on a misapprehension of a statement of the Chair.

Mr. STOCKDALE. My amendment has not been voted upon yet.

The CHAIRMAN. It has not been.

The gentleman from Alabama now renews his amendment, and the gentleman from Indiana proposes to amend the amendment by moving to insert "twenty" instead of "thirty." The gentleman from Mississippi moves to strike out the whole paragraph, which motion will come last, after these are disposed of.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not desire, Mr. Chairman, to renew my amendment, because the gentleman from Indiana moves to make the amount twenty thousand less than my proposition. I am in favor of striking out the whole thing.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana is before the committee, and is the question now to be voted upon. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out "forty" and insert "twenty," so that it will read "$20,000."

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. HOLMAN. I demand a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 91, noes 63.

Mr. WEVER. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order being made that no quorum has voted the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. WEVER and Mr. HOLMAN were appointed tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 126, noes 42.

So the amendment was adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. STOCKDADE] to strike out the entire paragraph.
